LANDON CALLS SOCIAL SECURITY ACT CRUEL HOAX ON THE WORKER

Urges Repeal of Compulsory Old Age Pension Section of New Deal Program as 'Unjust and Stupidly Drafted.'

ATTACKS METHOD OF INVESTING FUNDS

Asserts Employes or Consumers Would Bear Burden of Taxes—Proposes Pay-as-You-Go Plan Administered by States.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 26. — Gov. Alf M. Landon, in an address here tonight, assailed the New Deal's Social Security program as a cruel hoax on workers and urged a pay-as-you-go plan of old age pensions.

Of the pension act the presidential nominee said:

"It endangers the whole cause of social security in this country. In my own judgment—and I have examined it carefully—this law is unjust, unworkable, stupidly drafted and wastefully financed."

Delivering the final major address of his farm belt tour, Landon said there was every probability that cash paid in on compulsory old age insurance "will be used for current deficits and new extravagances."

"If the present compulsory insurance plan remains in force," he said, "our old people are only too apt to find the cupboard bare. . . . Daydreams do not pay pensions.

"To these—our old people, our workers struggling for better conditions, our infirm—I will not promise the moon. I promise only what I know can be performed: Economy, a living pension, and such security as can be provided by a generous people."

Landon spoke to a crowd that overflowed the 6300 seats of the city auditorium into nearby halls with loud speaking arrangements. A two-minute standing ovation greeted his arrival after a drive from his hotel through the rain.

Assails Payroll Tax.

The Republican candidate divided the security law into three parts—compulsory old age insurance, unemployment insurance and non-compulsory old age pension.

After demanding outright repeal of old age insurance and terming its payroll tax a tax on employment, Landon said that for the Federal Government to use its taxing power to compel all states immediately to enact unemployment insurance laws was unheard of and unwise.

"The Republican platform," he said, "proposes to encourage adoption by the states of honest and practical measures for meeting the problems of insurance against unemployment. . . . It does so because we have still nearly everything to learn in this field.

"With state experiments, different states trying out different plans and watching the results, we can work out a much better system than could possibly be imposed at this time from Washington."

Taking up the third part of the act, the Governor said:

"I believe that as a nation we can afford old age pensions—that in a highly industrialized country they are necessary. I believe in them as a matter of social justice. . . .

Would Overhaul Section.

"This part of the present law (pensions for the needy aged not covered by the compulsory plan) can be made to serve as the foundation of a real old age pension plan. This, the Republican party proposes to do. It proposes to overhaul this section and make of it a workable, common-sense plan — a plan to be administered by the states.

"We propose through amendments to this section to provide for every American citizen over 65 the supplementary payment necessary to give a minimum income sufficient to protect him or her from want."

The present section of the law provides for Federal matching of state pension funds up to $15 a month. The nominee said that "Frankly, I am not in a position to state with finality the total cost of this plan," but that it "will be on a pay-as-you-go basis with the result that we will know year by year just what our pensions are costing us."

Landon prescribed three princi-

U. S. BACKS DEVALUATION OF FRANC AND BUYS RUSSIA'S STERLING TO PROTECT POUND

Morgenthau Uses Stabilization Fund When Soviet State Bank Puts £1,000,000 on Market.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Serving blunt notice the United States would "go the limit" to protect its monetary agreement with Britain and France, Secretary Morgenthau today swung into action America's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund to block what he said was a Russian effort to depress the British pound.

His action constituted the first public move to enforce the "gentlemen's" agreement announced last night by France, Great Britain and the United States looking toward stabilization of their currencies.

Informed that Russia had ordered the sale early today of 1,000,000 pounds sterling "at any price," Morgenthau told a press conference he "immediately" countered with an order to buy, using $5,000,000 from the stabilization fund.

The Russian move was an unexplained development on the heels of the agreement reached by the three Powers last night for co-operation in devaluation of the franc.

The agreement provided that countries party to it should use "appropriate available resources" to prevent disturbance of international exchange which might result from the understanding that Britain and the United States would not wage a monetary war with France.

Gets Behind the Pound.

Morgenthau, in a specially called press conference, announced he was informed of the offer to sell by the Russian State Bank shortly after exchange dealings started in New York this morning. The French and English exchanges were closed.

The Treasury chief said the Russian selling knocked the pound from $5.02 to $4.91. When the Treasury bought pounds, however, the price was pushed back to $4.96.

Questioned as to whether he anticipated any more attempts to hammer down currencies of the three nations, Morgenthau said that "if there are any we are ready." Asked how far he was willing to go, he said "the limit—two billion dollars."

Although declining to reveal at exactly what price the pounds were bought, Morgenthau said it was a figure which "gives the United States Government a handsome profit."

Since Morgenthau began purchasing after the pound had fallen to $4.91, and forecast a profit, it was assumed the pound would be valued at more than that. This led to anticipation in some quarters of a ratio of around $5, which would represent an increase over the old $4.86 rate when both countries were on the gold standard.

Roosevelt Informed.

Further disclosing the circumstances back of his sudden action today, Morgenthau told newspapermen he had first talked with President Roosevelt at Hyde Park by telephone.

Morgenthau will visit President Roosevelt at Hyde Park tomorrow for a general discussion of the monetary situation.

Morgenthau said he had not consulted with the British Government before moving to protect the pound. Asked whether he had consulted the French Government, he replied he had called his financial representatives in the American Embassy at Paris after buying pounds and had been told the move received "an excellent reception in France."

Asked whether Great Britain could not have used her own stabilization fund for buying pounds, through a Bank of England purchasing order to New York, the Treasury chief replied affirmatively, but added: "We have a stabilization fund for this very purpose—to even out any sharp differences."

Morgenthau said he did not know whether the Treasury actually purchased the entire 1,000,000-pound Russian offerings, but that in any event it bought "the bulk of it."

Should Strengthen Basic Conditions of Recovery, Says Hull.

Commenting on the stabilization move, Secretary of State Hull asserted today it "should greatly strengthen the prospect of stabilization in international exchange relationships" and should result in "further strengthening the basic conditions of our domestic recovery."

Hull's statement in part follows: "The action of the treasuries of the three governments in making simultaneous and virtually identical statements of policy should greatly strengthen the prospect of stability in international exchange relationships. This should result in further strengthening the basic conditions of our domestic recovery.

"The step taken is in harmony with our reciprocity trade agreements program, as it is an indispensable part of any program for full and stable business recovery.

"Some willful critics and some

RUSSIA DENIES SELLING POUNDS WITH INTENT OF DEPRESSING THEIR VALUE

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 26.

SOVIET officials tonight denied that Russia had unloaded English pounds with the idea of breaking down their value.

There was no further explanation of the report given by authoritative quarters which apparently were unaware of any such financial negotiations.

One explanation, however, advanced by informed quarters, was that Russia had sold English pounds with an entirely different purpose in mind.

Russia, which has long enjoyed a favorable trade balance over England, has accumulated a considerable reserve of pounds sterling.

DUTCH AND SWISS ALSO TO CHANGE MONETARY POLICY

Netherlands Puts Embargo on Gold Export; Switzerland's Parliament Called for Action.

By the Associated Press.

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands, Sept. 26.—The Government of The Netherlands, which, with France and Switzerland, clung to the gold standard after other major powers had quit it, announced tonight it could no longer maintain its "present monetary policy."

The decisions of France and Switzerland to devalue their monetary units caused a change in the Dutch Government's position, an official statement said. Earlier the Government had announced The Netherlands would not change its monetary policy despite the French action.

The Bank of The Netherlands and the Government reached an agreement for an embargo on exportation of gold, effective tomorrow, it was announced after a Cabinet meeting.

Stock exchanges will be closed Monday and Tuesday.

The official declaration said: "The Government has reconsidered its monetary policy folowing measures taken by France and Switzerland. Being the only country on the gold standard, The Netherlands feels the highest pressure on the exchange and the gold reserve. Consequently it considers it impossible to maintain its present monetary policy."

Swiss Parliament to Act Tomorrow on Franc Alignment.

By the Associated Press.

BERNE, Sept. 26. — The Swiss Federal Council, after first voting today to maintain the gold standard, announced that the Government would convoke Parliament on Monday to approve a new alignment of the Swiss franc.

An official Government communique said: "After taking cognizance of the action of the Government of the French Republic in devaluating the French franc about 30 per cent, the Federal Council considers itself forced, in the interest of national economy, to an alignment of Swiss monies."

Throughout the morning, while the Council was in session, banks in Geneva continued exchange operations. They gave 100 French francs for 12 Swiss francs. The ratio yesterday was approximately 60 to 12.

WPA JOB-SELLING FOR VOTES CHARGE IN CRIMINAL CASES

Charles E. Lucas of Eldorado Springs, Mo., and J. William Farmer of Jerico Springs Accused.

DEMOCRATIC FIGHT IN SIXTH DISTRICT

Actions Involve Only Office of County Committeeman — Both Defendants Deny Charges.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

STOCKTON, Mo., Sept. 26.—The often repeated charge that the WPA in Missouri is being used as an adjunct of the Democratic party organization and within the organization to build up factional machines, that WPA jobs are traded for votes and that unless an applicant for work is a Democrat or promises to vote for Democratic candidates his application is rejected, has reached the courts of Cedar County.

Charles E. Lucas of Eldorado Springs, a well-to-do lumber dealer, without official position within the local Democratic organization but counted as a power in politics, and J. William Farmer, a Jerico Springs druggist and WPA foreman, are under arrest on charges of bribery preferred by Prosecuting Attorney Lewis B. Hoff, Republican, who alleged in informations that they promised WPA jobs in exchange for votes in the August primary. Preliminary hearings are to be held, that of Lucas in Eldorado Springs next Wednesday, and that of Farmer in Stockton Thursday.

Political Lineup in District.

Among politicians who supported Henry C. Salveter of Sedalia for the Democratic nomination for Congress against Congressman R. T. Wood of Springfield, it is said that in the Sixth Congressional District the WPA organization is wholly in Wood's control and that virtually no jobs are given unless the applicant has the approval of Wood or someone close within the Wood organization.

This is made applicable to the Cedar County situation by the further representation that the plans were laid for the election of a Democratic County Committee which would be a Wood committee, and through which applicants for WPA jobs would be handled. Lucas, a strong Wood supporter in the recent primary, is held forth in these representations as the local Democrat who would be contact man with the committee and would be its boss.

So far as Prosecutor Hoff has been able to ascertain there is no precedent in Missouri for prosecutions on felony charges of persons accused of trading jobs for votes, which is covered by a specific statute. Hoff denies with vehemence that he was actuated by political motives in starting the prosecutions.

"These cases are being handled just as any other matters are in my office," he said. "I had nothing to do with the preliminary collection of evidence and knew nothing about the charges until affidavits of persons who swore they had been offered jobs were brought to me by the persons who made the affidavits. They constituted sworn evidence of a violation of the law and I filed informations just as I would in any matter of violation of the law which had no political tinge."

Three Affidavits on File.

Hoff said the affidavits which form the basis of the prosecution of Lewis were made by Oscar Thompson and Floyd Tudor, who, he said, will testify that Lucas promised them WPA jobs if they would vote for Wood for the nomination for Congress and for E. J. Galler of Eldorado Springs for member of the Democratic County Committee. Galler was elected and has been made chairman of the committee.

In the case of Farmer, Hoff said, the affidavit was by M. C. Hutchins, formerly a successful farmer who because of the drouth and the grasshopper plague was forced to ask for WPA work. Hoff said the evidence would show that Farmer promised two jobs to the Hutchins family, which includes Hutchins' wife and daughter and the daughter's husband. Hoff said the evidence would show that the jobs were promised in consideration of the four votes of the Hutchins family for Farmer for Committeeman, for Stark for the nomination for Governor, for Wood for Congressman, for Judge Gantt for Judge of the Supreme Court and for Judge Charles L. Henson of Springfield

REBELS 5 MILES FROM TOLEDO, SET TO OPEN ATTACK

Leaders Plan to Storm City at Dawn—Planes, Tanks and Artillery Drawn Up for Battle.

AIR BOMBARDMENT OF BILBAO GOES ON

Heavy Loss of Life Inflicted, While Loyalist Mobs Demand Death of 3900 Hostages.

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.)

ON THE TOLEDO FRONT, Sept. 26.—Rebel troops under Gen. Francisco Franco tonight awaited the signal for an attack on Toledo, less than five miles away.

The disciplined and well-equipped insurgent fighting forces consolidated their positions, hard-won from Government defenders of the city.

Rebel leaders planned a dawn attack in their drive to reach comrades besieged in the Toledo Alcazar.

(The insurgent radio station at Corunna, talking by radio with Fascists in Zaragoza tonight, said the Toledo Alcazar had been occupied by rebel troops following the defeat of Government forces. At Tenerife, Canary Islands, Col. Gonzalez Peras, Fascist chief of staff there, also reported the insurgent troops had occupied Toledo.

(A more rigid censorship of news dispatches from Madrid, strict since the outbreak of the civil war, July 18, appeared to have been put into effect tonight. The London office of the Associated Press was informed seven dispatches sent from Madrid during the evening had been eliminated by the censor.)

The rebels drove their advance nnits within sight of Toledo after breaking the Government line along the banks of the Guadarrama River. Fields along the route of the advance were left strewn with bodies.

Rebel officers believed a force of some 10,000 Government militiamen opposed them in Toledo. Confident of its capture, they said their men would march on to Madrid, about 40 miles to the north, and join another column already advancing from the west along the Maqueda-Madrid highway.

The combined armies, commanders said, would be sufficient to capture Madrid and end the war before winter sets in.

The rumor spread in the insurgent ranks that the Government was dropping poisoned food to the rebels still holding out in the Alcazar.

It was believed that about 600 of the original 1700 men, women and children still were alive in the fortress.

Planes, tanks and field guns were moved up to the insurgent lines during the night. Most of the artillery units had been outdistanced by the swift rebel advance of the past week.

ALL-DAY REBEL AIR ATTACK ON BILBAO

BILBAO, Spain, Sept. 26.—Rebel aviators bombarded Bilbao today, setting fire to many buildings.

Ten planes roared over the city in a day-long attack—the second in 24 hours—apparently attempting to carry out rebel threats that the city would be destroyed unless its defenders surrendered.

The bombers dropped leaflets saying that the attack would continue until the surrender was forced. Government leaders said they would hold out to the last man.

The British consulate was damaged during an attack Friday night.

Popular indignation over the bombardment caused a huge crowd to threaten to assault two ships on which 3900 Fascist prisoners were held, one tied up at a dock at the military airport and the other near the munitions plant. The hostage vessels had been put in those positions because they were close to what were expected to be targets of rebel bombs.

Basque guards turned back the crowd which made for the vessels—the Cabo Quilletes and Altuna Mendi—and removed them to an anchorage of Las Arenas, outside Bilbao. There were rumors—which authorities refused to discuss—that 60 hostages had been executed in reprisal for the bombardments of the city.

Five Government warships were reported sighted off the Portuguese coast today, racing toward Spain's northern Bay of Biscay shore. They were reported to be the battleship Jaime I, the cruisers Cervantes

MORGAN PARTNERS PAID VIRTUALLY NO FEDERAL INCOME TAX IN 1935

$4,700,000 Realized on Collateral for Reputed $48,000,000 Loan — George Whitney Expected to Testify.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1936, by Pulitzer Publishing Co., the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. All property rights in news reserved under Federal Court decisions. Reproduction prohibited.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Partners in the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. paid virtually no income tax to the Federal Government on the profits of that great international banking firm for the year 1935. In taking a large loss through the public sale of depreciated collateral just a year ago, the Morgan firm was able, for income tax purposes, to erase almost all the profit that had been shown in that year of beginning recovery.

For many months rumors have circulated here and in Washington that Morgan partners paid no income tax for 1935. From an authoritative source in New York the Post-Dispatch has obtained confirmation of these rumors insofar as the profits from the banking business are concerned.

Certain of the partners, the Post-Dispatch has learned, were able to wipe out virtually all their income and paid only nominal sums to the Federal Government. Others, whose holdings outside the Morgan firm are more extensive, paid larger sums.

Experts at Work.

For a number of weeks experts for the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which is conducting a special inquiry into railroad finance, has been investigating the transaction by which the Morgan firm rubbed out its profits. Accountants and others have gone over every scrap of evidence in the banking citadel that stands at 23 Wall street, just across from the Sub-Treasury.

The fact that the Morgan partners paid no income tax in 1931 and 1932 was one of the most startling disclosures in Wall street investigation conducted by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee in 1933. It was shown then that Morgan partners were able to wipe out profits by a revaluation which resulted in heavy losses on securities held. Because the Morgan firm is a partnership, the company itself is not required by law to pay an income tax.

The Senate committee also disclosed in 1933 that returns prepared by experts in the Morgan Bank were approved by the Bureau of Internal Revenue with only a perfunctory inspection. Since that time, it is understood, the returns of the Morgan partners have been subjected to detailed investigation. Such a check-up, it was learned here, is soon to be made of the 1935 returns of the 17 partners, and this will include, it is reported, a thorough analysis of the loss transaction by which income taxes were virtually wiped out.

No Comment, George Whitney Says

Asked by the Post-Dispatch for a statement, George Whitney, the Morgan partner, who is now perhaps most active in the conduct of the affairs of the company, said the firm had no comment to make. Morgan himself is in Europe and it has been indicated that it will be some time before he returns. He is still suffering from an illness that occurred last summer.

At any rate, he does not expect to be in America when Senator Wheeler's Interstate Commerce Committee begins public hearings into railroad high finance, including the relationship between the

SNOW IN FOUR WESTERN STATES HAMPERS TRAFFIC

First Fall of Season with Temperatures Dropping Below Zero in Montana, Utah and Wyoming.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 26.—The first snow of the season fell in four Western States today, ranging from light flurries in some sections to eight inches at Rock Springs, Wyo. Wind, dust and cold rains accompanied the sudden change in weather. Temperatures fell as much as 45 degrees, going below zero levels in some places in Montana, Utah and Wyoming and in Yellowstone National Park.

At Cheyenne, Wyo., the temperature fell to 27 degrees above zero after a high yesterday of 82 degrees. Airlines at Cheyenne reported planes operating on schedule east and west, but Wyoming northbound planes were held there and at Casper.

At Rock Springs, Wyo., a heavy blizzard stopped highway traffic and about 30 automobiles were stalled in eight inches of snow and mud covering a stretch of unsurfaced highway. Highway traffic was tied up in other parts of Wyoming and in Colorado.

TRACE FOUND OF PARTY LOST IN ARCTIC IN 1912

Soviet Expedition Discovers Belongings of Rusanoff and Men Who Perished.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 26.—Traces of an Arctic expedition which perished in 1912 were said today to have been found in the Kara Sea. The Russian hydrographic boat Toros reported to the All-Union Artict Institute, it had discovered, on a remote island, traces of the lost expedition of V. A. Rusanoff.

The crew of the Toros said they found clothing, cartridges and small personal belongings, which have been sent to Moscow for identification. The Toros is trying to reach the island where it is thought Rusanoff's men perished.

Farther west above the Arctic Circle, the icebreaker, Sadko, was trying to reach Murmansk after being damaged while attempting to assist the Russian icebreaker Rusanoff, trapped in the ice off Randolph Island Sept. 9, while scientists and members of its crew were walking across an ice floe carrying supplies for the establishment of the northernmost camp in the world.

The Sadko, which had sailed July 24 with a scientific expedition in search of a "land of high mountains," went to the rescue and stood by until the Rusanoff broke free Sept. 21. The Sadko was squeezed in the ice and damaged. The propeller and the rudder frame were affected and the crew was said to be having difficulty in steering.

A diver made temporary repairs and the damage was found to be so serious that the all-Union Arctic Institute ordered the ship immediately to make for the winter port of Murmansk.

Meanwhile, the Rusanoff is trying to get its expedition's supplies ashore on Randolph Island for the winter.

FORTY-HOUR WEEK LAW PUT IN EFFECT IN FRENCH MINES

Effort Made to Avert More "Folded Arms" Strikes; Boatmen in Walkout.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—The Government decreed application of the 40-hour week law for miners today as an effort to end "folded arms" strikes.

Similar decrees affecting the builders, metal and textile employes were predicted as the next step.

Boatmen on the Seine struck today, tying up most of the river's traffic and causing anxiety over whether Paris' food supplies might not be affected.

FRANC DEVALUING IN FRANCE UP FOR ACTION TOMORROW BY PARLIAMENT

Premier Blum Expected to Muster Majority to Pass Measure to Reduce Gold Value of Monetary Unit One-Third.

CABINET DRAFTS COROLLARY BILLS

Protective Legislation for Consumer — Extra Police Precautions Against Street Disturbances Ordered by Ministers.

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.)

PARIS, Sept. 26.—The concensus of members of the French Parliament, assembling here tonight, was that Premier Leon Blum would muster a majority Monday sufficient to insure passage of measures for the devaluation of the franc. The Premier gave public assurance that laws would be enacted immediately to protect the purchasing power of the consumer against a cheapened currency.

The standard of living for the average French family, devaluationists asserted, would be benefited by: (1) Stoppage of gold reserve exports; (2) Increase of money in circulation; (3) Stimulation of business by an expanded French share in world trade.

Conditional Communist Support.

Premier Blum declared that the French financial program would aid international peace and would not increase the cost of living in France.

"Certain preventive measures" protecting the consumer against impaired buying power, the Premier said, "would be undertaken."

The monetary program, he said, "was not brusquely imposed," but was the result of "deliberate initiative started last June which I hope will lead to international pacification."

Those favoring devaluation of the franc were assured today of conditional support from the French Communists, previously opponents of a cheapened currency. Political observers reported the Communist support was contingent upon compensations for Government employes, pensioners, and others.

Indications were that a proposal to reduce by one-third the present gold content of the franc, would be offered, but there was no official declaration of the degree of devaluation proposed.

Plans for extra precautions against any street disturbances throughout the nation were drawn by Minister of Defense Edouard Daladier and Minister of the Interior Roger Salengro during a night conference with police executives.

Salengro telegraphed all prefects in France and Algeria that disturbances would be "intolerable" at the present time and ordering them to make "exemplary arrests" if necessary.

Three-Power Agreement.

The devaluation proposal of the French Cabinet received support yesterday of the United States and Great Britain and today of Belgium. The Swiss Federal Council announced it would convoke Parliament Monday to approve a new alignment of the Swiss franc, following French devaluation.

Yesterday's three-Power accord, which was termed by American Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., "a gentleman's agreement," in effect pledged the English-speaking nations not to manipulate their money to the disadvantage of the French when the franc is devalued.

In Washington today Morgenthau said the United States used $5,000,000 of its stabilization fund to halt what he charged was a Russian state bank move to depress the British pound in the market.

Reputed Cabinet Proposals.

A meeting of the Council of Ministers today is understood to have drafted the following monetary bills:

1. To call in all gold.
2. To increase salaries equal to decreased buying power.
3. To protect short-term bondholders.
4. To adjust the debts in public organizations.
5. To revise customs provisions.

With these proposals said to be ready for parliamentary consideration, devaluationists suggested this program:

1. Reduction of the 65.5 milligram gold content of the franc to between 49 and 43 milligrams—a devaluation of between 24 and 33 per cent. The last quotation of the French franc before the Foreign Exchange market was closed was 6.58⅜ cents. The United States dollar thus bought slightly more than 15 francs. Under the proposal devaluation a United States dollar would buy 20 francs.

2. A 10,000,000,000 franc stabilization fund to insure maintenance of the new value of the franc.

The emergency session of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate was called for 9 a. m. Monday. Tomorrow the Finance Committee of the Chamber of Deputies will take up the measures proposed by the Cabinet.

Foreign Bankers in Germany Say Mark Adjustment Is Inevitable.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—Germany can afford to sit tight and watch the developments arising from the proposed devaluation of the French franc, the German press concluded today. Foreign banking circles, however, widely expressed the opinion that adjustment of the mark to the franc, the pound and the dollar is made inevitable by the French Cabinet's decision.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, German Minister of Economics and president of the Reichsbank, evaded direct questions concerning the effect of franc devaluation on German policy with the statement: "I am not yet officially informed about devaluation."

Quick Defense of Pound Pleases British Financial Circles.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Pleased by Secretary Henry Morgenthau's quick defense of the pound sterling, British financial circles, nevertheless, were puzzled tonight by the alleged attempt by the Russian State Bank to sell 1,000,000 pounds "at any price."

Informed financial sources said the action of the United States Secretary of the Treasury, in using the American stabilization fund to block the asserted Russian move, was the first evidence of the effectiveness of the new tri-power agreement to protect the currencies of the United States, England and France.

Italy to Watch Results Before Taking Any Monetary Action.

ROME, Sept. 26.—A false alarm tonight started conjecture that the Italian cabinet would discuss on Tuesday the attitude to be assumed regarding the lira following French action on the franc.

A communique was issued by Stefani (official Italian news agency) stating that the cabinet had been summoned to meet on Tuesday. The communique then was annulled.

The cabinet will meet Oct. 10 as regularly scheduled.

Italy was stated authoritatively to be prepared to take whatever measures must be necessary to prevent repercussions here in the wake of the French proposal.

Belgium Backs Move as One Fostering Peace.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 26.—The Belgian Government today backed the monetary accord among the United States, Great Britain and France with its full approval and support.

In a note to the three countries, the Government joined the agreement which it said would foster peace and establish economic restoration on a firm foundation.

The Government added that the Belgian monetary situation was not affected by the move, since the National Bank gold reserve was prepared for eventual withdrawal of French gold received in recent months.

(The Belgian belga was devaluated by 28 per cent in the spring of 1935.)

Poland Will Not Devaluate Currency, Finance Minister Says.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, Sept. 26. — Eugene Kwiatkowski, Polish Minister of Finance, today announced that Poland would not devaluate her currency despite France's action. He asserted Poland stood ready to join the international monetary accord announced last night among the United States, Great Britain and France.

Warsaw business and financial quarters, however, were nervous and all banks, including the Bank of Poland, refused to buy or sell any foreign exchange.

The finance minister said Poland possessed sufficient gold to maintain the present parity of the zloty, while the amount of French francs here is too small to cause important loss.

U. S. USES ITS STABILIZING FUND TO PROTECT POUND

well-meaning persons not acquainted with the vast difficulties to be overcome both with respect to exchange stability and the reduction of excessive trade barriers in order to restore the normal volume of international trade, have indulged in carping but wholly unfounded criticism of our present reciprocity trade policy upon the theory that it has not given entire trade relief overnight.

"The truth is that this program has thus far functioned far more effectively than its most optimistic friends had dared to hope.

"Let me repeat that it is tragical and outrageous just as these extremely difficult stages toward national and international economic rehabilitation are being experienced that candidates for high office, without indicating any other practical alternative course, endeavor to defeat this entire movement."

Hamilton's Comment on Morgenthau and the Franc.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—John D. M. Hamilton, national chairman of the Republican party, said today the Roosevelt administration's announcement yesterday that it would co-operate with France in its plan to devaluate the franc had political implications.

"A political broadside was issued by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr.," Hamilton's statement said, "in which he does not confine himself to a mere announcement of co-operation with France, but takes advantage of the French monetary crisis to announce a change of policy on the part of the administration in order to forestall further Republican criticism of the short-sighted policy hitherto pursued by the administration."

"I do not question the wisdom of the assistance given the French nation in this period of grave difficulty," Hamilton added. "As stated by Gov. Alf M. Landon in his Portland (Me.) speech, in which he pointed out the serious consequences of the torpedoing of the London economic conference by President Roosevelt in 1933, co-operation with other nations in the economic field is essential to both prosperity and peace.

"However, we have but to contrast Mr. Morgenthau's statement with the telegram of President Roosevelt to the economic conference to see what a complete somersault the administration has made. But it is three years too late.

"Mr. Morgenthau says: 'The Government of the United States welcomes this opportunity to reaffirm its purpose to continue the policy which it has pursued in the course of recent years, one constant object of which is to maintain the greatest possible equilibrium in the system of international exchange and to avoid to the utmost extent the creation of any disturbance of that system by American monetary action.'

"In his telegram to the London economic conference in 1933, President Roosevelt said: 'The world will not long be lulled by the specious fallacy of achieving a temporary and probably an artificial stability in foreign exchange on the part of a few large countries only.'

"Referring to Mr. Morgenthau's reference to any disturbance in the monetary field by American monetary action, it would be unkind to mention the effect of our silver policy upon monetary conditions in China and other silver countries, just as it would be unkind to quote that part of President Roosevelt's telegram in which he insists upon the necessity of balanced budgets."

NEW FRANC PLAN PUTS REPUBLICANS OUT ON A LIMB

Deprives Landon of Campaign Argument on Which His Party Had Heavily Relied.

CANDIDATE TIED UP BY PLATFORM

Morgenthau's Satisfaction With Monetary Entente Thought to Express Roosevelt View.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—American participation in the economic and monetary entente with France and Great Britain for stabilization of the devalued dollar, franc and pound deprives the Republicans, particularly Governor Alf M. Landon, of a campaign argument on which they had heavily relied. The sudden public announcements in Washington, Paris and London last night and early this morning also demonstrated that President Roosevelt, in the writing of the Democratic platform, probably had access to information last June not available to the writers of the Republican currency plank.

The developments yesterday and today leave the Republicans out on a limb, from which, because of delicate international complications, they will have difficulty in descending. The satisfaction of the Democrats with the "gentlemen's agreement" with France and Great Britain was expressed by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau last night when he said:

"This is something we have been looking forward to for three and a half years. I have said that we would not stand in the way when the world was ready for stabilization."

When Morgenthau makes a statement of this sort, it is certain that he is also speaking for President Roosevelt.

Answer to Landon Charges.

Although Secretary Morgenthau declined to answer last night whether the agreement was "de facto stabilization," that is, a pegging of the dollar, franc and pound at definite values without the benefit of a treaty or on a specific gold content, his satisfaction in making the announcement indicated that the Democrats now believe that they have the answer to charges by Governor Landon, former Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, and James P. Warburg that President Roosevelt retarded American recovery when he torpedoed the London economic conference in the summer of 1933, after the French sought an international stabilization agreement for gold basis currency.

Failure of the French Parliament to ratify the agreement would, of course, play into the hands of the Republicans, who could then point to their platform. But, if the Parliament enacts the monetary laws proposed by the French treasury, the following currency planks in the Republican platform might be subject to modification:

"We oppose further devaluation of the dollar.

"We will restore to the Congress the authority lodged with it by the Constitution to coin money and regulate the value thereof by repealing all laws delegating this authority to the Executive.

"We will co-operate with other countries toward stabilization of currencies as soon as we can do so with due regard for our national interests and as soon as other nations have sufficient stability to justify such action."

Gov. Landon, in his telegram to the Cleveland convention, seemingly went further than the platform. His addendum, however, was general in phraseology and included a "fire-escape" for use if anyone tried to pin him down to specific terms.

"The convention advocates," he telegraphed, 'a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards.' I agree that the 'first requisite to a sound and stable currency is a balanced budget.' The second requisite, as I view it, is a currency expressed in terms of gold and convertible into gold.

"I recognize, however, that the second requisite must not be made operative until and unless it can be done without penalizing our domestic economy and without injury to our producers of agricultural products and other raw materials."

The Democratic Plank.

In contrast to the definite Republican plank and Landon's general indorsement of a gold standard, if, as and when, the Democratic plank was purposely made vague. It says:

"We approve the objective of a permanently sound currency so stabilized as to prevent the former wide fluctuations in value which injured in turn producers, debtors and property owners on the one hand, and wage earners and creditors on the other, a currency which will permit full utilization of the country's resources. We assert that today we have the soundest currency in the world."

The plank, which would permit further experimentation with a "commodity dollar," also gives the New Deal a free hand to negotiate stabilization agreements with other nations unhampered by pledges against further devaluation or for a return to a convertible gold standard. The French agreement, tentative and conditional as it is, falls easily within its vague boundaries, if it has any boundaries.

The Republicans, however, have tied themselves up, and by the concluding paragraph of their platform, they have also tied up their presidential and vice-presidential candidate. The final paragraph says that acceptance of the Republican nomination carries with it, "As a matter of private honor and public faith, an undertaking by each to be true to the principles and program herein set forth."

The Stabilization Fund.

On Jan. 30 next the President's power to devalue the dollar down to 50 per cent of its old value will expire unless renewed by Congress. Likewise the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund becomes inoperative on that date unless extended. Unless a "de jure" stabilization agreement with Great Britain and France, and perhaps other countries, is negotiated before that time, the treasury will ask for the extension of both, to meet possible use of the British and French stabilization funds. Morgenthau said last night that he would recommend continuation of the stabilization fund.

The French now propose to devalue their franc from 30 to 33 per cent and American and British treasury officials agreed in secret negotiations to this level. Secretary Morgenthau, however, was careful, in his remarks to newspaper men last night, to point out that "if the agreement affects the internal prosperity of the United States, we will take the necessary steps to correct the situation. Other governments have the same privilege.

Although Morgenthau emphasized that he did not expect further devaluation of the dollar, the tentative form leaves doubt as to what other nations might do. Thus the concluding paragraph of the formal statement issued a covert warning to other nations against attempts to obtain "unreasonable competitive exchange advantages." The American weapons to meet such attempts would be the stabilization fund and the power of the executive to use his authority to cut down the value of the American dollar from the present 59 per cent of the old dollar to the 50 per cent permitted under thet existing law.

With international finances still in a chaotic condition, despite the present agreement, the Republicans will be hard pressed for arguments to show why the President should not be permitted to meet other nations on equal terms.

Arguments Weakened.

The proposed plans of the Popular Front government of France to follow almost exactly the steps taken by the New Deal in going off the gold standard also weakens Republican arguments that Roosevelt bungled the job of handling the gold crisis. Former Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, a bitter critic of the New Deal, consistently insisted that American gold stocks made it unnecessary for the United States to go off the gold standard and to devalue the dollar. France, with its reserve of 52,000,000,000 francs, has more than a 50 per cent coverage of its currency and a legal requirement of only 35 per cent, yet, disregarding the pledges of Premier Blum's government, she is "going off gold."

The Republicans have one consolation. One of the reasons for France abandoning the gold standard and devaluing the franc is a long string of treasury deficits. Inflation has resulted. The Republican argument will be that the United States, with its deficits, is headed the same way.

Campaign Sidelights

Senate Won't Seem Like Same Place With Both Couzens and Norris Gone; One Is Out and Other Is Likely to Be.

By Paul Y. Anderson,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.

A SENATE with both Norris and Couzens missing will hardly seem official, but that is what the Ides of January may bring. Couzens is already out, and reports from Nebraska now tend to indicate that Norris will follow him in November. For years they have towered above the "cave of the winds" as independent pillars of thought and action, and the old place will never be the same without them.

Strangely alike in some respects are the cases of the millionaire manufacturer, Couzens, and the poor country lawyer, Norris, and both are passing strange in the bedlam world of politics. It would be difficult to name two Senators who will be so deeply missed by their own colleagues. It would be impossible to name two who have harbored so little desire to remain.

Both are nominally Republicans. Couzens was entreated by the Roosevelt administration to take the Democratic nomination. Instead, he elected to commit political harakiri by entering the Republican primary while announcing that he would support the Democratic President. Norris could have had renomination on either ticket for not even the asking—he had only to say he would accept. He chose the well nigh hopeless course of running as an independent. Such phenomena are seldom observed in politics, where your average office-holder cares no more for re-election than for both arms, both legs and the upper reaches of his gastro-intestinal tract.

Norris Pessimistic About Public Service.

NORRIS has been eager to quit public life for more than 12 years. Early in 1924 he gave an interview in which he declared he had been "bucking the game—the game of trying to help the common people"—for more than 20 years, and was convinced he could not beat it. The power of intrenched interests and the omnipresent red herring of partisan politics, he said, were too much for him. He was sick, tired and disgusted, and he intended to retire. It was a dramatic interview. I remember well, because I was the humble reporter to whom he gave it.

Thousands of letters poured in, begging him to run again. They came literally from every State in the Union. Newspapers representing diverse shades of political opinion urged him to reconsider. One periodical suggested a mass demonstration on the Capitol plaza, to impress him with the public insistence. Senators of both parties, some with tears in their eyes, implored him not to depart. He wouldn't budge an inch from his decision. He is a sensitive man, with a tendency toward melancholy, and the experiences which he underwent in consequence of having opposed our entrance into the war among other things, had left deep marks on him.

"I've gone through hell here," I heard him groan. "I've suffered enough for one lifetime. Nobody has a right to ask me to endure any more. I've done my best, and it wasn't good enough. As a public servant, I'm a failure. I only have a few years left, and all I'm asking is to be allowed to spend them in peace. I'm entitled to that much—anyone is."

Refusal Once Sent but Stopped by Friend.

THE last day but one on which nominating petitions could be filed arrived. On that day Norris received a telegram from his life-long friend and political ally, Frank Harrison, stating that petitions containing many times the number of names required to place him in nomination had been completed, and would be filed at Lincoln the following morning unless positive instructions to the contrary were received.

It was then late in the afternoon. A friend happened into the office, and learned from the Senator's secretary what was happening. At that moment Norris, secluded in his private office, was composing a message forbidding Harrison to file the petitions. He would trust none of his office help to send it. Most of them were in tears—and not entirely because of their jobs, either.

The stubborn old insurgent had ordered that the messenger boy be sent into his office, for two reasons—he was determined to make sure the telegram got off, and he intended to pay for it, not charge it to the Government. The boy arrived, received the message and the money, and was on his way out of the Senate Office Building before he was overtaken by the friend who had happened in. Result: The telegram was never sent, and the nominating petitions were filed the next morning.

Furious, He Tried to Lose, but Couldn't.

NORRIS was furious when he heard it. He accused the innocent and bewildered Harrison of betraying a friendship of a lifetime. He announced that he would not stir a foot out of Washington during the primary campaign; that any of his clerks who expended so much as a two-cent stamp to further his nomination would be discharged, and that no true friend of his would lift a finger in his behalf. The opposing candidate was a popular Republican Congressman, who lost no time in stumping Nebraska.

Norris was relieved, but he took no chances—or so he thought. Three days before the Nebraska primary, he summoned Washington correspondents and through them issued one of the strangest appeals ever uttered by a candidate on the eve of election—an appeal to his constituents to vote for his opponent. I was present, and I never heard anything quite like it.

Alas for those who seek to fathom the psychology of the American electorate! Norris was renominated by something approaching acclamation. Never before has he carried either Omaha or Lincoln. Now he carried both. No man could fail to be gratified by such a demonstration. Norris, always emotional, was profoundly stirred. He could not resist further. He consented to campaign actively for the general election and was swept back into office by the greatest majority of his career.

A Battler for Lost Causes That Won Out.

FOR years he had waged a stubborn but seemingly hopeless battle to keep Muscle Shoals in the possession of the Government, but he had abandoned hope. He had blocked the effort of Henry Ford and the fertilizer manufacturers to acquire it, but the advance of the power companies appeared irresistible. Time and again—six or seven—the Senate had adopted his proposal to submit a constitutional amendment abolishing the lame duck session of Congress, and always the Old Guard leaders had stifled it in the House—once by the device of having a committee chairman keep it in his pocket for several months. Norris was resigned to failure on that score.

But when fortune elected at long last to smile on his enterprises, her smile was dazzling. Muscle Shoals was not only retained but became a nucleus for the vast TVA system. Norris Dam was built, and nearby, the model town of Norris. The lame duck amendment sped through Congress, and was ratified by the states in record time. The Senator visited Norris. He climbed over the dam, inspecting it with parental pride and godfatherly affection. The engineers still talk about it. He went boating on Norris Lake, helped himself in the Norris cafeteria, and drove a power mower around the lawn of Norris town recreation hall. They still tell about that, too. When he returned to Washington he looked 10 years younger.

"It's the most wonderful place in the world," he said simply, if not restrainedly.

Ever a Hard Worker, at 75 He Is Tired.

HOWEVER, time has its own designs, and Norris is 75. He really is tired. He has never spared his strength—doesn't know how to loaf on the job. Once, in a feeble attempt to be ironical, I asked him whether he spent his Sundays reading reports of the Ontario Hydro-electric System. "How did you guess that?" he asked in surprise.

On the edge of a lake in Wisconsin he has a small cottage—built it himself with timbers salvaged from an abandoned dock. He is convinced to his own satisfaction that there is where he wishes to spend the remainder of his days.

The accepted impression is that he finally consented to enter the campaign for the purpose of aiding Roosevelt. That undoubtedly had something to do with his belated decision, although it would appear he could have served the same purpose more effectively by taking the Democratic nomination. But there is more in it than his devotion to Roosevelt or any of Roosevelt's policies. Norris abhors the evils of partisanship. He despises the docile hacks of both parties. He never submitted to party whip.

"I hope the day will come," he once said, "when so many outstanding public men will choose to go down to defeat rather than wear the party label that people will become disgusted with partisanship and partisan government, and begin to elect men because of what they are and what they stand for. And since I feel that way, I ought to be the one to break the ice. Maybe I will."

REBELS 5 MILES FROM TOLEDO, SET TO OPEN ATTACK

and Libertad and two destroyers. Three Government submarines and one gunboat already are based at Bilbao. With the arrival of the main fleet they are expected to try to lift the rebels' blockade here and at Santander.

Firemen fought fires ignited by the bombers and dragged from the flaming wreckage the bodies of the dead. Militiamen counted 126 dead in yesterday's attack.

There were many more bodies in the wreckage, they said, and today's renewal of the bombardment added to the toll.

Government Attacks Advancing Rebels by Land and Air.

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.)

MADRID, Sept. 26.—The government launched an air and land attack against rebels marching toward Toledo today and said it had annihilated one Moorish column and captured huge quantities of war materials.

Artillery and gas masks were seized, the government said, and "the enemy is being forced back slowly but surely."

An artillery squadron and government aerial bombers poured heavy fire into Bargas on the north side of the Tagus River, five miles west of Toledo.

Infantry attacked from three sides in an effort to force the enemy to retreat westward, toward their Talavera base. The government armies continued shelling Maqueda and Torrijos along the highway toward Toledo.

Rebel defenders of the Alcazar meanwhile resisted a new attempt to storm that battered fortress, hoping that aid would reach them soon. They continued to exchange machine gun and rifle fire with the attackers.

DISTRESSING SCENES IN SPANISH VILLAGES

Families Bereaved and Made Homeless; Infants Christened Amid Ruins.

By JOHN T. WHITAKER.
(Copyright, 1936.)

SANTA OLALLA, Spain, Sept. 24.—After fleeing from the battle in which Gen. Francisco Franco's Fascists troops wrested the little town of Santa Olalla from the loyalist defenders three days ago, the civilian inhabitants who for five days had been hiding in the surrounding fields returned today to see what had been left of their homes. They discovered hardly anything left of the homes, already looted during the Loyalist occupation.

Life has resumed in this valley of death. Children are born with their fathers absent, and the crops flourish with no one to harvest them. Two infants were baptised here this morning in a house which is virtually nothing but roofless walls. The priest was a grinning boy, who wore a sweater instead of a cassock and kept his hands on an automatic pistol and a gas mask instead of a crucifix.

Soldiers as Godfathers.

While the Chaplain of Maj. Antonion Castejon's column mumbled Latin phrases, two unshaven soldiers stood by as godfathers, and mothers hushed their crying babies.

The priest, using a wash basin and wine bottle, touched the water to their heads and christened them Daniel and Laidor. The babies wailed, but the smiling mothers were no longer threatened with unchristened children and hell. This threat has been real in the peasants' notion of hell, for since the birth of the infants the mothers have not been out of the sound of the artillery or safe from bombs.

I am writing this in the patio of the home of the most substantial citizen of the town, whose house miraculously escaped shelling or bombing. However, it is bare of furniture and reeks with filth.

Five minutes ago two peasant women came to the door asking if anyone had seen a red pig. The lady of the house was sympathetic and patient, and the women began to weep. Suddenly the man of the house rushed out, tired from hiding in olive trees, and drove the women away. He screamed:

"You have lost a pig? Well, I have lost a son. You look for the pig and I'll look for the son."

Taken by Loyalists.

The family is grief-stricken. Their son was a druggist, and the loyalists took him and 14 other young men of the town.

"Did the Fascists rescue him when they took the town?" I asked the father.

"Did the Governmen troops kill him or have they taken him off to Madrid?" he replied. "He was a fine boy and he cared nothing whatever about politics."

The father went out once more to search the ruins for his boy, while the mother tried to clean the house. This goes on under enemy bombing.

Two girls played in the patio—children too young to know what death means.

"They kill you, they kill you!" they cry on the approach of the planes, as they run to the grown-ups in the doorways.

And while the children laugh, the town crier calls on all the men to go out and bury the dead.

GENERAL FLIGHT OF GHOST VOTERS IN REGISTRATION

Decreases Shown in Less Than Fifth of Precincts, but These Had 46 Pct. of Phantoms.

WARDS LOSING ARE 3, 4, 5, 6 AND 18

Election Board Announces Six Poll Officials Charged With Breaking Rules Have Resigned.

Comparison of the new registration, precinct by precinct, with the registration as it appeared in June, and with the number of persons not found in each precinct in the recanvass just before the August primary election, indicates that many "ghost" voters who were on the books in June have vanished from the scene.

Although the new registration of 429,847 represents an increase of 42,602 as compared with the registration of four years ago, and an increase of 35,073 as compared with the June registration, wards and the precincts which were packed with phantom voters in June have fewer voters registered now than then.

Elsewhere in this edition are tables showing for each precinct its registration in June, the number not found in the recanvass, the net registration before the August primary, and the current registration.

All but 130 of the 669 precincts which existed in August—one new precinct has been created in the Twenty-fourth Ward since then—show a larger registration now than in June. The 130 which have fewer registered now than then were precincts in which 21,587 registrations were marked "not found" in the recanvass. These precincts, less than one-fifth of the total, contributed more than 46 per cent of the phantom registrations.

Decrease in River Wards.

Four downtown river wards, the Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth, and the Eighteenth Ward, which is immediately west of the Third, were the only wards which showed decreases. These were wards, it will be recalled, in which the number of registered persons not found was exceptionally large.

Election clerks completed their canvass of the new registration last night, but the canvass was not expected to affect the total registration substantially. A tabulation compiled last night after reports had been received from 582 of the 670 precincts showed that clerks had questioned a total of 2811 registrations, an average of 4.8 to a precinct. If this ratio remains constant through the remaining 88 precincts the total of registrations questioned would be 3216. Four years ago 2358 registrations were questioned in the canvass, but only 701 names were finally stricken from the rolls. The others whose registrations were questioned satisfied the Election Board that they were qualified voters.

The Election Board office will be open today to receive the reports of clerks who had not reported when the office closed last night.

The largest number of registrations questioned in the reports yesterday was the Nineteenth Ward, with a total of 344 in 17 of 19 precincts reporting. Two downtown river wards were next, the Fifth, with 300 questioned registrations in the ward's 13 precincts, and the Fourth, with 218 in the ward's 15 precincts.

Six Precinct Officials Out.

The Election Board last night announced the resignations of six precinct officials charged with various infractions of board rules in the conduct of the registration and canvass. The registration was conducted by the judges and the canvass by the clerks.

Those who resigned were Robert Hughes, 4128 West Lexington avenue, Democratic clerk, Twenty-first Ward, Sixteenth Precinct; William L. Altman, 3635 Cote Brillante avenue, Republican judge, and Edward Hart, 4054 Kennerly avenue, Democratic judge, Twentieth Ward, Second Precinct; Wayne Moore, 1446 Hogan street, Democratic judge, Fourth Ward, Fourth Precinct; Mrs. Mae E. Winter, 4862 Easton avenue, Democratic judge, Twenty-sixth Ward, Twenty-fourth Precinct, and Jerry Bubela, 1717 South Fourteenth street, Democratic clerk, Eighth Ward, Ninth Precinct.

The board also announced the dismissal of Miss Maude Hamilton and Herman Novack, both Republican office clerks. As in the case of other members of the office staff who have been dismissed since the appointment of the new board, no reasons for the dismissals were given.

Results by Wards.

The First Ward as a whole, showed an increase of 1888 in registration, when the June figures are compared with those of September, but there were three precincts, the Eighth, Ninth and Tenth, where there was a decrease. As expected these were precincts where there was a heavy proportion of "not founds" in the recanvass.

In the Second Ward, the September registration was 642 greater than that of June, but there were four precints, the Fourth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth and Twentieth, where the September registration was less than June's.

In th Third Ward, home ward of State Senator Joseph Brogan, one of the wards with a bad "not found" record, 11 of the 18 precincts showed decreases in registration from June to September, and the ward as a whole had a decrease of 183. The precincts in which declines occurred were the Second, Third, Fifth, Sixth Seventh, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Fourteenth, Fifteenth and Sixteenth.

The contrast really becomes gaping when Jimmy Miller's Fourth Ward is reached. There 13 of the 15 precincts show decreases, and registration in the ward as a whole fell off from 13,671 in June to 10,658 in September. Miller's ward led all the rest, it will be recalled, in the number of persons reported not found in the recanvass-4729. Only the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Precincts showed increases.

Senator Kinney's Ward.

State Senator Mike Kinney's Fifth Ward, only a shade behind Miller's in the number of "not founds," which was 4657, shows up in September with a registration of 9029, or 4372 less than it had in June. Every one of the 13 precincts in this ward has a smaller registration in September than it had in June.

In the Sixth Ward, another downtown river ward, the September registration of 11,021 represents a decrease of 552. Increases in 11 precincts were offset by decreases in four, the First, Second, Third and Sixth, which contributed more than half of the 2340 "not found" registrations reported for the ward.

There is an increase of 747 in the registration of the Seventh Ward, but six precincts, the First, Third, Fourth, Eighth, Ninth and Eleventh, show decreases. Here, again, these were precincts which the recanvass showed to be packed with phantom voters in the June registration.

The Eighth Ward shows an increase of 1255 in its registration, with only three precincts, the First, Second and Fifth, having a smaller registration in September than in June.

All 17 precincts in the Ninth Ward show increases, and the total registration for the ward of 10,365 in September is 1710 larger than the June figure.

Increase in Tenth.

The Tenth Ward has but one precinct with a smaller registration in September than in June—the Second, where the number of "not founds" was 119, four times the average for the ward. The Tenth Ward as a whole has an increase of 1165.

Registration in the Eleventh Ward, which had fewer "not founds" than any other, showed an increase of 2039, each of the 23 precincts having a larger registration in September than in June.

The Twelfth Ward has an increase of 1368, with only three of the 26 precincts showing smaller registrations in September than in June. These three precincts are the Fifth, which had a larger number of "not founds" than any other in the ward, the Twentieth and the Twenty-sixth.

In the Thirteenth Ward there is an increase of 4105 in the September registration, but five precincts, the Twenty-third, Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fifth, Twenty-sixth, and Thirty-first, show decreases.

Every precinct in the Fourteenth Ward shares in its increased registration, 1576 larger in September than in June.

Again in the Fifteenth Ward, every precinct shows an increase, and the total is 2698 larger in September than in June.

Sixteenth Ward Figures.

Eight of the Sixteenth Ward's 21 precincts show decreases, but the Ward as a whole has a gain of 381. The precincts which have a smaller registration now than they had in June are the First, Third, Fourth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, and Twelfth, all precincts which reported an unusually large number of "not founds" in the June registration.

In the Seventeenth Ward only the Eighth Precinct shows a decrease, The ward as a whole has a registration 2306 larger than it was in June.

Nine of the Eighteenth Ward's 17 precincts show decreases, and the ward as a whole lost 698 from its June registration. Decreases occurred in the First, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Eighth, Tenth, Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Precincts.

An increase of 1460 appears in the Nineteenth Ward, but there were five precincts—the Second, Seventh, Ninth, Fifteenth and Nineteenth, which had decreases. There were precincts where there was a heavy proportion of "not founds."

A negligible increase in registration occurred in the Twentieth Ward, 11 of the 23 precincts showing decreases. These were the First, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fifteenth.

The Twenty-first Ward, too, had an inconsequential increase in registration, and in nine of its 21 precincts the September total was less than that of June. These precincts were the First, Third, Fourth, Tenth, Eleventh, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth and Sixteenth.

Nine of the 35 precincts in the Twenty-second Ward show decreases, but the ward as a whole has an increase of 1528. The precincts with decreases are the Second, Third, Fourth, Sixth, Twelfth, Fifteenth, Twenty-third, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-ninth.

Only two of the twenty-third Ward's 19 precincts show decreases, and the increase for the ward as a whole is 2046. The two precincts where the September registration is less than that of June are the Fourth, which had the largest number of "not founds," and the Sixteenth.

Twenty-Fourth Ward Increase.

In the Twenty-fourth Ward there is an increase of 3545 in the September registration as compared with June, but there are four precincts where the September registration is less. In addition there are two precincts with smaller registration now than in June, but in these cases precinct boundaries have been changed so that they include less territory than formerly. Those with unchanged boundaries which have a smaller registration in September than in June are the Twentieth (formerly the Nineteenth), Twenty-first (formerly Twentieth), Thirty-second (formerly Thirty-first) and Forty-fourth (formerly Forty-third).

The Twenty-fifth Ward shows an increase of 4345, in which every precinct shares.

Each of the Twenty-sixth Ward's precincts contributes to its gain of 3100 in registration.

There are six precincts in the Twenty-seventh Ward with a smaller registration in September than in June, but the ward, as a whole, has a gain of 2297. The precincts which declined are the Second, Fifth, Tenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-second and Twenty-fifth.

In the Twenty-eighth Ward only one precinct, the Sixth, which had the largest number of "not founds," failed to show a gain. For the ward, as a whole, the September registration was 3578 larger than that of June.

On Trial for Killing Wife's Admirer

LAWYER IN BABY HOAX CASE PROBABLY TO BE TRIED HERE

Wilfred Jones, Who Got Venue Change, Thinks He Can Get Fair Trial in St. Louis.

The trial of Attorney Wilfred Jones on a charge of perjury in the testimony he gave in the Muench baby hoax hearing last year in the St. Louis Court of Appeals probably will be held in St. Louis as a result of a stipulation filed by Jones yesterday in the Court of Common Pleas at Hannibal.

The case was transferred from St. Louis to the Hannibal court on a change of venue after Jones had charged that he could not get a fair trial in St. Louis. It had been set for trial at Hannibal tomorrow.

In the stipulation, filed at Hannibal, with Judge E. L. Alford, Jones stated that he had found that the inhabitants of St. Louis are not now biased and prejudiced against him and that it would be more "convenient and practical" to have the trial here. Judge Alford said at Hannibal that if Jones appears and gives bond he will send the case back to St. Louis.

Jones was one of four defendants found guilty recently in Circuit Court at Kahoka, Mo., of criminal conspiracy in connection with the baby hoax. The others were Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, principal in the baby hoax; her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, and Mrs. Helen Berroyer, friend of Mrs. Muench. For that crime, a misdemeanor, a jury assessed fines of $150 to $450.

RELIEF OFFICIAL CRITICISES PLAN TO BUDGET FUND

P. H. Byrns Says $606,000 Will Not Last Till First of Year as Suggested by A. C. Meyers.

The suggestion of Budget Director Arthur C. Meyers that the $606,000 which remains in the city's relief bond issue fund be budgeted so that the money would last until the end of the year was criticised yesterday by P. H. Byrns, co-ordinator of the St. Louis Releif Administration, who said it could not be done without causing suffering.

Byrns wrote Meyers that he had "read with amazement" the Budget Director's proposal, incorporated in a relief appropriation bill which Meyers drafted for submission to the Board of Aldermen next Friday by Joseph B. Schweppe, chairman of the Board's relief committee.

"In the event your proposal is carried out," Byrns wrote, "it will mean that from 3000 to 4000 men and women who are residents of St. Louis will be denied help during the cold months ahead. This will mean also that the present relief load will have to be reduced to a considerable extent in order to keep within the budget you propose.

"I feel that your attention should be called to these facts before any arbitrary action is taken."

Enough Only for Two Months.

Byrns told Meyers, as he had told a citizens' group which met last Tuesday at the First National Bank at the call of the St. Louis Relief Committee, that the $606,000 remaining in the relief bond issue fund would be sufficient only for October and November relief needs.

Relief administrators are looking to the State for assistance when the Legislature meets in January, and a committee of St. Louisans has been named to draft a relief appropriation measure for prompt consideration by the Legislature, but it is not anticipated that any relief money can be expected from the State before March.

From Dec. 1 through March, it is estimated, nearly $1,300,000 will be needed to meet relief needs in St. Louis.

Alderman Schweppe wrote yesterday to Peter Kasius, director of United Charities, Inc., which will conduct a fund raising campaign in November for the support of more than 80 private charitable agencies, suggesting that United Charities seek to raise about $550,000 for the St. Louis Relief Administration in the same campaign.

Recalls 1931 Campaign.

He recalled that in 1931 the Community Fund and the Citizens' Committee on Relief and Employment, the the city's public relief agency, as St. Louis Relief Administration is now, conducted a joint campaign, with 25 per cent of the proceeds going to the Citizens' Committee. The committee's share was about $550,000.

Suggesting a similar campaign this year, Schweppe said that it seemed to be "logical and the surest way to get the funds necessary to tide the relief situation over until the Legislature acts." He said he was sure the tax paying public would rather "foot the bill" in this way rather than pay new taxes.

United Charities, despite desperate efforts, has not approached in any campaign in recent years the goal it set as the minimum needed to support the agencies affiliated with it.

MORGAN PARTNERS PAID VIRTUALLY NO TAX ON INCOME IN 1935

Morgan firm and the Van Sweringen brothers of Cleveland. The Van Sweringens built a railroad empire out of an investment of little more than half a million dollars.

Public hearings, which are expected to dwell at length on the affairs of Morgan & Co., will begin, it is reported here, soon after the presidential election in November. Max Lowenthal, chief investigator for the committee, declined to confirm this report, and Lowenthal also refused to comment on the investigation of the Morgan firm. He has maintained a policy of strict secrecy regarding the operations of the committee.

Sale That Wiped Out Profits.

The transaction by which the Morgan wiped out 1935 profits attracted wide attention at the time that it occurred. It was the sale at public auction of the stocks and bonds posted as collateral for a loan, said to have been $48,000,000, made to the Van Sweringen brothers by a group of New York bankers headed by the Morgan firm.

The Van Sweringens had borrowed the money in 1929 and 1930 when the catastrophic tumble of stock prices in those years threatened to wipe out their pyramided holdings. Under their domination, through the Alleghany Corporation, their top holding company, were several leading railroads, including the Chesapeake & Ohio, which has been profitable all through the depression, the Missouri Pacific, the Erie and half a dozen others.

The Vans, as they have long been familiarly known in the world of finance, defaulted on their note to the New York banks on May 1 of last year. Included in the collateral they put up for the loan were the shares of the Alleghany Corporation which carried with them domination over the Van Sweringen railroad empire.

At first, after the default, a plan was considered, the Post-Dispatch learned, whereby the collateral would be sold back to Cleveland bankers for the Van Sweringens. This was rejected because, it was feared, it would look like collusion and not a bona fide sale. The public auction was then decided upon so that there could be no question about the authenticity of the transaction.

"Security Graveyard."

It was held at the auction rooms of Adrian H. Muller and Sons, 18 Vesey street, in the heart of the financial district. These rooms have long been famous as a "security graveyard" and are the recognized clearing house for defaulted or defunct securities. The total realized by the auction was $4,703,000 which left the banking syndicate with a loss reported at the time to be $43,000,000. This figure, it has been learned, was considerably higher than the actual loss because the amount of the original loan to the Vans was not as large as had been reported.

F. A. O. Schwarz acted for the Morgan bank and other creditors at the sale. When the block of stocks that included the Alleghany shares was put up for sale by the auctioneer, Schwarz bid $2,801,101. L. P. Ayres, acting for the Van Sweringens, bid $2,803,000 and the stocks were sold to him.

At one time on the open market the 2,064,000 shares of Alleghany included in this lot had sold for $116,643,000. At the peak of the stock market boom, Alleghany shares brought 56; the day before the sale they were listed at 1½. But nevertheless the 2,064,000 shares of Alleghany, whatever their cash market value, carried with them power to dominate the directorates and sway the policies operating 28,000 miles of line—a system equaled only by the Government-owned network in Russia.

Search for Possible Strings.

The Senate Committee investigators are seeking to prove that J. P. Morgan & Co. did not actually relinquish control over this railroad empire; that despite the public nature of the auction they kept strings tied to the property that was sold. An effort will be made to establish this at the public hearings in November. If, of course, the banking firm retained any hold over Alleghany or other interests put up at auction, there would be doubt as to whether the loss could be used to write off profits for income tax purposes.

From sources close to the Morgan firm it was learned that every precaution was taken to make the deal, legally, just what it seeemed to be—an open and shut sale at public auction. Financial backers who made it possible for the Van Sweringens to regain control of their railroads were G. A. Ball, a Muncie (Ind.) manufacturer, and G. R. Tomlinson, Cleveland shipowner. Whitney, who was present at the auction, learned the identity of the Van Sweringen backers for the first time in the course of the sale, it is said. The terms and conditions of the sale were at no time discussed with the Vans.

Huge Rise in Values.

During last year—and this makes the transaction even more remarkable—the stock interests acquired by the Vans through their financial backers, Ball and Tomlinson, have appreciated in value to an extraordinary degree. This has been largely due to the way the Van Sweringen railroads have come back during the last year. Certain roads that were on the point of bankruptcy a year ago are now in a position to pay dividends on common stock. On the basis of market prices a year ago, the value of collateral sold was not even sufficient to cover the face amount of the bonds included in the various parcels of securities. Today the Alleghany shares alone are said to have appreciated in value nearly $10,000,000.

At the time of the public auction, Sept. 30, 1935, and later, there were rumors that other large interests were considering bidding for the Alleghany shares and the railroads they carried with them. Among others Frederick H. Prince, Boston financier and one of the four or five wealthiest men in America, was said to have contemplated going after the Van Sweringen railroad empire at the auction. But the fact remains that only the Vans themselves, through their agent and thanks to the friendly backing of Ball and Tomlinson, appeared to bid for the prize package that contained the Alleghany shares.

O. P. Van Sweringen Status.

In December, 1935, Mantis J. Van Sweringen died, leaving his brother, Orris P., to struggle with the knotty financial problems growing out of the Van Sweringen holding companies and the effort to bring them through the depression.

The surviving Van Sweringen brother occupies a curious position. In order to take over the collateral that was put up at auction a year ago there was organized the Midamerica Corporation which now holds control over Alleghany. Van Sweringen may hold office in the Midamerica Corporation—may in fact direct its fortunes—but he cannot hold a place on the board because he would thereby subject himself to deficiency action by the same New York bankers who took a loss on the Van Sweringen loan.

For the Morgan bank still holds the Van Sweringen note and could, and in all probability would, seek a deficiency judgment to collect the difference between the amount realized at the auction and the face amount of the loan if Orris should hold property. A claim for this difference has been made against the estate of Mantis Van Sweringen.

Here in New York the burden of debt carried by Orris Van Sweringen is estimated at an astonishing number of millions of dollars. But he has got back at least ostensible control over his railroad empire which continues, with increasing recovery, to be more and more valuable. If he cannot actually own it, he can control its policies. And the Morgan bank, along with the other banks that subscribed to the Van Sweringen loan, has shown a loss sufficiently large to cut down last year's profits almost to nothing.

Morgan Firm Reorganized.

The Morgan firm was reorganized under the terms of the new banking law last September. Three partners resigned to form Morgan, Stanley & Co., which does all the underwriting of large stock issues, the really profitable phase of the business. The present J. P. Morgan & Co., is a new partnership. It was on the books of the old partnership, which was continued for purposes of effectuating the reorganization, that the loss in the Van Sweringen transaction was shown. It was for this reason that the loss, contrary to expectations of Wall Street, did not show up in the last statement of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Whitney and probably Arthur M. Anderson, another partner, will be summoned to Washington by the Senate Investigating Committee. Investigators will at that time dig deeply into the affairs surrounding the Van Sweringen deal.

Brilliant Decorations For Veiled Prophet's Ball

Settings for 57th Function, in Municipal Auditorium, to Be on Larger Scale Than in Past.

Settings of the fifty-seventh Veiled Prophet's ball, in Municipal Auditorium Convention Hall Wednesday night, Oct. 7, will be on a larger scale than at any of the past events, held since 1909 in the Coliseum and before that year in Merchants' Exchange hall. The designers have sought also to make them more beautiful than in former years.

The Prophet's throne will be at the north end of the hall. Terraces and steps leading to the throne are of frosty blue color. The central dais is done in silver. The terraces and steps will bear the seats of the ladies of honor, maids of honor and the Prophet's masked followers.

Throne chairs of gold will await the Prophet and his Queen, and behind them, a silver projection will rise. On either side of the throne will be shafts of royal blue and coral, electrically lighted. The hangings between the shafts will be of silver and blue cellophane. Coral and silver walls will form a back set for the lower terraces.

The Prophet, members of his court, and the retiring queen, four special maids of honor, and the new queen, will enter at the south end of the hall. Miss Lila Marshall Childress is the retiring queen. The orchestra will be over the entrance.

Tiers of boxes on either side of the hall will be draped with silver cloth. The box reserved for the former queens will be draped in royal purple.

Boy Scouts yesterday put up about 2000 Veiled Prophet parade posters in all parts of the city. Forty-four troops were engaged in the work, which was undertaken under the classification of civic service. In the public schools, descriptive pamphlets have been distributed to prepare the children for the parade, which will picture foreign countries under the title, "The Prophet Visits Many Lands." The parade is scheduled for Tuesday night, Oct. 6.

MAN HELD IN MURDER ON EAST SIDE IN 1929

Former Tailor Indicted for Shooting of Eduard Dietrich in Home Near Mitchell.

Authorities at Edwardsville, Ill., disclosed yesterday that an indictment had been voted by a grand jury there charging John L. Smithsky, former East St. Louis tailor, with the murder of Edward (Big Ed) Dietrich the night of May 23, 1929, at his home at Long Lake, near Mitchell, Ill.

Smithsky has been in jail at Edwardsville since Sept. 10 when he was arrested by East St. Louis police at the request of Edwardsville authorities. When arrested he gave his address as 915 Pennsylvania avenue, East St. Louis, and said he was 43 years old. Edwardsville officers would not disclose the nature of the evidence against the prisoner, but said he denied having committed the crime.

Dietrich, who was 62 years old and a former St. Louis policeman and saloonkeeper, was shot and killed by one or more of three men who called at his home, where he lived alone, shortly before midnight.

A witness, Phillip Sietel, a farmer who resided nearby and had spent the evening with Dietrich, told police that three men stormed up to the door, demanded, "Where's Marie?" and on being told by Dietrich that she was no longer there, began shooting. The three escaped.

According to Edwardsville officers, Smithsky was released early this year from the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., where he had served a term for liquor law violation. News of his arrest on the murder charge was withheld at the time, while police made an unsuccessful search for two other men suspected of participation in the murder.

BARS TESTIMONY ABOUT 'VENDETTA' AGAINST HEARST

Examiner Rules Out Evidence Designed to Attribute Sinister Motive to Seattle Guild.

ATTORNEY FOR PUBLISHER PROTESTS

Non-Striker's Statement About Talk With Guild Organizer Struck From Record at Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 26.—Labor Board Examiner Edwin S. Smith today ordered struck from the record testimony of a Post-Intelligencer witness designed to show an American Newspaper Guild chapter was organized here as part of an "anti-Hearst vendetta."

Smith upheld the contention of Robert Watts, attorney for the board, that "the Wagner-Connery Labor Relations Act "is not concerned with motives which induced employes to join a labor organization."

The testimony, given by Fred Niendorff, non-striking financial editor of the Hearst newspaper, was struck out over the protests of Edward G. Woods, chief of Hearst counsel.

Smith ruled the testimony immaterial in connection with the paper's discharge last July of Photographer Frank M. Lynch and Drama Critic Philip Everhardt Armstrong. He is hearing the Guild's complaint that the men were discharged because of their activity in the Guild. The newspaper asserts they were dismissed for cause. The Guild strike was called after the complaint was filed with the Labor Board.

Talk With Guild Organizer.

That part of Niendorff's testimony struck out had to do with a conversation he said he and Lester M. Hunt, non-striking political writer, had with Morgan Hull, Guild organizer.

Niendorff said he first heard of the Guild from Hull, when Hull called him and Hunt, a former Tacoma newspaper man, to a hotel and invited them to join the Guild.

"Hull said he was going to address the Seattle Central Labor Council that night and would talk about Hearst in Milwaukee, where a Guild strike was in progress," Niendorff testified.

"'You fellows know about the strike in Milwaukee,'" he said. I told him I had read the Guild Reporter, but I couldn't find any basis in the articles for the dispute. Hull then mentioned the nation-wide boycott against Hearst and said that was the reason he was in Seattle. "I told him that was an unfair attitude; that the Post-Intelligencer had always paid the highest wages and it was a poor spirit on his part. We said that it would be poor strategy to speak to the Labor Council and Hunt and I expressed regret that he was doing it. We asked him to withdraw from making the talk. I told him the logical starting point was on the Star, notorious for its low wages."

Vendetta Alleged.

Watts objected, and Woods countered that "the complaint states two persons were discharged because of Guild activities and we responded that the alleged complaint and allegations were a mere subterfuge."

Woods argued: "The plan was definitely in mind a long time. Hull was not organizing a Guild chapter in good faith, but as part of a vendetta being carried on against William Randolph Hearst."

Neindorff testifie dalso he and another employe drew up a paper asserting the local Newspaper Guild did not represent them with their employer. They got three other "loyal" employes to sign, then turned the paper over to Night City Editor Edward T. Stone.

WOMAN DEMOCRAT IN PLACE OF MRS. MICHAEL ON BOARD

Mayor Has Not Yet Selected Member; Bipartisan Appointments to Be Made.

A Democratic woman will be appointed to fill the vacancy on the Board of Education created by the death of Mrs. Elias Michael, Sept. 7, Mayor Dickmann announced yesterday. He has not yet made a selection for the appointment.

The appointment will be for the remainder of Mrs. Michael's term expiring next April. At that time members are to be elected to fill two of the 12 places on the board, one the place held by Mrs. Michael.

Explaining his decision, the Mayor said an act of the 1929 Legislature provided for a bipartisan Board of Education in St. Louis as soon as it could be established by the process of electing one member of each of the two major parties at each regular school election until equal representation has been established. Before Mrs. Michael's death there were seven Republican and five Democratic members, Mrs. Michael being a Republican. The appointment of a Democrat in her place would establish a bipartisan board, he said. He added that City Counselor Wayman had advised him the law contemplated the establishment of such a board as soon as possible.

CAMPAIGN ON BITING DOGS

British Mail Men Demand Owners to Put Animals Under Control.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—British postmen, tired of being bitten by dogs at the rate of 5500 a year, have served the following warning on dog owners:

The owners must keep the dogs under control at the time of postal delivery. Failure to do so will mean that they must collect their own mail; and unless they rent a post-office box within two weeks, all mail will be returned to the sender.

COUNTY REGISTRATION THREE DAYS THIS WEEK

Polling Places Open Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday.

General registration of voters in St. Louis County, under the new permanent registration law, will be held at precinct polling places from 8 a. m. to 8:30 p. m. next Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday.

This will be the sole opportunity of voters to register for the presidential election Nov. 3, as, due to an oversight in drafting of the law absentees and invalids were provided no time for qualifying other than on the days stipulated.

Many voters will find themselves in new precincts, with polling places at other locations from those for the August primary, as the number of precincts has been increased from 175 to 194 and many boundary lines, particularly in thickly populated areas, have been changed.

Owen G. Jackson, chairman of the Board of Election Commissioners, said workers of both political parties have been canvassing neighborhoods, calling attention of voters to the changes. In addition, they have been advertised in county papers. Voters in doubt as to places for registration are asked to telephone the board office at the Courthouse.

On the basis of a recent population estimate of the county as 277,000, Jackson said he thought the registration might approach 135,000, although the registration for the August primary was only about 98,000. In 1932 the number was about 100,000.

Cost of the registration will be about $50,000, of which $16,600 has been spent for equipment specified under the new law. Each voter will be required to sign his name on three cards. On election day the voter will be required to sign again, for comparison of the signature with that on registration cards. In case the voter is illiterate, thumbprints will be taken.

The next opportunity for registration will be after Nov. 18, when three days will be set aside each week for registration at the board offices.

COUNTY REGISTRATION THREE DAYS THIS WEEK

Polling Places Open Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday.

General registration of voters in St. Louis County, under the new permanent registration law, will be held at precinct polling places from 8 a. m. to 8:30 p. m. next Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday.

This will be the sole opportunity of voters to register for the presidential election Nov. 3, as, due to an oversight in drafting of the law, absentees and invalids were provided no time for qualifying other than on the days stipulated.

Many voters will find themselves in new precincts, with polling places at other locations from those for the August primary, as the number of precincts has been increased from 175 to 194 and many boundary lines, particularly in thickly populated areas, have been changed.

Owen G. Jackson, chairman of the Board of Election Commissioners, said workers of both political parties have been canvassing neighborhoods, calling attention of voters to the changes. In addition, they have been advertised in county papers. Voters in doubt as to places for registration are asked to telephone the board office at the Courthouse.

On the basis of a recent population estimate of the county as 277,000, Jackson said he thought the registration might approach 135,000, although the registration for the August primary was only about 98,000. In 1932 the number was about 100,000.

Cost of the registration will be about $50,000, of which $16,600 has been spent for equipment specified under the new law. Each voter will be required to sign his name on three cards. On election day the voter will be required to sign again, for comparison of the signature with that on registration cards. In case the voter is illiterate, thumbprints will be taken.

The next opportunity for registration will be after Nov. 18, when three days will be set aside each week for registration at the board offices.

AMERICAN SAILOR TO GO ON TRIAL IN BERLIN TOMORROW

Accused of Smuggling in Large Quantities of Communist Literature for Anti-Nazis.

ALSO IS CHARGED WITH ESPIONAGE

500 Seamen at Defense Committee Meeting Vote for One-Day Protest Strike in New York.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Lawrence B. Simpson, an American seaman, held 15 months in a Nazi jail, is to go to trial Monday before the Peoples' Court in Berlin on charges of high treason and espionage. The maximum penalty is death.

A reputed member of the American Communist party, Simpson, whose home is in Kirkland, Wash., is accused of smuggling into Germany large quantities of Communist literature for anti-Nazis. The German police have charged that he was involved with 70 other persons in "Communistic work," and that he engaged in the dissemination of Communist propaganda in Germany for six months prior to his arrest on June 28, 1935.

When he was taken into custody at Hamburg while serving as a member of the crew of the United States liner Manhattan, police told the ship's captain and the United States Consul, who was present, that they had found large quantities of Communist propaganda in Simpson's quarters aboard the vessel. With this, it was charged, were discovered a number of balloons with fuses attached, apparently intended for use in broadcasting pamphlets.

The United States Consulate General in Berlin expects to have a representative at the trial, at which an attorney appointed by the Court will conduct Simpson's defense.

Richard Roiderer, the last American to be tried by a Nazi court, was found guilty of a charge of espionage t o years ago and sentenced to deportation from Germany.

Testimony on Military Secrets Expected to Be Closed.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 26.—Testimony detailing German military secrets may keep American diplomatic observers from hearing all of the trial of Lawrence Simpson, American seaman held under arrest for almost 15 months, reliable sources indicated today.

Simpson goes to trial Monday on an espionage charge and that of attempting to spread Communist literature in this Nazi nation.

In New York the National Committee for the Defense of Political Prisoners had charged that the State Department gave careless attention to Simpson's case.

Nazi officials promised every facility would be provided for reporting the trial by foreign correspondents.

There was the possibility, however, that both consular officials and the press would be excluded from those portions of testimony involving military secrets.

Police allege military data and large quantities of Communist literature in the German language were found in Simpson's luggage when he was arrested at Hamburg, June 28, 1935.

Simpson is held at Moabit prison, and the consulate here asserted its offices have received no information that he ever complained about treatment while in jail. Consul-General Douglas Jenkins and Consul Raymond Geist were delegated to attend the trial daily.

Secretary of State Hull this week asserted the State Department had made every effort to assure Simpson speedy trial and denied charges of a lackadaisical attitude on the part of diplomatic offcials handling the case.

500 Seaman in New York Vote for One-Day Protest Strike.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26. — Five hundred seamen, meeting today under auspices of the Seamen's Defense Committee, voted for a one-day sit down strike Monday of all coastwise ships in protest against the Nazi Government's treatment of Lawrence Simpson, American seaman.

Simpson, held in concentration camp and prison for the past 15 months, goes on trial Monday in the Peoples Court, Berlin, on a charge of treason and espionage. Nazi secret police charged they found anti-Nazi literature in his possession when he was seized on the United States liner Manhattan.

The meeting also passed a resolution to co-operate with West Coast seamen in the event of a strike on the Pacific Coast.

By the Associated Press.

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., Sept. 26.—Rain, which began falling about midnight, totaled 4.25 inches at 2 p. m. today. This was the heaviest rainfall here since a six-inch cloudburst in 1933. J. S. Stokes, weather observer, said September rain here now totaled nearly a foot.

Second Death in Auto Crash.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Sept. 26.—William Robb, 25 years old, of Osawatomie, Kan., died here today, bringing to two the number of fatalities resulting from a collision of a truck carrying 32 picnic-bound Kansas University students and an automobile driven by Miss Carletta White, near here late yesterday. Miss Hermina Hilda Frick, 21, Larned, Kan., one of the group, was killed instantly when the truck overturned after the collision. She was a junior in the fine arts school. Robb, son of Dr. R. W. Robb, Osawatomie, was a sophomore medical student at the university.

MAN REPORTS ROBBERS TOOK $640 PAYROLL

James Nash, Real Estate Dealer, Tells of Holdup on Litsinger Road.

James Nash, a real estate dealer at 6652 Delmar boulevard, was held up and robbed of $640 yesterday by two men in an automobile who forced his machine to the side of Litzsinger road in Deer Creek Village, he reported four hours later at the Sheriff's office at Clayton.

Nash said he drew the money from a University City bank yesterday morning to meet a payroll of men on construction work. He was driving toward a house he was building on Litzsinger road, he said, when the automobile drove near him and the man at the wheel ordered him to draw over to the side.

He obeyed, he said, believing they were policemen. One of the men got out of the machine, and on nearing Nash's car drew a revolver and said: "This is a holdup." The robber then took a roll of 10, 20 and one dollar bills from Nash's pocket, he reported, and rejoined his companion, who drove away after warning the real estate dealer not to follow.

Nash said he had not reported the robbery at once, as he continued on to the house under construction, paid the men by check and returned to his office, where he talked the matter over with associates. He lives at 6560 Murdoch avenue.

Won't Reopen Murder Case.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Sept. 26. — Gov. Clyde Herring said today he did not plan to reopen the case of George Gibson—now serving a life sentence in Fort Madison prison for the 1926 murder of Sheriff Fred Collings—despite another man's "confession" to the crime. Harry Dilley of Winterset contended he killed the Sheriff and attempted to exonerate Gibson in a suicide note last week. But the Governor said he doubted the "confession" of the suicide.

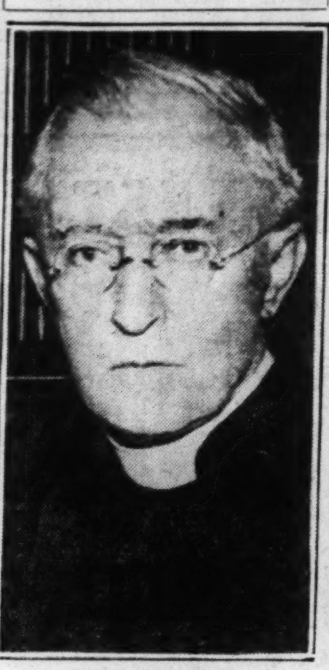
VETERAN PRIEST DEAD



MGR. JOHN E. ROTHENSTEINER

MGR. ROTHENSTEINER, PRIEST-WRITER, DIES

Author of Many Catholic Books and Pastor of Holy Ghost Church 29 Years.

Monsignor John E. Rothensteiner, pastor of Holy Ghost Catholic Church for the last 29 years and author of many ecclesiastical books, including the official history of the Catholic Archdiocese of St. Louis, died yesterday of diabetes at the church rectory, 1911 North Taylor avenue. He was 76 years old.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock at the church, Taylor and Garfield avenues. The body will be at the Bromschwig undertaking establishment, 4740 West Florissant avenue, until Monday morning, when it will be taken to the church to lie in state. The office of the dead will be chanted at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. Burial will be in the priests' lot in Calvary Cemetery.

Father Rothensteiner was in the Catholic ministry for 52 years. In June, 1934, on the occasion of his fiftieth anniversary, he was made a domestic prelate by Pope Pius XI and formally given the title of monsignor in a ceremony at his church, attended by Archbishop Glennon and more than 200 priests.

Preached in English, German.

He preached and wrote in both English and German and built up a large bi-lingual congregation whose parish was bounded by Grand and Union boulevards, Lindell boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue. Among his writings were many Catholic hymns and poems. He also translated some of the poems of Goethe. His history of the Archdiocese, a two-volume work of more than 1700 pages, was published in 1929.

In this history, which had the imprimatur, or approval of Archbishop Glennon, Father Rothensteiner related in detail, and with great care, one of the celebrated incidents of Catholic history in St. Louis—how Archbishop Peter Richard Kenrick, in 1869, ranged himself on the side of those in the Catholic hierarchy who at first opposed the decision of Pope Pius IX to declare the infallibility of the Pope. All of those in opposition later relented.

The first volume of the history described Catholic activities from the time of the earliest missions up to 1847. The second volume continued the narrative down to the time of publication, recording the administrations of Archbishops Kenrick, Kain and Glennon.

Native of St. Louis.

Born in St. Louis, Father Rothensteiner attended parochial school and Christian Brothers College here and was graduated from St. Francis de Sales Seminary in Milwaukee in 1884. He was ordained in the ministry the same year and was given a pastorate in Jackson, Mo. Three years later he went to Fredericktown, Mo., where he remained for 20 years as pastor of St. Michael's Church.

He came to Holy Ghost Church in 1907. At the time of his fiftieth anniversary, the parish paper commented on that event as follows: "When Father Rothensteiner came here he found it all in a rather deplorable condition. There was no church edifice, but only a half-completed basement, the 'rock pile,' as some called it. Torn by dissensions and open quarrels, some of the best people had left the congregation."

Confronted with this situation, Father Rothensteiner's first remarks, according to the paper, were: 'Things look rather unpropitious here, but my experiences have shown me the inherent goodness and generosity of the human heart.' He set to work to complete the church building and, by continued visits, to bind the congregation together.

The cornerstone for the new church, a large red brick edifice in simpliifed Gothic, was laid in November, 1908, and soon a parish house was built—all at a total cost of about $125,000. A new parochial school was built in 1924.

Father Rothensteiner was known to many in the congregation as "The Little Father." In 1932 he suffered a paralytic stroke which left him slightly lame, but he continued to be active in his congregation. He is survived only by a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Schwietering, 3625A Alberta street.

JAPANESE SEND MORE MARINES TO SHANGHAI

Eight Destroyers Carrying Troops Approaching Chinese City.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 27 (Sunday).—Eight Japanese destroyers carrying marines neared Shanghai today. In official circles apprehension was heightened over possible recurrence of Japanese-Chinese "incidents" in the international settlement.

The Japanese in the international area demanded enlarged "protection," and Japanese naval leaders pressed for more Japanese on the international settlement police force.

Japanese consular officials in Shanghai renewed their assertions that the killing of a Japanese and the wounding of his two comrades had demonstrated that the Chinese authorities were incapable of protecting foreigners' lives. To this the Chinese replied that "every possible" protection was being afforded by them and by the guardians of the international settlement.

A Japanese statement declared: "We have informed the Shanghai international settlement authorities and Chinese officials of Greater Shanghai that we demand greater efforts to provide Japanese residents with a place of greater safety in which to live.

"We hope these administrations comply with our desires, which any reasonable person would consider reasonable. In the event they do not, we will be forced to reply with our own efforts."

SENTENCED TO DEATH IN LETHAL GAS CELL

ROLAND (JERRY) COCHRANE

FORMER U. S. Marine of San Diego, Cal., twice decorated for bravery in Nicaragua, who is under sentence of death in the lethal gas chamber at the Arizona State Prison at Florence for the murder of Richard M. WPA JOB-SELLING FOR VOTES CHARGE IN CRIMINAL CASES for Judge of the Springfield Court of Appeals.

Only Committeeman Job Involved.

The technical criminal charges deal only with the office of committeeman, the prosecutor having doubts that the language of the statutes makes a promise of jobs for votes for candidates for nominations a crime. Committeeman, however, are elected on the primary ballot. Hoff said there was strong evidence in corroboration of the statements made by the complaining witnesses in their affidavits. The particular cases to be tried were, he said, "just samples."

"Many others have been brought to my attention since these prosecutions were started," he said, "and they remain to be taken up when we get these well under way."

Denials by Both Defendants.

Lucas and Farmer will be represented by Charles F. Newman of Springfield and Shelby E. Osborne of Stockton.

Osborne, speaking as attorney for the defendants, said today that both deny having promised or offered jobs for votes or having said anything which could possibly be construed as such an offer.

"This is just Republican campaign propaganda," Osborne said. "We will be prepared to present conclusive evidence as to what was said about the election in conversations between these persons, what actually was said is at wide variance with the charges on which they will be brought to trial.

"If there was no other evidence that this is only political we would know it to be from the fact that after these affidavits were prepared ther were taken to Jefferson City when the Republican State Committee met there Sept. 8. We do not know what official party consideration was given to them but we do know that immediately after they were returned to Stockton, the Prosecuting Attorney filed the informations."

Strong Political Pressure.

The Prosecuting Attorney said strong political pressure had been brought on him to drop the charges. He is a candidate for reelection and so far has no Democratic opposition. He said he had leading Democrats that if the received strong intimations from charges were dropped the Democratic Committee would not name a candidate against him.

Cedar County is much excited over the approaching preliminary hearings, at which Lucas and Farmer will either be bound over for trial in the Circut Court, or the charges will be dismissed by the Justice of the Peace.

RULES WOMEN AT SHELTER HAVE RIGHT TO CAST BALLOTS

Attorney-General's Office Says Place Is Not Poorhouse in Meaning of Statutes.

The Attorney-General's office has held that the women living in St. Louis Woman's Shelter, maintained by the Relief Administration at 903 Aubert avenue, have the right to vote, and should be accepted as qualified for registration.

Alderman L. E. Couplin of the Twenty-sixth Ward appealed to the Attorney-General for an opinion in the case of about 100 women from the Shelter, whose names were enrolled by the precinct judges in last week's general registration, but were tentatively marked "disqualified." The reason was the constitutional provision that "No person while kept in any poorhouse at public expense shall be entitled to vote." The Election Board has asked the City Counselor for a ruling on the same matter affecting also Ozanam Shelter for men.

Oliver W. Nolen, Assistant Attorney-General, in his letter to Couplin, says that "the Relief Administration is not maintained as a poorhouse within the meaning of the Constitution or statutes of Missouri," and that the women living at the Shelter were not disfranchised. Nolen said a similar ruling was made by the office in a case presented two years ago from Doniphan, Mo. Couplin, forwarding Nolen's opinion to the Election Board, asked that the notation of "disqualified" be removed, without requiring the women to go to the board's office.

ITALY PLANS NEW CAPITAL ON SITE OF ADDIS ABABA

City Will Be Divided Into Italian and Ethiopian Sections.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Sept. 26.—Italy will build a new capital city at Addis Ababa. A commission of architects sent from Rome has worked out a plan for the Ethiopian city which calls for an Italian section and a separate area for the Ethiopians.

The commission, headed by Arturo Bianchi, architectural engineer, has provided for a city of 200,000 inhabitants, but has left room for expansion.

Modern zoning has been employed in the plan, which calls for a large central section, as well as zones for business. Wealthy homes, small villas, Italian employe class habitations, workers' homes, military barracks, racetrack and sports stadium, hospitals and clinics, and four parks.

STRUCTURAL IRON WORKERS RE-ELECT PAUL J. MORRIN

President's Fellow Officers Also Rechosen by Convention for 4-Year Terms.

The twenty-fifth convention of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers at Hotel Jefferson closed yesterday with re-election of all the principal officers for four-year terms.

Those re-elected were: Paul J. Morrin, St. Louis, president; William J. McCain, Kansas City, secretary; John H. Lyons, Cleveland, treasurer; J. Arthur Evensen of Chicago, William H. Pope of Boston, John T. Fitzpatrick of Atlanta, Daniel M. Gayton of Pittsburgh and William F. Bauers of Buffalo, first through fifth vice-presidents. New officers were the remaining four vice-presidents, Thomas L. Chambers of San Francisco, Joseph Boyen of New York, Gay Borrelli of Philadelphia and Benjamin A. Murray, New Orleans.

Two hundred delegates attended the convention, which began last Monday.

CROSLEY'S XERVAC*

An apparatus developed by Dr. Andre A. Cueto, designed to stimulate and aid the normal growth of hair, and maintain healthy conditions of the hair and scalp.

RESULTS have been achieved in one year of clinical research in which over two hundred patients were treated. Abnormal falling of hair was arrested in nearly every instance... From this point progress was made toward a full growth of hair, dependent upon the follicles that were present and living at the beginning of the treatment.

GOV. LANDON CALLS SOCIAL SECURITY ACT HOAX ON WORKERS

ples for raising the money to pay old age pensions:

"The necessary funds should be raised by means of a special tax earmarked for this purpose, so that the already difficult problem of budget balancing may not be further complicated. The tax should be direct and visible. And the tax should be widely distributed. . . . Only if everyone bears his just share can we hope to prevent the plan being used for political purposes."

Landon devoted the bulk of his speech to compulsory old age insurance, which he said "applies to about one-half of our working population," and "excludes, among others, farmers and farm laborers, and domestic servants."

"Beginning on January first of next year," he said, "twenty-six million working people begin paying taxes to provide these pensions. Beginning next January employers must start deducting these taxes from the pay envelopes of their employes and turn them over to the Government. Beginning next January employers must, in addition, begin paying taxes on the payrolls out of which your wages are to come.

"This is the largest tax bill in history. And to call it 'social security' is a fraud on the working man."

He said the 3 per cent tax on wages and 3 per cent on payrolls "would be borne either by the employe or by the consumer.

"In prosperous times," he said, "it slows down the advance of wages and holds back re-employment. In bad times it increases unemployment and unemployment breaks wage scales."

Theory of What Happens.

Asking what happens to the funds paid in under this compulsory saving plan, Landon continued:

"The administration theory is that they go into a reserve fund—that they will be invested at interest and that in due time this interest will help pay the pensions. The people who drew this law understand nothing of Government finance. . . .

"The workers' cash comes into the Treasury. . . . The law requires the Treasury to buy Government bonds. What happens when the Treasury buys Government bonds? Well at present, when there is a deficit, the Treasury gives the Treasury some nice new bonds in exchange for the cash which the Treasury gives the Treasury. Now what happens to the cash that the Treasury gives the Treasury?

"The answer is painfully simple. We have good spenders at Washington, and they spend the cash that the Treasury gives the Treasury.

"Now I know all this sounds silly, but it happens to be an accurate recital of what this administration has been foolish enough to enact into law."

He said: "Personally, I do not want the Treasury flush with trust funds. I want the Treasury to be in a position where it must consider every penny it spends. . . .

"With this social security money alone running into billions of dollars, all restraint on Congress will be off. Maybe some people want that but I don't."

The Governor said the compulsory old-age insurance would result in an army of clerks keeping records on 26,000,000 workers.

"And so," he said, "bureaucracy will grow and grow, and Federal snooping flourish."

The Landon train, leaving Oshkosh at 9:30 a. m. today, halted at Fond Du Lac, Watertown, Madison and Waukesha, en route to Milwaukee.

At Madison, State Capital and seat of the University of Wisconsin, the Governor said the "priceless asset" of education freedom had helped maintain "democracy at the grass roots."

"In these days of widespread propaganda," he said, "it is imperative that our teachers be kept free and that our educational institutions, our newspapers and the radio be kept independent, either from control of autocratic Government or from the influence of any selfish interest."

Before reaching Milwaukee, the Kansan made five rear platform talks, stressing a need for tolerance at a time "when the tide is running against free government."

Noting what he termed "disturbing evidence of attempts to stir up racial and religious antagonisms in this country," Landon said in speeches during the day: "We must be constantly on our guard if all the individual liberties under our democratic government are not to be lost."

"Protection of these rights is the foundation of progress," he said. "We must not remain static. The United States cannot stand still and solve the problems that now confront it. But progress does not demand the sacrifice of tolerance or the abandonment of our traditional insistence on personal freedom of action.

"The Republican party is pledged to protect the American people in human rights. To the utmost of my ability I will carry out that pledge."

LAWRENCE E. MAY DIVORCED

Mrs. Grace Baker May obtained a divorce in East St. Louis yesterday from Lawrence E. May, a real estate dealer.

Mrs. May charged cruelty. She said they were married in June, 1917, and separated three weeks ago. Their residence was on St. Andrew's drive, St. Clair Country Club grounds, Belleville. She obtained custody of their two adopted children, Lawrence E. Jr., 8 years old, and Grace, 6. May filed an entry of appearance and a general denial, but did not contest the suit.

TEN NEW DEAL CASES BEFORE SUPREME COURT

Justices Will Reassemble Oct. 5 AfterS ummer Recess—First Meeting to Be Formality.

NO DECISIONS BEFORE ELECTION

Litigation Involves Wagner Act, Loans for Municipally - Owned Power Plants, Mortgage Moratoriums.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Litigation involving the constitutionality of 10 New Deal laws awaits action by the Supreme Court when it reassembles on Oct. 5 after the summer recess.

The major acts involved are the Wagner Labor Relations Act, Government loans and grants for publicly-owned hydro-electric plants, the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium measure, the 1933 "truth in securities" law and the Public Utility Holding Company Act. The New Deal has won two and lost 11 cases before the court.

No final decisions are likely before Nov. 9, six days after the presidential elections. The first meeting of the nine justices will be only a formality. They will immediately adjourn to call at the White House to pay their resupects to President Roosevelt if he is in Washington that day.

Court May Refuse Cases.

On Oct. 12, the court will announce whether it will pass on some 300 disputes appealed from lower courts during the recess which started last June 1. This may eliminate some of the New Deal controversies.

As soon as this announcement is made, the justices will start hearing arguments for two weeks on cases they agreed last fall to review. Then they will adjourn for two weeks to prepare opinions on the disputes to which they have just listened. The opinions completed will be delivered Nov. 9.

One of the cases to be argued at this time, or in November, involves the constitutionality of PWA loans for publicly-owned hydro-electric projects. The court already has agreed to pass on the protest by the Duke Power Co. against a $2,852,000 Government loan and grant for a power plant at Buzzard Point, S. C. The Circuit Court of Appeals at Charlotte, N. C., sided with the Government.

Other Utilities Attack Loans.

The Alabama Power Co. and the Texas Utilities Co. also have challenged the Government's authority under the National Recovery Act and the 1934 emergency appropriation relief measure to furnish money to Plainview, Tex., and to seven Alabama municipalities for electric systems. Their suit was dismissed by the Federal District Court for the District of Colubmbia and they asked the Supreme Court to hear arguments along with the Duke case.

Other cases involve: Wagner Labor Relations Act, establishing a national labor relations board and guaranteeing collective bargaining to workers. It was challenged by the Associated Press and by the Bradley Lumber Co. of Arkansas, both losing in lower courts;

Frazier-Lemke Act granting a three-year moratorium on farm mortgage foreclosures; the Phoenix Joint Stock Land Bank of Kansas City appealed from a ruling by the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals upholding the legislation. An earlier measure was held unconstitutional;

The 1935 "Truth in Securities" Act requiring that proposed issues of securities be registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission for public inspection; J. Edward Jones, New York operator, challenged the act for a second time, but lost in the Second Court of Appeals; last term the court held the commission could not compel Jones to testify concerning an issue he had withdrawn after it had been registered;

Public Utilitly Company Act; the Government wants the court to hold up court action on disputes concerning this legislation until final decision of a test case it has filed in the Southern New York U. S. District Court against the Electric Bond and Share Co.; it lost in the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in cases involving the North American Co. and the American Water Works and Electric Co., Inc.;

The 50 per cent tax imposed on silver profits made prior to enactment of the silver purchase legislation which was intended to make the nation's monetary stock consist of one-fourth silver and three-fourths gold; Percy K. Hudson of New York challenged the tax and it was held unconstitutional by the court of claims;

The 1934 Arms Embargo Act authorizing the President forbid the sale of munitions to Bolivia and Paraguay for use in their Chaco war; the Southern New York Federal District Court held the act was an invalid delegation of legislative power; the litigation was started by the Government against the Cur-

HOW WASHINGTON U. ENDOWMENT SHRANK

Bonds Worth $53,000, to Be Kept Until Worth $1,000,000, Now Put at $15,370.

A gift to Washington University in 1902 of railroad bonds with a par value of $53,000 which was to be kept intact until it reached $1,000,000, now has a valuation of only $15,370.

The fund, given to the university by the late Sylvester Waterhouse, professor of Greek, consisted of 53 St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad bonds, valued at $1000 each, bearing interest at 4 per cent and maturing in 1950. Part of the gift was given to the university during his lifetime, and the remainder was provided for in Prof. Waterhouse's will.

Discussing the decline of the fund with a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday, Joseph W. Zumbalen, treasurer of the university, said that since Prof. Waterhouse had indicated a preference for railroad bonds during his lifetime, the board of directors felt that money earned by the bonds should be reinvested in the same railroad. "The board considered it an A1 investment," he said.

Bonds Down to $5565.

After the fund reached $1,000,000, the will of Prof. Waterhouse provided, the money was to be used for general expenses of the university. The bonds on June 30, 1935, were worth only $5565, but in the recent increased activity in railroad investments has brought them up to the present figure.

"In addition to the Waterhouse fund, other stocks and bonds on our security list have shrunk considerably in value," Zumbalen said. "Some of the securities were gifts and others were investments by the Board of Directors."

Prof. Waterhouse was Collier Professor of Greek at the university from 1868 to 1901. His chair was endowed by four former students in recognition of his "fidelity, learning and ability." Impaired health caused his retirement in 1901 and he died the following year.

He was an ardent advocate of river improvement. For 20 years he wrote pamphlets urging Southern farmers to diversify their program with Asiatic crops such as jute and ramie. He also wrote on Missouri's resources, iron manufacture, reforestation, city parks, railroads, and the early history of St. Louis. An account of his life, written by Irving Dilliard of the Post-Dispatch staff, appears in the most recent volume of the Dictionary of American Biography.

Prof. Waterhouse's Estate.

Prof. Waterhouse left an estate of $172,000, of which $25,000 went to Washington University. This sum, with previous gifts, brought the fund up to $53,000. At one time the bonds reached a value of $100,000.

Discussing the university's funds in general Zumbalen said the school is usually in need of money because its activities are constantly growing and no funds are received to support many of the new developments. "In addition," he continued, "we used to accept gifts for construction of new buildings without receiving anything for upkeep. We don't do that today. We take gifts of new buildings only if they are accompanied by endowments for upkeep."

CLINIC FOR FASHION ARTISTS

Sponsored by American Legion Post of Advertising Club.

A clinic for prospective fashion artists, sponsored by the American Legion Post of the Advertising Club, will be opened on Oct. 15. Applicants for the course which will cover 12 weeks of evening sessions will be required to register next Tuesday at the Advertising Club headquarters in the DeSoto Hotel. Two samples of recent art work, either pen or wash drawing, must be submitted.

The course is open only to nonprofessional young men and women who have had at least two years of training in art classes. A small fee will be charged for registration and for each lecture.

The 1935 Ashurst-Sumners Act forbidding interstate transportation of goods made by convicts and requiring that such goods be labeled as prison-made; it was challenged by the Kentucky Whip and Collar Co., a manufacturer of leather goods in the Kentucky penitentiary at Eddyville; the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the act;

The 1934 amendments to the Railway Labor Act authorizing collective bargaining between representatives of railway employes and the carriers; the Virginian Railway appealed from a decision by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals requiring it to negotiate concerning disputes with a unit of the American Federation of Labor.

Other action likely Oct. 12 is announcement whether the court will reconsider its decisions holding unconstitutional the New York law establishing minimum wages for women and the 1934 Municipal Bankruptcy Act intended to help cities, counties and other political subdivisions reduce their indebtedness through Federal bankruptcy courts. Both were 5-to-4 rulings. The court seldom grants rehearings.

MICHIGAN INQUIRY IN LONDE PAROLE ENDS FOR PRESENT

Officials Go Home Saying They Have No Evidence of Bribery in Their State to Free Convict.

SEE NO REASON NOW TO REVOKE PAROLE

Offer of $4000 in Gold by Former Gangster's Father to Warden Nine Years Ago Disclosed.

The mystery of what became of the $50,000 that Morris Londe, in sworn testimony at a bankruptcy hearing, said he gave his brother, Louis, on the latter's representation that he had to pay for a prison parole for their brother, Isadore Londe, former Egan gangster, was not cleared up by two Michigan State oficials who returned to Detroit last night after several days in St. Louis. They had been ordered by Gov. Fitzgerald of Michigan to "get to the bottom of this thing or bring Londe back to Michigan." They did neither.

The officials, Buell A. Doelle, Assistant Attorney-General of Michigan, and Ross Pascoe, Deputy Parole Commissioner, said they had been unable to clear up the matter, and would not return Londe to prison because they had no evidence that he had violated his parole.

Michigan Officials' Statement.

They issued a statement, which was concurred in by Morris G. Levinson, attorney for the Londes in the bankruptcy proceeding, the text of which follows:

"The United States District Attorney and Department of Justice agents in St. Louis declare that there is no evidence in their possession to indicate the payment of a bribe in Michigan to obtain the pardon of Isadore Londe.

"Henry G. Morris, assistant United States District Attorney, insists, rather, that the criminal charge of concealing assets, against Morris and Louis Londe, brothers of Isadore Londe, and partners in the defunct Pearl Garment Co., expressly negatives the use of these assets in payment of a bribe. The evidence of concealment of assets, in possession of Federal officials, will be presented to the grand jury in October.

"Whether these assets, consisting in part of cash deposits of $47,000, were concealed by the Londe brothers, dissipated in gambling by Louis Londe, or paid to St. Louis gangsters in an extortion plot, will be determined conclusively by the proceedings in Federal Court. This investigating body cannot discuss the merits of this evidence.

"No element of parole violation on the part of Isadore Londe is disclosed by the evidence at hand. He was paroled March 26, 1936, and the cash withdrawals of the Londe brothers did not begin until four months later. An extortion of this amount of money in St. Louis is a crime punishable in Missouri, and is not the present responsibility of Michigan authorities.

"For the present, the parole of Isadore Londe should not be revoked."

Inquiry Necessarily Informal.

Doelle and Pascoe explained there was no tribunal here before which they could call witnesses and examine them under oath, and that their investigation necessarily was confined to informal interviews. Among those to whom they talked were the three Londe brothers, attorneys for both sides in the bankruptcy case and Ernest G. Stubley, head of a welfare organization to whom Isadore Londe was paroled.

The testimony about a purchased parole for Isadore was brought out at a hearing Monday and Tuesday before Referee in Bankruptcy John A. Hope on an involuntary petition in bankruptcy filed against the Pearl Garment Co., 905 Washington avenue, owned by Morris and Louis Londe.

Morris Londe, the first witness, was asked on Monday if any of the firm's money was used to pay for the parole for Isadore, which was granted last March. He refused to answer on the ground that it might incriminate him. When the hearing was resumed Tuesday he was granted permission to change his testimony of the previous day, and testified he had given Louis $50,000 in July on the representation it was to be paid for the parole. He said Louis feared for his life if it was not paid. He added that only the night before, Louis told him he had spent the $50,000 on "gambling and women," instead of for the parole. Not until that moment, Morris testified, did he learn that Louis had deceived him by using the parole as a subterfuge to get the money.

Creditors Doubted Explanation.

The gambling explanation had been offered the creditors a month before and they rejected it as incredible. Federal officials at the hearing also took no stock in it and arrested Morris and Louis on a charge of concealing assets of the firm. After two nights in jail they were released each under $10,000 bond.

After the release the brothers, including Isadore, who came to St. Louis to live with his mother at 927 Westgate avenue, were interviewed by Doelle and Pascoe. Morris stuck to his story that he gave Louis the $50,000 with the understanding it was to be paid for Isadore's parole.

Louis confirmed this, but said he deceived Morris. He said he lost $47,300 at a gambling house in Chicago over a period of about one month. He said he took this money in amounts ranging from $2000 to $6500, in checks signed by Morris, and cashed the checks. Each week-end, he related, he drove in an automobile to Chicago with as much as $10,000 at a time, in thousand-dollar bills, and lost it all with unfailing regularity. At no time, he related, did he return "a dime winner."

A strange part of his story was that he had an arrangement with a certain man in Chicago, whom he refused to name, to register for him every Saturday night at the Croydon Hotel, each time under a different assumed name. He said he did this so Morris, who believed he was making these trips to Detroit to pay for the parole, could not trace him to Chicago if he became suspicious.

Efforts to Get Parole.

Louis admitted under questioning that he did make several trips to Detroit in behalf of a parole for Isadore, each time appealing to one Danny Sullivan, gambler, formerly of St. Louis, but that Sullivan did nothing for him.

While Morris had said he gave Louis $50,000, Louis could account for only $47,300. This money was obtained by the brothers partly from the firm's bank accounts, their personal savings and partly from the sale of merchandise, which they had purchased on credit, at low prices for cash.

The Michigan officials, who were interested only in Morris' sworn testimony that he gave the $50,000 for a parole, had no interest in the gambling story and stopped there. Isadore protested that he knew nothing about any of his brothers' money transactions.

$4000 Offer to Warden.

As long as nine years ago, when Isadore Londe had been in the Marquette (Mich.) prison only three years and was in solitary confinement for escaping over the walls, an attempt was made to bribe Warden James F. Corgan to let Londe out of solitary confinement and set the stage for a parole.

On that occasion the Post-Dispatch learned today, Londe's father went to Marquette with $4000 in gold coins, which he carried in a bag.

It is the rule in all prisons that a man in solitary confinement loses all privileges, particularly of visits from relatives and the use of the mails and when these privileges were denied the Londe family, the father became desperate.

He was admitted to Warden Corgan's office and there made a fervent plea to see his son. Corgan stated the rule and said he would not abrogate it under any circumstances.

The father then produced the bag and dumped the coins on the Warden's table. Corgan without a word pressed a button that brought in two clerks.

Father Lectured, Gets Back Gold.

"Whose money is that on the table?" he demanded of the father.

"Mine," said Londe.

Corgan thereupon dismissed the clerks and gently lectured the aged man, reminding him that the offer of a bribe in Michigan is a penitentiary offense.

"But I am not going to harm you," the Warden told the elder Londe. "You are a father and I understand. Go back to St. Louis and your gold will be returned in a few days."

The father returned to St. Louis and a few days later the gold was returned to him by express.

How Stubley Heard of Case.

Pascoe said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he learned while in St. Louis that Stubley, who conducts a parole department for the Volunteers of America, 1520 Chestnut street, became interested in a parole for Londe through John (Pudgy) Dunn, ex-convict, who also was paroled by Michigan to Stubley.

Dunn, a St. Louisan, 40 years old, was first arrested here in 1911, suspected of murder. He had escaped from Joliet Penitentiary, where he was serving a life sentence for murder, and the St. Louis police returned him to Joliet. Later his case was remanded by the Illinois Supreme Court and the charge against him dismissed.

In 1925 he was sentenced in Detroit to 15 to 30 years for another murder and paroled two years ago. He was discharged from the parole a year ago after Stubley had made a written request for the discharge. Dunn now is operating a gambling table at the Mounds Club, a night club and gambling house on the Collinsville road in Madison County.

Gerk's Protest Recalled.

Stubley told the Post-Dispatch he visited the Michigan Parole Commissioner at Lansing and discussed Londe's case with him before the parole was granted. He said he paid his own expenses and received nothing from the Londes. The brothers told the Michigan officials they gave Stubley $100 and an additional $10 for gasoline to make the trip.

In 1931 Joseph Gerk, then Chief of Police, wrote a letter to the Chamber of Commerce protesting against Stubley's parole activities, stating that Stubley at that time had 60 paroled convicts reporting to him. Chief Gerk's letter stated: "In view of the employment situation it is not pleasant to contemplate that such people are being imported into our city to enter into competition with good citizens."

Many of those convicts were from Illinois prisons and, following Chief Gerk's protests, Illinois stopped paroling men to Stubley.

As head of the Volunteers of America in St. Louis, Stubley says he is engaged in religious and charitable work. His organization is not in the Community Fund and was not indorsed by the Chamber of Commerce or the Better Business Bureau.

HARRIET MONROE DIES; EDITOR OF "POETRY"

Succumbs in Peru—She Wrote Verse, but Was Best Known for Aiding Others.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Miss Harriet Monroe, known as the "patron saint of American poetry," died today at Arequipa, Peru, members of her family here were informed. She was 76 years old.

Miss Monroe had made a trip to Buenos Aires as the guest of the Pen Club, an organization devoted to poetry, and afterward had gone to the West Coast of Peru.

She was founder and editor of the magazine "Poetry," an endowed publication. She wrote the "Columbian Ode," sung by 5000 voices at the inaugural of the World's Fair in 1893.

Career of Harriet Monroe; Helped Many Writers Get Start.

While Harriet Monroe gained recognition for her "Columbian Ode" and other verse, she was best known for her assistance to other writers, many of whom became famous.

At the time she decided on a career of writing verse, after the success of her "Columbian Ode," she did so in the face of widespread derision of poets. They were the butt of the quips of newspaper paragraphers, she lamented, and only in humorous vein did the journal of the land mention poets or their work.

"I got fighting mad!" she said. The result was "Poetry," A Magazine of Verse."

In 1911, while art editor of the Chicago Tribune, she gathered a group of patrons to her cause as guarantors and started the magazine in September, 1912. By the grace of those guarantors it survived more popular publications.

Among the names that flashed across its pages, some of them appearing in print there for the first time, were those of Vachel Lindsay, Carl Sandburg, Edgar Lee Masters, D. H. Lawrence and a host of others. To its pages, too, came the occasional verse writer and at least 500 poetic efforts had to be rejected monthly.

Many commentators talked to Harriet Monroe and wrote late of her modesty.

"All famous literary folk who visit Chicago are entertained by Harriet Monroe," wrote Olive Allene White in 1930. "It is at many of these parties that one realizes her self effacement. She sits in the background among her poets, watching and listening."

Her first literary work was done for Chicago newspapers while she was a resident of New York. These took the form of "Letters on Music, Art and the Drama." Her first book, "Valeria and Other Poems," was published by private subscription. Many other books followed, all except one poetry. The exception was a biography of her brother-in-law, John Wellborn Root, who was first architect of the Columbian Exposition.

Her husband, Robert Taylor Wood, 35, a mechanic, and two other men were held for questioning. A bent knife and battered coffee pot were found near the body.

CITY G. O. P. CAMPAIGN TO BE OPENED FRIDAY

National Committee Chairman Hamilton to Speak at Mass Meeting.

The Republican campaign in St. Louis for the national and State tickets will be officially opened Friday evening with a mass meeting at the Armory, Grand boulevard and Market street, at which John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, will be the principal speaker.

Announcement that Hamilton had definitely accepted the invitation to open the local campaign was made yesterday by Fred W. Pape, chairman of the Republican City Committee, following a meeting of the speakers and meetings division of the committee.

Following the meeting at the Armory, various ward meetings will be held until the election Nov. 3. The city committee is endeavoring to obtain nationally known speakers for the ward meetings, including Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon, keynoter at the last Republican national convention; Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War; J. R. McCarl, former Comptroller-General of the United States, and former Gov. F. L. Sampson of Kentucky.

Col. Frank Knox, Republican nominee for Vice-President, is scheduled to speak at the opera house in the Municipal Auditorium Oct. 15. The speech will be broadcast over a national radio hook-up.

As has been told, the climax of the local Republican campaign will be a mass meeting in the arena section of the Auditorium the evening of Oct. 31, at which Gov. Alf M. Landon, the party's nominee for President, is scheduled to speak. Local ward organizations will parade to the Auditorium with torch lights and flares as in old-time political processions.

Text of Gov. Landon's Address Assailing Social Security Act As 'Example of New Deal Bungling'

Nominee at Milwaukee Proposes State-Administered Plan of Old Age Pensions and Further Preliminary Study of Job Insurance.

Landon in Action

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

THE Republican presidential candidate snapped as he spoke at Milwaukee last night.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 26.

FOLLOWING is the text of Gov. Alf M. Landon's address in the Milwaukee Auditorium tonight:

I am going to talk tonight about economic security—economic security for the men and women obliged to earn their daily bread through their own daily labor. There is no question that is of deeper concern to us all. Even in good times there is ever present in the minds of workers the fear of unemployment. In periods of deep depression, there is the fear of protracted idleness. And always, in prosperity and in depression, there is the ever present dread of a penniless old age.

From the standpoint of the individual, I know of no more intensely human problem than that of economic security. From the standpoint of the Government there is no problem calling more for a sympathetic understanding and the best efforts of heart and mind. But to solve the problem we must have more than a warm heart and a generous impulse. We must have the capacity and the determination to translate our feelings into a practical, workable program. Daydreams do not pay pensions.

Two Ways of Approach.

Now in broad terms there are two ways to approach the development of a program of economic security. One is to assume that human beings are improvident—that it is necessary to have the stern management of a paternal government to force them to provide for themselves—that it is proper for the Government to force them to save for their old age. The other approach is to recognize that in an industrial nation some people are unable to provide for their old age—that it is a responsibility of society to take care of them.

The act passed by the present administration is based upon the first of these approaches. It assumes that Americans are irresponsible. It assumes that old age pensions are necessary because Americans lack the foresight to provide for their old age. I refuse to accept any such judgment of my fellow citizens.

I believe that as a nation, we can afford old age pensions—that in a highly industrialized country they are necessary. I believe in them as a matter of social justice.

Because of my firm belief in the justice, necessity, and feasibility of old age pensions, I am going to discuss the present act with the utmost frankness. It is a glaring example of the bungling and waste that have characterized this administration's attempts to fulfill its benevolent purposes. It endangers the whole cause of social security in this country. In my own judgment—and I have examined it most carefully—this law is unjust, unworkable, stupidly drafted, and wastefully financed.

His Analysis of the Law.

Broadly speaking, the act is divided into three main sections. One deals with compulsory old age insurance. It applies to about one-half of our working population. It excludes, among others, farmers and farm laborers, and domestic servants.

Another part of the act attempts to force states to adopt unemployment insurance systems.

The third part of the act provides old age pensions for those in need, who do not come under the compulsory plan.

Now let us look at the so-called old age insurance plan in more detail, and on a dollars and cents basis. In other words, let us see just how much the old people of this country are going to get, when they are going to get it, and who is going to pay for it. Here we are dealing—not with opinions — but with hard facts, with the provisions of the law.

Under the compulsory insurance plan of the present law, none of our old people will get any pension at all until 1942. If you happen to be one of those insured—and remember about half of our workers are not—you have to earn, on the average, $125 a month every single month for the next 20 years to get a monthly pension of $37.50. And you have to earn $125 a month for the next 45 years to get a pension of $59.38 a month. Besides — these sums have to support both the worker and his wife.

Taxes Start Jan. 1.

But meanwhile, beginning on January first of next year, 26,000,000 working people begin paying taxes to provide these pensions. Beginning next January employers must start deducting these taxes from the pay envelopes of their employes and turn them over to the Government. Beginning next January employers must, in addition, begin paying taxes on the payrolls out of which your wages are to come. This is the largest tax-bill in history. And to call it "social security" is a fraud on the working man.

These taxes start at the rate of $2 in taxes for every $100 of wages. They increase until it is $6 in taxes for every $100 in wages. We are told that this $6 will be equally divided between the employer and the employe. But this is not so, and for a very simple reason. The actual fact will be, in almost every case, that the whole tax will be borne either by the employe or by the consumer through higher prices. That is the history of all such taxes. This is because the tax is imposed in such a way that if the employer is to stay in business, he must shift the tax to someone else.

"Tax on Employment."

Do not forget this: Such an excessive tax on payrolls is beyond question a tax on employment. In prosperous times it slows down the advance of wages and holds back re-employment. In bad times it increases unemployment, and unemployment breaks wage scales. The Republican party rejects any feature of any plan that hinders re-employment.

Yet it is solely by such a tax that the plan of this administration is financed. Its entire cost is to be raised by a 3 per cent tax on wages and a 3 per cent tax on payrolls. I do not see how anyone can believe that the average man making $100 a month should be compelled to save 3 per cent of his wages. Certainly he is not in a position to save 6 per cent of his wages.

One more sample of the injustice of this law is this: Some workers who come under this new Federal insurance plan are taxed more and get less than workers who come under the state laws already in force. For instance, under the new law, many workers now 50 years old must pay burdensome taxes for the next 15 years in order to receive a pension when they are 65; whereas those of the same age who come under some state laws pay no taxes and yet actually get a larger pension when they reach the age of 65.

These are a few reasons why I called this law unjust and stupidly drafted!

Concerning Workers' Savings.

There is a further important point in connection with the compulsory saving provided by the plan of the present administration. According to this plan, our workers are forced to save for a life time—what happens to their savings? The administration's theory is that they go into a reserve fund—that they will be invested at interest and that in due time this interest will help pay the pensions. The people who drew this law understand nothing of Government finance.

Let us trace the process step by step. The worker's cash comes into the Treasury What is done with it? The law requires the Treasury to buy Government bonds. What happens when the Treasury buys Government bonds? Well, at present when there is a deficit, the Treasury gives some nice new bonds in exchange for the cash which the Treasury gives the Treasury. Now what happens to the cash that the Treasury gives the Treasury? The answer is painfully simple. We have good spenders at Washington, and they spend the cash that the Treasury gives the Treasury.

Now I know all this sounds silly, but it happens to be an accurate recital of what this administration has been foolish enough to enact into law.

In Terms of Family Budget

Let me explain it in another way—in the simple terms of the family budget. The father of the family is a kindly man, so kindly that he borrows all he can to add to the family's pleasure. At the same time he impresses upon his sons and daughters the necessity of saving for their old age. Every month they bring 6 per cent of their wages to him so that he may act as trustee and invest their savings for their old age. The father decides that the best investment is his own I. O. U. So very month he puts aside in a box his I. O. U. carefully executed, and, moreover, bearing interest at 3 per cent. And every month he spends the money that his children bring him, partly in meeting his regular expenses, and the rest in various experiments that fascinate him. Years pass — the children grow old—the day comes when they have to open their father's box. What do they find? Roll after roll of neatly executed "I. O. U.'s"

I am not exaggerating the folly of this legislation. The saving it forces on our workers is a cruel hoax.

Fears It Will Go for Deficits.

There is every probability that the cash they pay in will be used for current deficits and new extravagances. We are going to have trouble enough to carry out an economy program without having the Treasury flush with money drawn from the workers. Personally, I do not want the Treasury flush with trust funds—funds which the trustee can mingle with its own general funds. I want the Treasury to be in a position where it must consider every penny it spends. I want the Secretary of the Treasury to be obliged to say to committees of Congress every time a new appropriation is proposed, "Gentlemen, you will have to provide some new taxes if you do this." With this social security money alone running into billions of dollars, all restraint on Congress will be off. Maybe some people want that, but I don't.

And even if the budget is balanced, the fact that there is a billion dollars and more of extra cash on hand each year that can be made instantly available for any purpose by issuing special bonds to the trust fund is too great a temptation.

This temptation is further increased by another provision of the law—that provision relating to how much of the cash collected will be paid out in pensions. During the next 10 years only 10 cents out of every dollar collected from the workers will be paid out as benefits. And from now until 1950 only 16 cents out of every dollar collected will be paid out as benefits. The workers asked for a pension and all they have received is just another tax.

Keeping the Records.

There is one more point that I want to mention about the compulsory old age pension system. This is the question of keeping records. The administration is preparing a plan, the exact nature of which we shall not know until after the election, for keeping the life records of 26,000,000 of our working people. These records are necessary because the amount of the pension anyone is to receive depends upon how much he has earned after the act goes into effect. The record must show every job a man has, and every dollar he earns so long as he is working at something that brings him under the plan. If he is working in a factory and changes to another factory, a Government agent must keep track of him.

Imagine the vast army of clerks which will be necessary to keep these records. Another army of field investigators will be necessary to check up on the people whose records are not clear, or regarding whom current information is not coming in. And so bureaucracy will grow and grow, and Federal snooping flourish.

To get a workable old age pension plan, we must repeal the present compulsory insurance plan. The Republican party is pledged to do this. The Republican party will have nothing to do with any plan that involves prying into the personal working records of 26,000,000 people.

Unemployment Insurance.

Before discussing the positive part of our program, however, I want to take up the second main feature of the present act, the part dealing with unemployment insurance.

The problem of unemployment insurance differs fundamentally from that of old age pensions. Old age pensions were reasonably well established in a number of states even prior to the passage of the Social Security Act. Federal grants to states to supplement state old age pensions do not differ from the practice followed for years—the practice of making grants to states to supplement and encourage projects for the general welfare.

Unemployment insurance is something new and of a different character. We have never had unemployment insurance in this country. With the exception of two states, and their laws are of recent origin, there were no unemployment insurance laws on the statute books of our states before the Social Security law.

Under these circumstances, for the Federal Government to step in and to use its taxing power to compel all of the states immediately to enact unemployment insurance statutes is something unheard of. It is most unwise. There is no element of real help to the states in the present statute. There is merely compulsion. It completely ignores what has been of priceless value to us—the use of the states as experimental workshops in which new methods and policies may be tried out and gradually perfected.

Everything to Learn.

The Republican platform proposes to encourage adoption by the states of honest and practical measures for meeting the problems of insurance against unemployment.

It does so because we recognize that we live on a continent with a wide range of working conditions and standards of living. It does so because we have still nearly everything to learn in this field.

With state experiments, different states trying out different plans and watching the results, we shall work out a much better system than could possibly be imposed at this time from Washington. The impatient advocates of almost every social reform are disposed to seek the shortcut of Federal action rather than to wait for the slower, but more certain, progress achieved under State auspices. If a State makes a mistake the effect is local and limited. With State action we avoid mistakes involving the whole country. As Woodrow Wilson said of State action, it "has given speed, facility, vigor, and certainty to the progress of our economic and political growth."

It is urged that competition among industrial states will prevent State action in this field. But forward-looking states like your own have been disproving this for 25 years.

Pensions for Needy Aged.

This brings us to the third main feature of the present act—the section dealing with pensions for the needy aged not covered by the compulsory insurance plan. This part of the present law can be made to serve as the foundation of a real old age pension plan. This, the Republican Party proposes to do. It proposes to overhaul this section and make of it a workable, common-sense plan—a plan to be administered by the states.

We propose, through amendments to this section, to provide for every American citizen over 65 the supplementary payment necessary to give a minimum income sufficient to protect him or her from want.

Frankly, I am not in a position to state with finality the total cost of this plan. One of the most serious criticisms to be made of the present social security act is the haste with which it was constructed, and the inadequate knowledge on which it rests. I do not intend to repeat this error. I have been studying this problem closely for the past year and a half, and I have had the benefit of the opinions of many close students of these problems. Elaborate computations of the probable costs have been prepared for me. And while I am not willing to accept these computations as final, it is clear from them that the plan which we propose will be much less expensive than the plan of the present administration—because we will not create a needless reserve fund of $47,000,000,000.

Our plan will be on a pay-as-you-go basis, with the result that we will know year by year just what our pensions are costing us. That is sound, common-sense financing.

Raising the Money.

There is one other point I want to impress upon you. This is the question of raising the money to pay the pensions. The precise method of taxation used will depend upon the decision of Congress working in co-operation with the Treasury. But there are three essential principles which should be complied with: The necessary funds should be raised by means of a special tax earmarked for this purpose, so that the already difficult problem of budget-balancing may not be further complicated. The tax should be direct and visible. And the tax should be widely distributed. Only if every member of the great body of our citizens is conscious of his share of the cost can we hope to resist the constant pressure to increase pensions to the point where the burden will be unbearable; only if everyone bears his just share can we hope to prevent the plan being used for political purposes.

If we will prevent such exploitation and if we will put the plan on a sound financial basis, we can afford to be liberal to our old people. If the present compulsory insurance plan remains in force, our old people are only too apt to find the cupboard bare.

Let me repeat. I am a profound believer in the justice and necessity of old-age pensions. My criticism of the present act is not that its purpose is bad. It is that this act will involve a cruel disappointment for those of our people least able to bear the shock of disappointment.

To these — our old people, our workers struggling for better conditions, our infirm—I will not promise the moon. I promise only what I know can be performed—economy, a living pension, and such security as can be provided by a generous people.

Why Women LIKE THIS HEATING PLAN

● What woman wouldn't be glad to be rid of smoke and ashes in the cellar? With a Whiting Stoker feeding the furnace automatically, the basement can be turned into a playroom for the children or a recreation room for grown-ups. This automatic coal burner is fully enclosed and clean and has no exposed parts to endanger the youngsters' safety. There's no chance for explosions, either, with coal.

Women like the Whiting for other reasons, too. There's no more running down to the cellar during the day to fix the fire. Temperatures are controlled by a thermostat. Housecleaning is easier, too. There's no soot and grime. Room temperatures are more healthful because they're steady and even. The home doesn't get too hot or too cold.

Finally, of course, women also like to save money—and that's what they can do with a Whiting. It doesn't waste the fuel you do in hand-firing and it burns less expensive coal. Many Whiting owners save $2 to $4 a ton. All in all, there's nothing else you can put into the home that can add so much to your comfort and bank account. Ask us for the details.

WHAT WHITING OWNERS SAY...
* "Since the stoker was installed we hardly know we have a heating plant, and the house is more evenly heated. It is more than human."—Mr. J. A. B.
* "I consider the stoker a real servant. It not only saves time and the trouble of making a fire each morning, but is also much more economical to operate than the old way."—Mr. F. W. B.
* "The stoker is neat in appearance and quiet in operation. I highly recommend it to any home owner wishing an even temperature at low cost."—Mr. A. T. B.

New York Stock Exchange Greets France's Devaluation Plan Calmly And Cheerfully With Prices Rising

Stabilization Fund Lifts Sterling to $4.97 from 11 Cent Dip to $4.91—Franc Between 5 and 5.12, Down from 6.58⅜.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—In dramatic contrast with the frenzied and fearful selling which greeted the first British step toward devaluation five years ago, the New York Stock Exchange today greeted France's decision to pursue the same course, calmly and cheerfully with prices advancing.

Financial leaders pointed to the radically different economic situation of the world today, in explaining this response of the New York share market, awaited anxiously in world financial centers, since New York was the only major securities market open for the short week-end session.

While the decision of the Bank of England to suspend gold payments five years ago represented one of the first of a series of major operations upon an ailing world economy, economists explained that readjusting the value of the franc represented a relatively minor operation upon a patient that has been improving for several years.

Furthermore the operation upon the franc was hailed by financial authorities in both New York and London as one likely to remove an important remaining obstacle to recovery.

Stabilization Fund Active.

When the pound declined, it had a depressing effect upon price levels in the United States, France and other countries maintaining their currency values. But the United States dollar has now also been devalued. So have many other currencies. The French franc is not an important currency in world trade, anyhow, and has little effect upon world prices.

In Washington, Secretary Morgenthau disclosed that the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 American stabilization fund had been put to work at once to protect the United States from the one disturbing effect which some feared the French action might have—a drop in the pound sterling.

The recent flight of capital from France, much of it to London, had been pushing the pound steadily higher in relation to both the franc and the dollar. The pound sold in New York a few days ago at the highest level in two years. With removal of this upward force on the pound, some had feared that it might fall back suddenly. With so much of the world's trade dependent upon sterling and its related currencies, a drop in sterling might again unsettle American markets.

Morgenthau revealed that the Bank of Russia had suddenly offered 1,000,000 pounds of sterling "at any price." In unofficial dealings, the pound dropped to $4.91, off 11 cents from yesterday. With the stabilization fund, Morgenthau quickly bought the sterling offered, and the pound in New York rallied to $4.97.

The market for cotton, America's chief export crop, reacted cheerfully to the favorable implications for world trade of bringing the franc into line with other major monies. Prices advanced in New York 35 to 70 cents a bale. Wheat at Chicago held about unchanged.

Trading Is Active.

Trading was active in the New York Stock Exchange, with 900,760 shares traded, the largest for a Saturday since April 4. Price advances of $1 to $3 were numerous, appearing in such issues as Chrysler, Bethlehem, New York Central, American Telephone, Allied Chemical, and others. Prices fell back a little after an early rise, but closed on an uptrend.

What the new level of the franc will be remained undetermined. Premier Blum's plan calls for a devaluation of between about a quarter and a third. In unofficial dealings in New York, the French unit was said to have traded between 5 and 5.12 cents, compared with Friday's close of 6.58⅜, its recent parity 6.63 cents, and a parity of 3.93 cents before the United States devalued.

Wall street was inclined to the opinion that the huge premiums at which French dollar bonds have been selling, since France has continued to pay on them at the rate of the old undervalued dollars in which they were written, might be wiped out or sharply diminished. There were few dealings, but the French Government 7½ per cents traded at $140 per $100 par value, off $16.50.

Future Is Problematical.

What the fate may be of certain other currencies more or less related to the franc was regarded as problematical. Switzerland moved at once to readjust its currency. Holland announced that it would stand pat, but Wall street and London were inclined to the view that it might later fall in line. Germany, Italy, Poland and several other European countries have already placed their currencies under rigid control, and some banking quarters thought they might eventually bring them into adjustment.

The international exchange problem has been strangling trade in Europe for years, economists explained. As result of the disastrous declines in currency values in Germany and Russia after the World War, and the severe drop in France from 1924 to 1926, most of continental Europe has been extremely fearful of currency tinkering or adjustments of any sort.

When the full impetus of world depression sent panicky capital scurrying about Europe a few years ago, restriction after restriction was put upon movement of funds to uphold the parity of currencies. Germany, with virtually no gold, still maintains an official par value of the reichsmark, although trading is only permitted for certain essential needs. France kept her currency on a free gold standard by hoisting tariffs, imposing import quotas, and imposing other restrictions on the movement of goods.

France a Holdout.

France has been the outstanding exponent of maintaining currency undevalued. With the French currency brought to a workable level, a number of authorities feel the way may be opened for a gradual lifting of restrictions upon dealings in currency and goods. Economists point out that there are, of course, other obstacles to the freeing of trade, such as fear of another European war.

It was recalled, however, that the insistence of the French and their economic allies upon an agreement which would aid them in sustaining their currencies at the old levels was the chief factor blocking progress at the world economic conference in London three years ago. England and the United States were not ready to make commitments upon stabilization, and the gold bloc insisted that without stabilization, any other major agreement would be useless.

Stock sales for the week amounted to 8,409,220 shares, compared with 6,119,002 last week, and 5,863,914 corresponding week last year. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 348,760,946 shares, compared with 230,910,112 a year ago and 265,656,943 two years ago.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY NEARS YEAR'S PEAK

Week's Upturn Brings Index to but One Per Cent Under Best.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Moving moderately higher this week, industrial activity throughout the nation was only 1 per cent below the year's peak.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index rose to 94.7 from 94.0 last week, and compares with 71.0 in the same period a year ago.

New tops for the recovery movement were the order of the day. Freight carloadings jumped to the highest point since 1930, electric power output climbed to the best level in history, and steel mill operations pushed ahead at the fastest rate since the spring of 1930.

Reflecting virtual shutdowns throughout the industry, automobile output dropped to what is expected to be the year's bottom. New models are under way in many plants and most lines that haven't already done so are expected to start on 1937 cars this week.

The sharp upturn in steel activity is reported to stem in large measure from renewed buying by motor car makers for their new models.

The tempo of cotton manufacturing increased as retail outlets continued to take large quantities to meet heavy demand.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components based on latest available statistics and with 1929-30 as 100, compared as follows:

	Latest Week	Prev. Week	Year Ago
Composite index—	94.7	94.0	71.0

$1,300,000,000 GOLD LOSS IN LAST YEAR BY FRANC

Reflected Primarily the Flight of Capital to Safer Harbors.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Losing $55,000,000 in gold during the latest week, France has had $1,300,000,000 of its enormous hoard of the metal drained away in the past year. This loss of 27 cents of each dollar in gold held 12 months ago, of course, reflects primarily the flight of capital to safer harbors as a result of (1) devaluation fears, and (2) uncertainty over the future course of the Socialist Blum Government in recent months.

Bank of France gold holdings compare as follows:

Week ended Sept. 18 —	$3,469,000,000
Previous week — — —	3,524,000,000
Same week last year —	4,768,000,000

MOST ACTIVE SATURDAY TRADE SINCE APRIL 4

Buying Goes Chiefly Into Industrial Shares Favored Recently.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A broad buying movement lifted stocks briskly today.

The break in the prolonged suspense over the franc released demand for securities that turned the week-end market into the most active session on the Stock Exchange since April 4. In the two hours of trading 900,760 shares changed hands.

The buying went chiefly into industrial shares favored during the recent recovery trend.

Leading active stocks climbed fractionally to more than three points. The Associated Press average of 60 issues recaptured most of its loss of the previous day and finished .8 of a point higher at 67.9.

Chrysler, a lure for bulls in view of the motor industry's shift to manufacture of new models, was whirled up more than four points at one time. It finished at 122¼, up 3⅝.

Bethlehem Steel rebounded for a net gain of nearly 2 points at 69⅝. Du Pont recovered 2⅛ at 161⅞ and Electric Autolite came back nearly two at a closing of 44⅜.

Along with motors and steels, rails were favored for the seasonal expansion in operations evident in the week's carloading figures, showing traffic at a new peak for the recovery. New York Central, Atlantic Coast Line, Baltimore & Ohio, Illinois Central and Southern Pacific sold up one to more than two points.

As a group, rails were close to their best prices of the major bull trend.

Scattered stocks went counter to the main trend, among them American Can, which finished a point lower at 123.

Some quarters were disposed to be cautious until the effect of franc revision could be judged better inasmuch as it was thought a considerable outflow of gold from this country might result in the repatriation of foreign funds.

Commodity Prices Down From the Highest Level of Year

Numerous Cross Currents Offset List of Staples—Grain and Livestock Markets Are Soft Spots.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26. — With grain and livestock markets the softest spots, commodity prices slid away from the year's top last week.

Numerous cross-currents buffeted the list of staples. Wheat and corn, for example, parted ways. The former rushed ahead into new high territory for the year, the latter giving ground sharply.

Wheat's handsome performance was attributed by commodity men to the world situation rather than any domestic developments. Demand has been expanding steadily, they say, while a wet European harvest and wide drouth damage here cut potential supplies. Stocks are known to be the lowest in many years.

Corn, on the other hand, was affected almost entirely by local factors. The unusually high price commanded by the grain recently is reported to have caused a shrinkage in demand. At the same time estimates of the yield were being raised slightly. Other grains took their cues from the leaders, rye advancing and oats dipping.

Index Is Lower.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale commodities dropped to 81.16 from 81.47 last week and compares with 77.43 in the same period a year ago.

The upturn in cotton was attributed to the high rate of operations in the spinning industry, both here and abroad, which has raised world consumption in the latest crop year to the highest on record.

The divergent paths of hog and cattle prices widened. The drop in quotations on porkers, caused by large marketings, was accompanied by weakness in lard. Rising consumer incomes are held mainly responsible for the continued uptrend in cattle, beef being favored as meat when people can meet its price. Lamb declined slightly.

Food costs picked up, with eggs, cocoa and flour sharing the gains. The latter was affected by a reduction in supplies as a result of the strikes that have paralyzed Minneapolis mills for several weeks. Sugar fell back under pressure of trade estimates that import quotas would be considerably above actual use.

Industrial staples nudged ahead fractionally to a new top for the year. Heavily weighted hides, in good industrial demand, more than offset minor setbacks in rubber, bituminous coal, turpentine and linseed oil. Among non-ferrous metals, tin was down a bit.

Wheat Index Shows.

Textiles weakened, with wool extending its decline and silk turning down following recent gains.

The index, with its components, based on 1926 as 100, compared as follows:

French Bonds Break Sharply as Domestic Issues Move Higher

Foreign Government's 7½s Plunge 16½ Points in One Sale—Largest Saturday Market Since February.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—French bonds broke sharply as domestic issues moved higher in the bond market today.

Slow to open, as traders digested implications of devaluation of the franc, French Government 7½s plunged 16½ points on one transaction to 140, a new low for the year. The unstamped 7s went unwanted after being offered at 150, off 10. Other issues influenced by the anticipated 25 to 34 per cent depreciation of the currency included Soissons 6s, off 8 at 155¼, and Nord Railway 6½s, off 6 at 120, each on small turnover. Other foreign issues clung to a narrow range.

Both U. S. Governments and corporate bonds attracted heavy trading as total volume for all bonds reached the impressive figure of $9,185,000, the largest Saturday turnover since Feb. 8, when it was $10,617,000. A week ago the aggregate was $7,493,000.

Buying of Rails.

Railroad loans constituted the focal point of buying operations. Great Western 4s rose ⅞ to 42½, Alleghany 5s of 1944 added 1¼ at 99¾, "Katy" adjustment 5s gained ⅞ to 65, Baltimore & Ohio 4½s advanced ½ to 80¾, and New York Central 6s added 1⅞ at 117½.

Utility issues held about even and industrials tended to sag a bit.

Although the Federal list flinched a little in early trading, prices hardened later and the majority of Treasuries closed higher with gains ranging to 6-32 of a point. Guaranteed loans dipped about 2-32.

The Associated Press averages for 20 rails gained .2 of a point to 96.8. Minor declines were shown by the industrials and foreigns, while the utility and low yield groups stood unchanged on the day.

Rise Early in Week.

Prices made steady progress toward higher levels during the week until near the end when reaction developed coincident with revaluation of the French franc.

Demand for corporate issues was comparatively heavy in the first four days, particularly for speculative rail and industrial obligations. Growing concern over the political and economic conditions in France, however, shifted activity to the selling side and on Friday the turnover amounted to the largest for a full day's session in several weeks.

Encouraging business news included higher steel operations, improved carloadings, greater coal demand and industrial expansion.

The gradual descent of United States Government loans since the September quarter financing went unabated, however, although trading was light and daily setbacks were limited.

$100,000,000 New Bonds.

Foreign bonds reflected the jumpy condition of European nerves. Early in the week Polish issues took the spotlight by dropping sharply on relatively small volume. Their "turn" was eclipsed, however, by the rapid descent of fresh obligations which set in with the first inkling that devaluation was at hand.

New bonds entering the market exceeded $100,000,000, shading slightly the preceding week's total, but topping the $74,988,000 aggregate in the corresponding 1935 week. Public utility and railroad flotations were up sharply on the week, but municipal offerings fell off by more than half. There were no new industrial issues compared with $55,600,000 the week before.

CURB LEADERS ARE BETTER AT THE CLOSE

Show Favorable Response to the Overnight News From Paris.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The Curb joined other financial markets today in a favorable response to the French currency revaluation plan.

On an irregular advance during the first hour there was some increase in offerings, but at the finish leaders generally were improved fractions to a point or more.

Gulf Oil, Margay Oil, New York and Honduras Rosario Mining, Apex Electric and Dow Chemical were among those scoring the largest gains. Fractionally on the plus side were Wayne Pump, Niagara Hudson Power, American Light & Traction, Electric Bond & Share and United Gas.

Transactions totaled 184,000 shares against 204,000 the previous Saturday.

DETAILED MOVEMENTS IN EXCHANGE MARKET

Million Pounds Sterling Offering by Russian Bank Quickly Taken.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The French franc and the pound sterling slipped downward today in the New York foreign exchange market, the only major center where dealings were recorded.

There was no trading in either London or Paris because of the French devaluation move, and in New York early quotations were mostly nominal.

Actual transactions near the close however, placed the franc at 5.12 cents, down 1.46⅝ cents from the overnight close. Sterling, quoted at 4.90 early in the trading after reports the Russian State Bank had offered 1,000,000 pounds sterling at the market, improved to finish at 4.97, off 5 cents. Secretary Morgenthau announced the American equalization fund had absorbed the Russian offering.

The Dutch guilder was off 1.53 cents to 65.95 cents and the Canadian dollar slipped .00 5-64 of a cent to 99.93¾ cents. The Swiss franc was not quoted.

There was no trading in foreign exchange in Paris or London.

Foreign exchanges were as follows: Britain in dollars, others in cents. Great Britain, demand 4.97, cables 4.97; 60-day bills 3.96. France, demand 5.12, cables 5.12. To Make Mechanical Rubber Goods

AKRON, O., Sept. 26.—The General Tire & Rubber Co. announced today plans for entering the mechanical rubber goods industry, with the opening of a plant in Wabash, Ind., where production will be under way by the first of 1937.

General officials said that present plans do not contemplate the production of motorcar tires at the Wabash plant. The plant site covers about 30 acres.

Chicago Stocks Strong.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26. — Chicago stocks developed a strong tone in an active trade today. Buying was largely sympathetic with strength in New York. Gains were largely fractional, however.

Lead Consumers Lose None of Their Enthusiasm for Supplies

Shipments Last Month Heaviest in Last Six Years—Copper Trade More Orderly.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Renewed heavy buying in steel lifted production to 73½ per cent of national capacity, a new high for the year.

Impending price advances on a number of finished and semi-finished products, and the possibility of an advance on wire products for the fourth quarter, has vigorously stimulated buying.

Delivery difficulties and a shortage of raw steel may tend to check a further expansion of operations in the future. Buying of sheets by the automobile indutry, and a good miscellaneous demand, leaves sheet mills booked through November and in some instances for the entire fourth quarter.

Recent speculative excitement in copper abated and the market presented a more orderly appearance. Foreign buying was in smaller volume, due to the uncertainties created by the monetary situation abroad. Electrolytic copper for export was practically unchanged, holding bettween 9.87½@9.90 cents a pound, c. i. f. European base ports. The domestic demand held up well in view of the large amount of the metal already under contract. September statistics are expected to show domestic consumption t around 70,000 tons, against 65,000 tons, in August. More opposition to an advance in price has developed and the present 9¾ cents a pound is expected to hold for the nearby future.

While the tin trade marked time watching the course of the international committee meeting, prices sagged 55 to 60 points, due to the financial situation in Europe. The international committee extended the present 90 per cent export quota arrangement through the fourth quarter.

Lead consumers lost none of their enthusiasm for the acquisition of supplies. Paint, pigment, sheet and pike trades, as well as cable makers, despite assurances of no immediate price advance, have continued to buy eagerly. Shipments last month were the largest in the past six years. Refined stocks on Aug. 31 of 218,000 tons were the lowest since Feb. 28, 1934. Current supplies are equal to five months consumption, against reserves of 10 months consumption at the beginning of the year.

Zinc demand was quiet and prices unchanged. There was a fair amount of purchasing for prompt delivery. More activity was noted in the Tri-State area, with production and shipments the liveliest since June.

While American quotations advanced ⅝ cents, Chinese antimony in bond remained unchanged.

FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

By the Associated Press.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 26.—Wheat futures closed about one penny higher on active covering, uncertain financial situation and importers buying.

Cotton advanced on heavy general buying induced by the slump in sterling and the devaluation of the French franc. Contracts were supplied by profit taking and Bombay selling on the advance.

London and Paris—Closed on Saturday.

WHEAT MARKET AVERAGES LITTLE UP IN TRADING

Traders View Devaluation of Franc as Having Already Been Discounted in Full.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Recovering poise, wheat markets averaged a little higher today, with most traders looking upon devaluation of the franc as having already been discounted in full.

Prospective resulting improvement of general business conditions received a good deal of attention, together with renewed notice of a big shrinkage of wheat supplies in exporting countries. Relative strength of Winnipeg wheat quotations much of the time, compared with Chicago, was more or less regarded here as a practical offset for a sharp drop in sterling exchange rates.

To the surprise of many observers, no month-end fireworks in September corn contracts were witnessed. It was indicated that a large outstanding September open interest, about 2,500,000 bushels, would in the main be satisfactorily adjusted despite smallness of stocks of corn here.

Wheat closed steady at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ higher; September, $1.17¼@¾; December, $1.15⅛@¼; May, $1.14⅛@¼. Corn ⅛c off to ⅜c up; September, $1.16@1.16½; December, 95⅛@⅜c; May, 90¼@½c. Oats ⅛@¾c advanced; December, 42⅞c, and rye ⅛@1⅛c down. The outcome in provisions varied from unchanged figures to a bulge of 20 cents.

Big Exports Friday.

Contributing to firmness of wheat prices was talk current that export purchases yesterday at Winnipeg had been on a huge scale, aggregating possibly 4,000,000 bushels. A further steadying influence was emphasis given to statements that millions of bushels of wheat futures thrown into the Chicago pit yesterday were absorbed in a remarkable manner and that selling pressure here today was of no unusual volume. Furthermore, Winnipeg messages said devalution of the franc removed an uncertainty which had hung over the wheat market for months.

Buying of wheat futures was based to a considerable extent on belief expressed in various quarters that the financial crisis abroad had not changed the intrinsic value of wheat one iota, although the yardstick was altered. Friends of higher prices stressed also reports that Argentina and Australia have about exhausted their supplies of old wheat, and that their new crops will not be available until after the first of the year. It was contended, too, that the Danubian surplus of wheat has likewise been pretty well sold, leaving Canada the sole country with any large quantity to be disposed of.

September Corn Up.

September corn moved up around a cent a bushel at one time $1.17, within 2½ cents of the season's high. Deferred deliveries of corn strengthened near the close after showing an easy tone early. Oats followed corn. Rye drifted lower.

Shorts were buyers of provisions.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 47,181,000 bushels; corn, 8,500,00. Open interest in wheat was 92,197,000 bushels, and in corn, 52,112,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Sept. 26. — The wheat and corn futures markets were without bids or offers at week-end session.

Wheat at Liverpool closed 1⅛@1⅜d higher after ⅞@1⅛d higher start.

Winnipeg wheat opened ¼@¾c higher and early was ½@⅝c up. The close was ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN

In the cash grain market Saturday soft wheat was steady to ½c higher in a rather slow session. The supply was light and consisted mainly of under-grades which were difficult to move. Millers were the purchasers although order buyers showed some interest. Hard wheat was steady. Milling interests also lead the way in this department although they made no purchases until late in the session. Corn was 1c lower. LIVESTOCK PRICES LOWER LAST WEEK

Hog Market Down to Level of Lowest Time Since Last June.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, East St. Louis, Ill., Sept. 26—(United States Department of Agriculture): Receipts Saturday were: Hogs, 1100; cattle, 400; calves, 400; sheep, 50.

Following the downward movement of dressed pork, swine values were under pressure almost from start to finish of the present week and prices dropped to a par with the lowest time since last June. Losses for the week figured 25c to 30c on weights from 170 lbs. upward, including packing sows, while light lights and pigs were reduced 50c to mostly 75c. Closing trade was at the low point of the week although Saturday supplies were too scanty and not sufficiently representative to test the market. Supplies here this week totaled around 42,000 compared with 40,846 last week and 29,272 similar week last year. Most 200 to 270 lb. weights sold Saturday at $10.00 to $10.10 but nothing strictly choice was offered and it was believed that such kinds would have sold up to $10.15 or possibly $10.25, the latter being the Friday top. Better 270 to 300 lb. butchers were quotable at $9.75 to $10.00. Good to choice 170 to 190 lb. averages were salable at $9.60 to $10.00, 140 to 160 lbs. $8.50 to $9.10, and 100 to 130 lb. pigs $7.50 to $8.25. Packing sows finished at $8.00 to $8.75.

CATTLE—Receipts 400; calves 400. Compared with close of last week: Native steers steady to 25c lower; western grass steers 25@40c lower; good and choice mixed yearlings and heifers steady to 25c higher; others steady to 25c lower; cows steady to 15c lower; bulls steady; vealers $1 higher; stock cattle unchanged; tops for the week: 894-lb and 997-lb yearlings, $10; heavy steers $9.65; Oklahoma grass steers, $7.85; 880-lb mixed yearlings, $10; heifers, $5.35; beef cows, $6; sausage bulls, $5.50; vealers, $10.75; stock steers, $6.75; bulks for the week: Native steers, $7.50@9.65; western grass steers, $4.25@7.40; mixed yearlings and heifers, $5.40@9; beef cows, $4.25@5; cutters and low cutters, $3@3.75; stock steers, $5@5.35; closing top on sausage bulls, $5.25; vealers, $10.75.

SHEEP—Receipts 50; compared with a week ago: Lambs, 50@75c lower; ewes steady; top lambs for week, $9.75; late top, $9.50; late packer top, $8.75; closing bulk lambs, $8.50@9; buck lambs, $1 less; throwouts, $5@6; yearlings, $7@7.75; slaughter ewes, $2.50@3.50.

Cotton futures closed barely steady, 7 to 14 higher. October, 11.94; December, 11.88-89; January, 11.86; March, 11.84; May, 11.81-82; July, 11.74. Spot steady; middling, 12.34.

Horses and Mules.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Sept. 26.—The most effective buying the past week was in mules and this class ruled strong on good aged material, particularly small and medium sized cotton offerings. Local dealers had a good trade and reduced their stocks materially.

Horse trading as a whole was a little draggy. Good Southern mares that were gentle and top grades of fillies were in fairly good call, but smooth mouthed stock and geldings had to go at relatively low terms.

Buying of Cuban riding horses is still in progress and some 700 more are needed to complete the quota of 2000 head.

*NATIVE HORSE QUOTATIONS.

Good to choice draft, $125@160; medium to good draft, $100@125; good to choice chunks, $100@125; smooth-mouthed chunks, $80@110; large farm mares, $125@150; medium farm mares, $90@110; fillies, yearlings and twos; small, common, $30@50; good size, $60@85; extra size and quality, $120@160; (horse colts sell $15@25 per head less than fillies); good Southern mares, $75@100; small Southern mares, $40@60; small cheap horses, $30@50.

*MULE QUOTATIONS.

Farm mules, 15.2 to 16 hands, $110@140; colt mules, good size and bone, $100@150; colt mules, small, $60@85; draft mules, $150@200; mine mules, 15.3 to 16 hands, $120@140; mine mules, 14 to 15 hands, $75@100; choice cotton mules, 15.1 to 16 hands, $165@200; choice cotton mules, 14.2 to 15 hands, $125@150; small green mules, over 3 years old, $50@85.

*Quotations are for average animals and do not cover those of outstanding quality or the very cheapest grade.

HIGHER COTTON CLOSE CREDIT TO FRENCH NEWS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Cotton was higher today on buying attributed to a constructive view of overnight developments in connection with the devaluation of the franc.

December advanced to 11.94, or 16 points net higher and closed at 11.88. The general market ended barely steady, but from 7 to 14 points net higher.

After opening steady at an advance of 5 to 7 points, the market showed some further irregularity attributed to technical readjustments, but quickly turned upward on trade demand and covering. Houses with French and continental connections were reported among the early buyers. While the market encountered considerable hedging, it appeared to be readily absorbed.

Closing quotations were 5 to 6 points off from the best under increased hedging in late trading. Prospects for rain and colder weather in the western belt over the weekend seemed to have brought in some buying during the morning. The market showed indications of an improved technical position following recent liquidation. The amount of cotton on ship-board awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 37,000 bales against 77,000 last year.

Spot steady; middling 12.34.

Cotton was subject to conflicting influences during the past week with fluctuations more or less irregular.

Continued heavy hedging was absorbed by a persistent demand from the trade, but rallies from an early week decline were followed by reactions later when sentiment seemed to be unsettled by uncertainty over the French monetary situation.

The report of the Census Bureau on Wednesday placing the amount of cotton ginned prior to Sept. 16 at 3,707,142 bales compared with 2,315,831 last year, was above expectations. It represented the largest ginnings to this date since 1930.

National Capital News

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26. — Industrial production for the week ended Sept. 19, the Commerce Department reports, did not change significantly from relatively high levels which have been maintained since August. Steel production for the week was set at 73 per cent of capacity, or about the same as the August peak.

The Commerce Department reports that chain drug store sales during August were down 2 per cent from July but were 1.5 per cent over the same month a year ago. The greatest gain over August, 1935, was shown in fountain sales, which were 10.2 per cent higher.

Shipments of galvanized range boilers by 19 establishments totaled 103,799 during August, Census Bureau statistics show, compared with 78,442 in July and 63,878 in August, 1935.

Treasury statistics show that about 70 per cent of the bonus bonds have been cashed. Of the estimated 3,518,191 veterans entitled to adjusted compensation, 3,380,519 have received their bonds and checks. A total of 35,334,925 bonds valued at $1,766,746,250 have been issued. Bonds redeemed now aggregate $1,238,244,500, or about 70 per cent. On Sept. 5, 69 per cent had been cashed and on Aug. 29, 65 per cent. The total of bond redemptions, plus $80,182,292 issued in odd-amount checks, the Treasury says, indicates that the Bonus Act has placed $1,318,426,792 in circulation since June 15.

Preliminary Commerce Department figures indicate retail sales of new passenger automobiles in August were 15 per cent higher than the same month a year ago and 46 per cent above August, 1934. For the first eight months of this year, total sales were 24 per cent above the corresponding period last year and 69 per cent over the similar 1934 months. The department's index of sales showed a seasonal decline to 91.5 for August, compared with 104.5 in July and 109.5 in June. The index is based on 1929-31 as 100.

STEEL WORKERS TO ASK FOR PARLEY ON WAGES

Chairman Says They Expect to Make Demand in Reasonable Length of Time.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 26. — Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, announced today that "within a reasonable length of time" he expected to demand a conference with steel operators for the formulation of a wage agreement, or agreements. He said the program of the campaign had been highly satisfactory.

Murray, who is a vice-president of the United Mine Workers, called a meeting of the full organizing committee for next Tuesday to report on the progress of the three-month campaign to organize the steel industry's 450,000 wage earners into one union.

He said: "I feel that if the steel workers' organizing committee decided to change its policy with respect to the organizing campaign of steel workers that within a comparatively short time they could build up a situation, numerically speaking, to close the entire industry down."

Don't Want Strike Threats.

Murray asserted the committee's policy, however, had been dedicated to building up a permanent structure "without resorting to strike threats," adding:

"But we do believe that within a reasonable length of time, operating under our present policy, we will have secured a sufficient number of members to warrant a demand for a joint conference for the purpose of negotiating a wage agreement, or agreements.

"Responsibility for failure to then meet with us will lie squarely upon the shoulders of the operators."

The Iron and Steel Institute, the membership of which includes more than 95 per cent of the industry's operators, announced soon after the opening of the organization drive that it would bend every resource to keep the open shop.

Murray declared the program of the campaign had been highly satisfactory and added that if all the new members who have signed up were paying dues, the money would more than finance the drive.

First Hint on Cost.

He also gave the first hint as to the campaign cost in saying an 8-cents-a-month assessment on the members of the 14 organizations affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization could carry on the campaign indefinitely.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Industrial Committee, asserted some time ago that its membership exceeded 1,250,000. Based on this figure, the assessment Murray mentioned would involve around $100,000 a month.

Murray said developments of the past two weeks have convinced him of the campaign's success.

He continued: "The facts are plainly obvious from the company unions aroused discontent over wages and working conditions.

"I refer particularly to the demands made on the United States Steel subsidiaries by these company union representatives for higher wages."

Groups He Refers To.

Murray had reference to several groups of employe representatives of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation which have forwarded requests for increased pay after Benjamin Fairless, the president, notified them the company did not feel it could pay higher wages at this time.

A company spokesman recently announced there would be a wage conference with employe representatives from all the Carnegie-Illinois plants. The date for this has not been set.

ALLEGED KILLING DURING 'THIRD DEGREE' TO GRAND JURY

Pennsylvania Attorney General to Prosecute Two Troopers and Detective.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 26.—The Fayette County Court ordered the September grand jury to reconvene next Tuesday to investigate the death of Frank C. Monaghan, 64, a hotel owner. Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti was named special prosecutor last night by Gov. George H. Earle.

Earle charged that Monaghan was killed during a "third degree" in the stabbing of County Detective John C. Wall. Margiotti said he wanted the grand jury to inquire "into the conduct of certain officers, certain members of the Pennsylvania state police and others."

Three officers are now free under $5000 bail each on murder charges. They are State Policemen Anthony Sanute and Stacy Gunderman and Assistant County Detective Wilbert Minerd. Margiotti ordered 66 subpenaes issued for public officials, newspaper men and others.

MISS LILLIE C. MITCHELL, TEACHER FOR 43 YEARS, DIES

Director of Sherman School Kindergarten 25 Years; Funeral Tomorrow.

Miss Lillie C. Mitchell, a teacher in the St. Louis public schools for 43 years, died yesterday morning at her home, 5515 Cabanne avenue, of complications after an illness of two years.

She was director of the Sherman School kindergarten, 3942 Flad avenue, for 25 years before illness forced her to take a leave of absence.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow at St. Rose's Church, 1001 Goodfellow boulevard, with burial in Calvary Cemetery. Three sisters and two brothers survive.

TWO OFFICERS KILL MAN WHO TRIES TO SHOOT AT THEM

Alec Whalen, Negro, Shot to Death in East St. Louis; Had Been Drinking.

Alec Whalen, Negro, railroad laborer, was shot to death last night by two East St. Louis detectives in front of his home at 1918 Piggott avenue, East St. Louis, after he had threatened them with a shotgun.

Negro neighbors told police that Whalen, who was 45 years old, got his $70 monthly pay yesterday afternoon and began spending the money on liquor until he had only about $30 left. Friends took that away from him and gave it to his wife, Lillian. She went to a grocery at Nineteenth street and Market avenue, and he followed her there.

Police were called, and Detective Sergeant Edgar Sherrod and Detective Richard Hudson drove Mrs. Whalen home.

When the car stopped at the Whalen home, he came out carrying a shotgun. Hudson got out with a repeating shotgun.

Whalen, the detectives said, pointed the shotgun at Hudson and pulled one trigger. The shell missed fire. Hudson fired one shot which struck the Negro in the left side from 10 feet away, and Sherrod, who had left the driver's seat and had run around to rear of the car, fired twice with a revolver, one shot striking Whalen in the abdomen. He died on the way to St. Mary's Hospital.

Pershing Parent-Teachers' Meeting.

The Pershing School Parent-Teachers' Association will meet Oct. 5 at the school auditorium, 6761 Bartmer avenue, University City. Pupils of the third grade will give a program of songs and sketches.

ROSECAN CRITICISES ANDERSON FOR STAND ON ROOSEVELT

Republican Says Opponent's 100 Per Cent Pledge Makes Him Subservient to President.

Harry P. Rosecan, Republican nominee for Congressman from the Twelfth St. Louis District, speaking last night at a banquet at Century Boat Club, criticised C. Arthur Anderson, his Democratic opponent, for Anderson's pledge to support President Roosevelt "100 per cent."

"The President is known to be flirting with what he calls Consumers' Co-operative Association," said Rosecan. "Such a thing may be beneficial or it may not. In spite of all the unknown details and material provisions, my Democratic opponent is already pledged to support the plan, having promised to 'follow Roosevelt 100 per cent.'

"This places him in the ridiculous position of favoring legislation before it is even proposed or examined. It is just that kind of subservience and lack of independence that made the last Congress a group of trained seals. It is just such reliance upon the will and thought of one man, the President, that is eating away at the American system of representative government."

Two Escape From Burning Plane.

SOMERSET, Pa., Sept. 26.—The pilot and a passenger escaped from the flaming wreckage of an airplane that fell into three wires carrying 22,000 volts of electricity late today and then smashed into a wooden shed. The plane clipped off four posts from a porch on which three women were standing. They escaped injury. The pilot was Joe Specht and the passenger, Paul Christner, both of Somerset, who leaped from the wreckage before the plane burst into flames.

BARRETT SAYS STARK IS AFRAID OF ISSUES

Declares Democratic Candidate Misreprsented Financial Condition of State.

Former Attorney-General Jesse W. Barrett, Republican nominee for Governor, opening the Jefferson County Republican campaign at Maxville last night, asserted that his Democratic opponent, Maj. Lloyd C. Stark, evaded issues raised by him and misrepresented the financial condition of Missouri during the present Democratic administration.

"Once more the Major has ducked," Barrett said, referring to Maj. Stark's message to the St. Louis League of Women Voters, saying that he could not attend a luncheon meeting next Tuesday for all candidates for Governor, although his acceptance previously had been received. The luncheon was canceled.

"Of course, we understand the Major was not afraid of me," Barrett continued. "Why should he be? He is afraid of the issues. Why shouldn't he be?"

Assails Democratic Record.

Chief among the issues, Barrett said, was the record of the present Democratic administration.

"The Major has said repeatedly that the administration of Gov. Park, in addition to meeting its own bills, was compelled to liquidate a huge deficit contracted by the administration of Gov. Caulfield," Barrett said. "I call on him for the facts and figures. I believe that I will then be able to show that Gov. Caulfield's administration left not a deficit, but an actual and substantial surplus."

Barrett asserted that, contrary to the statement of Maj. Stark, the State budget under the present administration, had not been balanced. Although the entire sum available from sales and liquor taxes was needed for relief, he said, $3,719,000 of $13,729,375 was placed in the general revenue fund although intended for the emergency program.

"It is by this huge diversion of relief money that the present administration has been able to make the specious claim that it has balanced its budget," Barrett said. "It has not balanced its budget with the unfortunates who are on relief nor with the aged who have been waiting for old-age assistance. They are being told that the funds have run short. They have not been told where those funds went.

On Relief Situation.

"The whole State last March was calling for a special session of the Legislature in order that the relief program could be continued and we were told by the present administration that additional money could not be provided without an increase in taxes. I challenge Maj. Stark to deny that there was at that time a very considerable sum of money which could have been used for relief. A special session could have given millions to people who were starving and there still would have remained funds sufficient to run the government had there been proper economies in the ordinary expense of operation."

Barrett criticised State Superintendent of Insurance R. Emmett O'Malley for his agreement to pay James P. Aylward, Democratic National Committeeman and chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and Jerome Walsh, another Kansas City lawyer, 25 per cent of the amount which may be collected in tax suits filed by the Insurance Department against fraternal insurance organizations. If they collect $20,000,000 sought the fee of $5,000,000 will set a new record for Missouri, Barrett observed.

O'Malley also was criticised for setting aside $2,000,000 for lawyers' fees after compromising the suit to reduce fire insurance rates, and refusing to disclose how the money was distributed.

Red Devil, Most Daring Flyer In Loyal Forces, Shot Down In the Fighting Near Toledo Government Troops Blow Up Bridge in Their Retreat But Rebels Ford River and Push On.

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER.
(Copyright, 1936.)

ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF TOLEDO, Spain, Sept. 25 (Delayed).—Only six miles from Toledo, Gen. Jose Varela, newly-appointed Commander-in-Chief of the rebel army on this front, today fought his way across the Guadarrama River.

This was the last natural obstacle to the rebels' advance to relieve the Alcazar. I stood on the road with El Misian, Moroccan Major in command of the farthest advance column of Moors, who announced: "Toledo will fall by Sunday at the latest."

The Foreign Legion and Moors rushed to the Toledo-Madrid road and cut it at the village of Varola. Lieutenant-Colonel Arsenio and Maj. Castejon reached the Guadarrama River together.

Loyalists held the bridgehead and the rebels were prepared for desperate resistance, because behind the river the land rises in a bluff 300 feet high, making an ideal defensive position.

Fighting in the Air.

Air fighting preceded the battle. Rebel fighters downed two Government planes. One fell in sight of headquarters. It did not burn but dropped like a plummet, landing full on the nose.

Legionnaires ran to the plane and back shouting delight, for the pilot, who with his observer was instantly killed, turned out to be the most daring of Madrid bombers, nicknamed the Red Devil.

While Gen. Varela and his aids studied the battlefield through a telescope and binoculars, some younger officers divided up into strips the Red Devil's red airplane wings.

From the front yard of the farmhouse being used as headquarters we had a perfect view of the battle.

On the left a column of Legionnaires under Maj. Castejon, on the right a column under Lieutenant-Colonel Barron, and in the senter the column of Lieutenant-Colonel Asensio went forward in waves, while the rebel artillery, concealed by branches of trees, shelled the bridgehead and the heights beyond.

Blasting of Bridge.

Loyalist shells burst in the fields just beyond us. It looked as though the Loyalists would finally take advantage of their last strong position, but soon a terrific explosion blew the middle section of the old stone bridge into bits and the rebel officers knew the Loyalists had decided they could not hold the bridge.

Gen. Varela stepped out on the road with his staff, packed up his instruments and we followed them to the bridge.

Litter bearers passed us carrying wounded Moors. One of them was far gone and the bearers put him in the shade. A few hours later when we came back he was still there, but his handkerchief was7890$..—but with his handkerchief over his face and his clothes tied together, as is the Mohammedan custom for the dead.

We had tramped along about half a mile when an armored car came by. Gen. Varela and Lieutenant-Asensio put two soldiers out of it and took their places and sped on to the front. The officers in this war are usually right up in the line with their men.

Now we came so near the enemy that Maj. Castejon stopped, surveyed the road with his glasses, and then led us off right through plowed fields.

Through thorn and brush we marched under brilliant sunshine, as hot as midsummer, until Maj. Castejon passed his batteries, then back on the road again we listened to the sound of bullets while the shells of rebel guns whined over our heads.

A Story Book Battle.

This was the sort of battle one reads about in story books. It was complete down to a red-fezzed dispatch rider who came galloping up to Maj. Castejon and then off at breakneck speed across the fields. Soon a truck with telephone linesmen drove up to us and Maj. Castejon got in, the driver leaving us to plod on foot.

By the time we reached the bridge, Legionnaires and Moors were fording the river in great number. We took off our shoes and stockings and waded. The cold water, after two hours' marching, was good.

Up the road over the crests we reached the famous El Misian, only Moorish Major in the army.

We stopped with him. Company after company of Moors in their tattered khaki and multi-colored turbans streamed by. To the left long lines of them advanced in single file.

El Misian sent his men out to deploy and, as far as we could see on either side, the landscape was dotted with soldiers.

Loyalists Surrender.

While we stood with El Misian an astounding incident occurred. A loyalist soldier, utterly innocent, calmly walked up to a Lieutenant of the civil guards standing with us, saluted, and said, "When do we eat?"

The Lieutenant stared at him for a moment and then said: "You first give me your gun." The loyalist soldier, surprised, handed over his rifle and the Lieutenant exclaimed, "You fool, you're a prisoner."

Then came the whistle for airplanes and, led by El Misian, we dived into a ditch while overhead roared five big Madrid bombers and far above them four wasp-like fighters.

"Lie flat and don't move," El Misian instructed.

The bombs made piles of earth for miles along the road. The planes went away and we marched on forward to the last crest held by the Moors.

There, just beyond the next low line of hills, lay Toledo, just six miles away. The Moors were lying flat on the plowed fields and, the same color as the earth, they yawned and went to sleep.

Capturing Toledo and rescuing the 1500 beleaguered rebels in the Alcazar will be another job for the Moors.

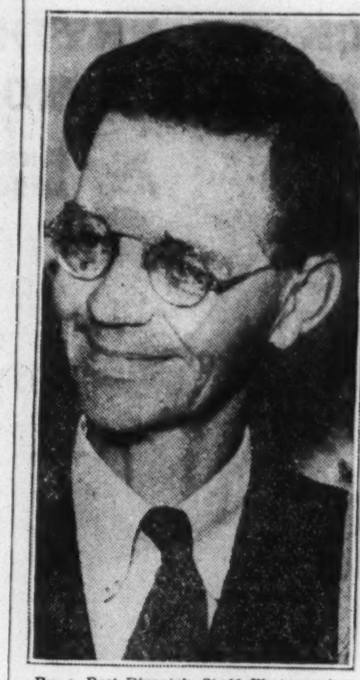
HE OWNS THE HAT



—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.
ALBERT E. WICKEY.

OWNER BEWILDERED BY HIS HAT'S TRAVELS

Albert E. Wickey Tells How His Ex-Chapeau Started Around World.

When Albert E. Wickey retired from the Railway Express Agency last May 1 he was a shy, inconspicuous little man who had been a freight handler for 18 years. Now, because of a joke his fellow employes played on him at that time he has achieved a sort of international renown—at least among airplane pilots and expressmen.

For while Wickey lives quietly in his well-kept home on a dead-end street in southwest St. Louis, a hat he once wore is making journeys by airplane, Zeppelin, boat, and train from continent to continent. Meanwhile it has been the subject of newspaper accounts and radio broadcasts in many countries.

No one knows exactly just where the hat is now, least of all Wickey, who is becoming increasingly bewildered by the whole affair and the long-distance telephone calls and telegrams he is receiving. It was an unusual story to begin with, but it has been marvelously enhanced by amplification.

How It Started.

The straightforward story of how it all began according to Wickey, is as follows: Although a thrifty man, on the day he retired, and in an exuberant moment, Wickey threw his hat away. "One of the other men," Wickey related, "came up to me and said, 'Where's your old hat?' 'It's right there in the trash can,' I told him. Well, the next thing I knew I got a letter about two weeks later from Brownsville, Tex., telling me my hat had arrived there on its world tour."

What Wickey didn't know at the time was that his hat had been fished out of the can and, with a tag on it asking all Railway Express employes to "give it a good ride," had actually been started on its way.

The idea made a hit immediately. The hat was taken to Mexico City by airplane, and soon the following story sprung up. Wickey, the story had it, had worn the hat for the 18 years he worked for the agency. He had handled packages from all corners of the world and had decided to take a world tour when he retired. But he found that he couldn't afford it, so he sent his hat instead.

Debunking a Legend.

"I didn't know how long I'd had the hat," Wickey said yesterday. "I guess about two years. It was a green fedora." Had he ever contemplated a world tour? "Well, gosh, actually no," he blushed, "but that's what they started, so I guess I did."

Eastern newspapers report that the hat is now on a boat bound from Juneau, Alaska, to Seattle, where an airplane pilot will pick it up and take it to Newark, N. J., where a celebration will be held at the airport with Wickey present, if it is possible to get him to go. Wickey hasn't heard anything about that yet, other than to hear it announced on a radio broadcast Thursday. He has, however, received offers of free trips from American Airlines, Inc., and Pan-American Airways.

Asked if he would take the trips he said: "Sure. Yes, I may go East, but I wouldn't want to say anything about it until the proper time, of course."

No one has anything like a running itinerary of the hat, but at any rate, it has been across the continent at least twice, to Germany on the Graf Zeppelin, to Peru and Rio de Janeiro by airplane, to London, Central America, and Africa. From Guatemala City Wickey got a report: "Hat spent night in French legation in Guatemala City, calling at all night clubs." Wickey has never been inside a night club.

Wickey, who is 60 years old, short and slight, is unmarried and lives with his sister, Mrs. Mary Linck, and a nephew at 4060 Quincy street.

SCOUT TROOPS IN CITY TO GET ACORN AWARD

Units to Be Honored Next Month for Organizing New Groups.

The National Council of Boy Scouts of America announced today that the National Walter W. Head Acorn award will be presented next month to troops in the St. Louis Council which succeed in organizing new Scout troops.

The contest, which is opened to every troop, pack, ship, explorer patrol or Rover post, is for the purpose of increasing the Scout units of the St. Louis Council.

Another honor offered will be the Eugene D. Nims streamer, which will be presented by the St. Louis Council. This streamer, which is given by President Eugene D. Nims of the Council, will be awarded to Scout troops which have no more than 50 per cent of their membership as Tenderfoot Scouts by Dec. 3, and to the packs which graduate 50 per cent of their 12-year-old Cubs into Scouting.

This is the first time St. Louis Scouts have had an opportunity of winning a national award in several years, according to announcement from Scout headquarters. The Eugene D. Nims awards will be made at the Boy Scout Circus at the Arena on Dec. 4 and 5.

Scouts can qualify for advancement and help their troops win the Nims award by participating in boards of review Oct. 13 and Nov. 17, at the following places: North district, Beaumont High School; Suburban district, Webster Groves High School; South district, Roosevelt High School, and West district, Soldan High School.

The following boards of review will be held on October 14 and Nov. 18: Kirkwood Junior High School; Ritenour division, New Overland School; Inter-racial division at Pine Street Y. M. C. A.

The Central district board of review will be held Oct. 15 and 19 at Gallaudet School, while the Maplewood division will be held Oct. 19 and Nov. 16 at the Maplewood High School.

The camping department of the St. Louis Council in a report to the camping committee showed that 1711 Scouts had enjoyed camping opportunities as offered by the Council this year. The new senior camp at Owl Bend, Mo., had 46 Scouts enrolled, and the short term camp at Lion's den had 139 Scouts. Both of these camps operated for the first time this season. Forty-six Scouts from St. Louis enjoyed the wilderness canoe trips along the Canadian border this year, while 65 Sea Scouts had the advantage of the cruise up the Mississippi river. Irondale attracted more than 1020 Scouts, and 392 Scouts had outings in Council-supervised troop camps.

Sea Scout Bruce Norris put the theory of first aid to practice Tuesday in administering first aid to Jay Wall, who suffered a compound fracture of the ankle when he fell from a roof at 8700 Forest avenue, Overland.

Fifty pledges of Shawnee Lodge of Order of the Arrow, honorary Scouting society, will hold initiation next week-end at Lion's Den. More than 500 Scouts in St. Louis belong to the society and many are expected to attend the ceremonies.

John D. Wright, St. Louis Scout executive, will be the main speaker at the annual South district meeting for Scouts and Cubs Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock at St. Paul's Evangelical Curch.

The North district rally will be held Oct. 17 in O'Fallon Park with a program beginning at 1 o'clock.

A new type of Rover Scouting in which the Rover post is affiliated directly with the troop is being developed by the St. Louis Rover Scouts in place of the district packs, Roy de Stabler, chairman of the Rover committee, announced. The committee for this Rover troop is composed of the following: Capt. F. R. Gardner, Howard Burgin, W. J. See, Dick Eastham, J. V. Allison, William F. Windhorst, C. J. Forbes, L. J. Leverington and Ed Cushing.

Scoutmaster Phil Finger of Troop 182 of Oak Hill School will receive his Eagle Scout award at a court of honor Friday, and Walter Finger will receive a bronze palm.

The following Scouts will receive their Life awards this week at court of honors held by the troops: Martin Sigillito and Charles Fleming of Troop 160, Stanley Waxman of Troop 30. The following Scouts received the Star award: Sidney Goldenberg of Troop 11, Scoutmaster M. L. Maroney.

Eagle rank was conferred upon Scout LeRoy Sachs of Troop 30 Thursday night at a special court of honor of the troop.

Wesley Burton Loses License for Year; He Appeals.

Wesley Burton, 23 years old, 4323 Loughborough avenue, was fined $50 and costs on charges of driving an automobile while intoxicated and in careless manner by Provisional Police Judge Raymond Karst yesterday. The charge of intoxication carried with it the automatic revocation of Burton's driving license for one year. He appealed.

CARDS LOSE, 12-2; UP TO DEAN TO WIN SECOND PLACE IN 1936 FINALE TODAY

CUBS MAKE 16 HITS AS LEE LIMITS BIRDS TO SIX

By Harold Tuthill

Upon the strong arm of Dizzy Dean, ace of the Cardinals' pitching staff, rests the task today of clinching second place for the Redbirds in the second and final game of the series with the Cubs, and the finale of the National League season. Dizzy's task is not an easy one as Lonnie Warneke, the Arkansas humming-bird, will be on the mound for the Cubs.

A victory for the Cardinals would give them undisputed possession of second place and the World Series cut for finishing in the runnerup position. A defeat would leave the Redbirds and Cubs tied for second place, and the two clubs would have to divide second and third place money. Dizzy will be seeking his twenty-fifth triumph of the season. He has suffered 12 defeats.

Should the game be rained out, the Cardinals would finish the race in second place.

Cubs Win 12 to 2.

Jim Winford had a chance yesterday to clinch second place for the Cardinals, but he failed in his assignment and the Cubs won, 12 to 2, reducing the Cards' margin over Charley Grimm's team to one game.

Bill Lee, who jumped from Columbus, a Cardinal farm club, into major league prominence with the Cubs, virtually made sissies of the Gas House Gang yesterday. Briefly, he permitted only six hits, and for eight innings was not scored on. The Birds put together half of their safeties for their two runs in the ninth. The Cubs totaled 16 hits.

Lee certainly had things under control, for Gelbert's second-inning single was the only safety off the lanky right-hander for six innings. Then, with a commanding lead, Lee eased up in the late innings, permitting a hit in each of the seventh and eighth frames and three in the ninth.

Frisch Uses Five Pitchers.

While Lee dallied with the Cardinals, the Cubs made merry at the expense of four of the five pitchers who appeared on the Cards' firing line. Only Bill McGee, who relieved Winford in the third and retired the one batter to face him, escaped a mauling.

Winford got off on the wrong foot in the first inning by walking Galan, who was sent to third on Cavarretta's double. Galan counted on Herman's deep fly to Terry Moore. Winford's tenure was terminated in the third when Phil Cavarretta's homer started a rally that netted four runs and resulted in Winford's removal. McGee did his rescue act by getting Lee on a fly to Medwick.

McGee gave way to a pinch hitter in the Cards' half of the third and Ed Heusser then made his appearance. The Wild Elk of the Wasatch ran into trouble in the fifth when Gill hit a home run with Hartnett on base. Gill, by the way, was espe-

Bounding Bob Buffets Bradley Players in Opening Quarter

Although Bounding Bob Hudgens didn't get his name into the summary line listing the touchdown-makers, he showed his old ability at gaining ground, as evidenced by this picture, made in the first period as Washington U. won its opening football game from Bradley Tech, 32 to 0, at Francis Field yesterday afternoon.

By James M. Gould

Starting very slowly—almost creeping in fact—Washington University's 1936 football edition gathered speed as the game proceeded before 5000 fans at Francis Field yesterday and finally "went to press" with a 32 to 0 victory over Bradley Tech of Peoria, Ill., in the opening contest of the campaign.

Dick Yore, Joe Bukant and John O'Toole scored the Washington touchdowns, Yore and Bukant each getting two. Londy and Tracy converted two of the five tries for extra points.

The Bears, held scoreless by a fighting Bradley defense, in the first quarter, broke through for 13 points in the second quarter, added six in the third and then battered across two more touchdowns in the final quarter. Bradley never was in a threatening position, the defense of the Bears being remarkable for so early in the season even if their offense creaked a bit at times, especially in the early stages of the game.

Rest for the Iron Men.

The way the game went, Coach Conzelman was able to give his "iron men" spells of rest though Captain Al Iezza at center did not leave the game until 20 seconds before the finish of it.

Yore and Bukant did most of the ground-gaining for the Bears with Hudgens going slowly until the final quarter. Coach Conzelman used Ozment, Klein and O'Toole at quarter.

How good was the Washington running attack was shown by the figures giving the Bears no less than 349 yards from scrimmage. How good the defense was is indicated by the statistics which give Bradley only 36 yards made from scrimmage during the entire game. They made only three yards in the first period and two, in the second, getting 20 in the third and 11 in the fourth quarter.

Bears Make 27 First Downs.

With Yore and Bukant passing, the Bears tried 21 passes, completing seven for a total of 61 yards. Bradley, trying six passes, completed two for 22 yards.

On first downs, the Washington advantage was tremendous. The Bears made 27 while Bradley was able to make only two, one in the second and one in the third quarter.

The Washington line played well throughout as the scrimmage-figures indicate and Conzelman had a chance to look at some of his sec-

PERRY, BUDGE IN FINAL OF COAST TENNIS TOURNAMENT

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26.—Fred Perry of England, amateur tennis champion of the world, and Donald Budge, ranking American, won the right today to meet each other for the men's singles championship of the Pacific Southwest tennis tournament.

The red-headed Oakland player downed Jack Tidball, Los Angeles, by the lop-sided scores of 6—2, 6—1, 6—2, and Perry defeated Frank Shields, Hollywood, 6—3, 6—3, 8—6.

Shields, former American Davis Cup player who has turned to a cinema career, made a game fight of it in his comeback attempt, but Perry relentlessly bombarded his vulnerable backhand.

Rallying in the final set, Shields came from 3—5 to tie the set. Perry then switched tactics, storming the net to cop the match in the fourteenth game.

WRAY'S COLUMN

The Subway Series.

ONCE more—the fourth time—New York baseball teams will battle for the world championship. This time the Yanks will be red-hot favorites because there is no John McGraw piloting the Giants. Also, the facts and figures strongly favor the Joe McCarthy outfit.

If you put up $5 and win $3, betting on the Yanks, you will be getting average odds as they exist today.

Bookmakers sum up the situation like this: The Yanks won a runaway race, overpowering all opposition. In winning, the Yankees totaled 250 or more runs more than the Giants. The Yanks had several men who drove in a large number of runs, while the Giants had only one big clubber. While the Giants have Carl Hubbell, the pitcher of the year, the Yanks have a fair staff. And as to home runs and other attacking features, the Giants might as well back right out of the picture by comparison with the Yanks.

The stage, they contend, is set for an American League victory.

About Mr. Hubbell.

IF CARL HUBBELL is to bring the Giants victory, he will have to win two victories—possibly three. That Giant staff has been anything but convincing. Of late it has shown some improvement. Only Hubbell has been great throughout the season.

But—take a look at that great-

Creel Defeats Evens, 6 and 4, for Southpaw Golf Championship

By W. J. McGoogan.

A week-end golfer proved no match for a seasoned player in the final of the first annual left-handed golfers' tournament yesterday as Howard Creel, Pueblo, Colo., won the national southpaw championship from Freddy M. Evens Jr., Norwood Hills, 6 and 4 in the 36-hole contest at Norwood Hills Country Club.

Creel, one of the outstanding amateur players of the country, marched through the tournament, which began last Monday, winning the medal with 141 strokes in 36 holes, then winning all of his succeeding matches by top-heavy scores until he came to the final.

Evens had a thorny path to the title contest, being hard pressed to defeat Sam Arnold, Missouri southpaw champion, and Alexander Antonio, Linden, N. J., another of the pre-tournament favorites, in his earlier matches.

Then, when Fred reached the final, he matched his dogged determination against the machine-like skill of the tall Coloradoan and did a commendable job.

Evens was very much the underdog as the match got under way. A typical business man golfer, he had little more than the hope that by some miracle he might be able to overcome the more finished skill of his opponent. And as usual, superior ability told.

At that, Creel was not at his best the final day, and had not Evens' putter proved so unruly at the psychological moments, there might have been a different story to tell.

Howard was around in 74 in the morning, three strokes over par, and gained a lead of only two up, while in the afternoon his game fell away to a 42 on the first nine. But instead of being there to take advantage of the situation, Evens played worse than Creel, taking a 44 on the third nine holes to make the final turn three down.

Even's putter would not obey his commands most of the day. Fred putted in a tense, jerky manner which cost him several holes despite the fact that he saved some by rolling in long putts.

The Match in Detail.

Starting out they halved the first hole with par fours, then Creel got a lead he was never to relinquish at the second where he got his par three while Evens, in the ditch from the tee took a five.

They halved the next two with par fours while Creel won the fifth with a par four against a five, a stymie contributing to the result.

Howard also won the sixth when Evens' was short with his second and took a five to Creel's par four.

Evens won his first hole at the seventh where he got a par four while Creel, short with his second

ARGENTINES BEAT U. S. FOR INTERNATIONAL POLO CROWN

By the Associated Press.

WESTBURY, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Argentina's wild riding "Four Horsemen," mounted on their famed steeds from the Land of the Pampa, battered and shattered all tradition today as they rode away with the cherished Americas Cup, emblem of international team polo supremacy.

As 39,000 spectators, second largest throng to watch a polo match in this country's history, shivered from the cold damp southeast wind that swept International Field and applauded the daring of the invaders, the Gauchos clinched their triumph by crushing Greentree, United States team champion, 8 to 4, for the second time.

The triumph, following up last Sunday's 21 to 9 rout, marked the first time in 22 years that the United States has been defeated in international polo competition. England's great four, led by the immortal Leslie Cheape, was the last to turn the trick, winning the Westchester Cup back in 1914.

Browns Lose Doubleheader To White Sox, 5-3 and 8-6; Rain Shortens Second Game

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Unaccustomed as they are to public conduct becoming ordinary people, the White Sox yesterday cut themselves a better slice of the world's series melon and moved into third place by knocking over the humble Browns twice while Washington was losing to the Yankees.

The Sox beat the Browns, 5 to 3 and 8 to 6, with the second game going six and a half innings when rain and darkness overtook the stirring conflict. Less than 4000 cheered the outcome.

At the same time, the Sox put themselves in a position to move into second place tomorrow if they can whip the Browns again and the Tigers lose to Cleveland.

Luke Appling, No. 1 shortstop of the realm, also helped himself to a virtual batting championship by whacking out two hits in six times at bat to leave him with a mark of .387. Earl Averill, his closest rival, could do no better than one hit in four times up at Cleveland to leave him with an average of .377.

Ted Lyons was the victor of the first game when he limited the Browns to nine hits while the Sox utilized seven blows to excellent advantage.

Monty Stratton pitched hitless ball in the second game until the sixth and forthwith went to pieces in the seventh when the Browns scored their six runs, but without serious consequences.

Tomorrow the opposing pitchers will be Vernon Kennedy, the Chicago team's ace pitcher, and either Tommy Thomas or Ivy Andrews. Kennedy will be in pursuit of his twenty-second conquest of the season.

Londe Scores Two Tiger Touchdowns Against Frosh

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 26.—Missouri University's football varsity taught the freshmen how touchdowns were scored here today, and the Frosh caught on so quickly they scored one in the third period to make the final score, 26 to 6.

Coach Don Faurot let his first-string Varsity hammer away, making consistent gains on running plays, until midway of the third quarter.

Al Londe of St. Louis, former Roosevelt High School star, scored two Varsity touchdowns in the first half, and Mahley and Murray one each. Those combined with a blocked freshman punt which went for a safety made the half-score, 20-0.

In the third period, Irick, freshman end, got off a 75 yard punt and on the return his team found itself with the ball in midfield. A few plays later Ettinger passed to Bailey for the lone freshman touchdown.

The Varsity made 18 first downs to two for the freshmen, with Mason, Frye, Mahley, Castle and Murray figured in the ball carrying.

SECOND LITTLE WORLD SERIES GAME RAINED OUT

By the Associated Press.

Minnesota Snatches 14-7 Victory From Huskies in Dramatic Climax

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SEATTLE, Sept. 26.—It has been a legend in Big Ten circles that if you give a Minnesota team a break, they'll walk right away with the football game before you've had a chance to take a deep breath.

This great intersectional conflict between the Gophers and the University of Washington was a 7 to 7 deadlock in the final period this afternoon, when the break came.

Like a cat pouncing upon a mouse, the alert eleven from the Middle West snatched the opportunity while it was hot. A moment later the winning touchdown was on the scoreboard, and Minnesota had stretched their brilliant uninterrupted string of victories to 18.

By a score of 14 to 7, the team which has been the terror of the Western Conference for four years, defeated Jimmy Phelan's Huskies.

AL SEIDEL STARS AS ROOSEVELT BEATS M'BRIDE, 13 TO 0

SCORES FIRST TOUCHDOWN AND THROWS A PASS FOR THE OTHER

Ken Main Is Receiver of Scoring Heave—McBride Stops Other Threats of Rough Rider Backfield.

By Reno Hahn

Roosevelt High School's football team burst through McBride's defense twice yesterday afternoon and safely held the Colonnaders from penetrating its territory to win its opening game, 13 to 0 at the Public Schools Stadium. A dangerous Rough Rider backfield was stopped most of the time by McBride, but twice Al Seidel, the track star, worked touchdown plays.

Al tallied the first one himself after a 15-yard holding penalty, the first of three the Rough Riders received, had temporarily set back Roosevelt. Al cut off left tackle, reversed his field, and went 36 yards for the score. Fine blocking by Bill Kochs and Bob White aided Seidel in his dash. Bill Kochs converted on a place kick.

Al's scoring dash in the second quarter, coming after Roosevelt had stopped a McBride threat on its 12-yard line. From there, the Quail (Bob White to you) made two fine runs of 14 and 12 yards, respectively, on spinner plays. Short gains by White, Seidel, and Main carried the ball to the McBride 29, but a Roosevelt player held on McBride's 21-yard line and the ball went back to McBride's 36, setting the stage for Seidel's run.

Profit by Extra Time Out.

Roosevelt had the ball on McBride's 26-yard line as a result of a 23-yard pass from Ken Main to Seidel as the third period ended. After White gained three yards, the Rough Riders were penalized five yards for too much time out, putting the ball, on 29. But evidently the Rough Riders needed the extra time to think up the next play, for Al Seidel passed to Main for a 29-yard gain and a touchdown.

Roosevelt has a fine trio of ball carriers in Seidel, Main and White, good blockers in Kochs and White, and a stout line that is hard to penetrate. At least, McBride found it difficult.

Their only gains were made off tackle and around the ends.

McBride, while outweighed, made a fine stand against the superior team it faced. Jack Murphy, brother of Bob, who made such an outstanding record last year, and Elias Saffa, brother of Joe, another star last year, were the standouts in the backfield. The line as a whole was weak, but much of its weakness was in experience and it should improve greatly.

Makes 52 Yards by Air.

Roosevelt completed two of its four attempted passes and made 52 yards through the air, while McBride, although completing four, made only 11 yards. One completed pass by McBride lost a half-yard.

Unless Roosevelt players eliminate their tendency to hold on offense they will handicap themselves in future important games to come. The Rough Riders were penalized 55 yards during the game, 45 of them for holding.

Bukant and Yore Score Twice Each in Bears' 32-0 Victory

ond and third stringers when the tide turned the Washington way in the second period.

Bears Slow to Start.

The Bears looked just like real "first-gamers" at the start of the game. They were slow starting and uncertain in their handling of the ball. True, they made 55 yards from scrimmage but every time they seemed to be started on the way toward Bradley's goal line, someone would fumble. Coach Conzelman's greying hair was nearing the white stage as two of his dependables, Yore and Bukant, handled the ball as if it were a hot potato.

While the Bears never were "hot" in the period, they were stone-wallish on defense. The Bradley team failed to make a first down and gathered only three yards from scrimmage. The visitors tried one pass but failed to complete it.

It was a different story in the second period. The Bears began to carry the mail and forgot to drop it.

The second period opened with the Bears in possession on their own 47-yard line. Hudgens and Yore gained eight yards apiece off tackle and Bukant's pass to Brungard was good on Bradley's 18-yard mark. A center-wallop by Bukant netted 11 more yards and Yore made the remaining seven around end for the first touchdown. Londy's place-kick for the extra point was good.

Bradley Takes to Air.

Bradley could make no impression with its running attack and soon took to passing. They completed one for 20 yard but it did no particular harm.

A kick to Klein gave the Bears the ball on their own 28-yard line. Then, Washington started a goal-line march. Bukant and Yore hit center and off-tackle for steady gains which were helped out by laterals by Yore and the same Bukant.

Well in Bradley territory with but a few minutes of play remaining, the Bears could not be stopped. Bukant plunged to the 14-yard line and Hudgens got nine more at end. Bukant picked up two at center and a penalty against Bradley put the ball on the visitors' two-yard line. Bukant took it over but the extra-point kick of Tracy, in for Bukant after the touchdown, was low.

It didn't take the Bears long to score after the intermission. Rushes by Hudgens and Bukant and a good pass by Yore to Brungard helped and then Yore dashed 16 yards to put the ball on Bradley's 15-yard line. Two line plays were stopped but, on the third, Bukant crashed off tackle for the third Washington touchdown. Londy's try-kick was wide.

The play was all in favor of the Bears for the rest of the period, but they failed to add to their point total, having the ball on Bradley's 25-yard mark when the quarter ender.

Two Scores in Fourth Quarter.

Two touchdowns came in the final quarter, the first helped considerably by a 26-yard run by Hudgens, his best effort of the game. Yore and Bukant added a first down but a pass was intercepted. However, Bradley was penalized at this point and Hudgens fought his way to the one-yard line only to fumble. Russ Meredith, sophomore guard was on the spot to recover and, on the next play, Bukant went across the line. Tracy's place-kick was good.

A blocked kick by Mansor led to the fifth and final touchdown. It came in the last two minutes of the game and Locke recovered for Washington on Bradley's five-yard line. Minkey then passed to O'Toole in the end-zone for the final points as Tracy's try failed.

Notes of the Game.

Jack Beynon, formerly star quarterback at Illinois, was here in the scouting interests of the Illini. The Bears play Zuppke's team at Champaign next Saturday.

The Bears had 33 players in nice new uniforms, tan trousers and bright red jerseys with numbers in gold.

Don Miller, Bradley's left end, was acting captain of the Illinois team for the game.

While there was no real Washington scoring threat in the opening quarter, there might have been but for three fumbles, two by Bukant and one by Yore, who lost the ball after being tackled on a nice gain.

The center position appears to be a tough spot at Washington. Gould, first reserve, was hurt in practice and his reserve mantle fell on the shoulders of Jack Hewitt. Now, there is some doubt as to Hewitt's eligibility and he was not allowed to play yesterday. So, Conzelman had one real center in uniform. Looks like a hard year for Capt. Al Iezzi.

Father Johnston, president of St. Louis University, saw the game as the guests of Chancellor Throop of Washington University.

McClarence, in the second period, intercepted a pass and, with a clear field in front of him, was pulled down hard from behind by Iezzi.

The usually alert Bob Hudgens was fast asleep in the last minute of the second period. Panish threw a long pass on the fourth down. Hudgens had the pass covered and should have knocked it down when the ball would have gone back to its playing spot. Instead, Bob caught the ball and the Bears were on their own 10-yard line. It so happened that the period ended a few seconds later.

RITENOUR DEFEATS CATHEDRAL HIGH OF BELLEVILLE, 6 TO 0

$100,000 Speed Boat on Bottom of the Potomac

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Horace Dodge's speedboat Delphine turned over as she roared along a Potomac River course today in the President's Cup regatta, plunging her pilot and mechanic into the water.

Commodore Friedhof Ericson of New York, driving the Detroit boat, was believed to have been only slightly injured. The mechanic, John MacKenzie, of Detroit, was bleeding from the mouth when rescuers hauled the two men from the water.

The Delphine sank almost immediately at the spot where she rolled over almost alongside the Coast Guard cutter Apache.

Apache officers who examined MacKenzie before sending him to a hospital said they believed he suffered from a possible fracture of the left shoulder and lacerations of the lower lip.

The accident occurred as Delphine and El Lagarto, fighting for the lead, started the fifth circuit of the first heat.

As Delphine VII, which cost her owner, Horace E. Dodge approximately $100,000, lay on the bottom of the Potomac, Frithief Erickson, the pilot, explained the cause of the accident.

Delpine VII has an adjustable step on her keel, designed to offset the wash of irregular currents when the boat is moving at topspeed. Today the mechanism became damaged and the step could not be regulated.

As Erickson drove the boat past the Apache under full power, attempting to pass Notre Dame, a current caught the defective step and threw the craft high into the air. Her bottom was almost completely ripped off.

It was expected Dodge will attempt to salvage his cup contender.

A world's record was set for 225 cubic inch hydroplanes by Miss Manteo, owned by H. A. Greef of Manteo, N. C., and driven by L. D. Hassel. Hassel pushed her down a mile straight-away—with a flying start—to develop 69.215 miles an hour. This topped the mark set by Mortimer Auerbach of Atlantic City, N. J. His dash was merely a time trial not affecting the scoring but he later won the event in two heats.

Another world record was set up by Edison Hedges of Atlantic City, who broke his own record of 39.823 in five mile competition for 91 and 135 cubic inch hydroplanes when he clocked 40.071 miles an hour.

In the class "E" inboard speedsters, George Ward Jr., Wilmington, Del., established a national record of 55.395 M. P. H. for the course tour.

MINNESOTA SNATCHES 14-7 VICTORY FROM WASHINGTON HUSKIES

Minnesota was just that much the better team.

Byron Haines, the ball-carrying sensation of the day, let a Minnesota punt slip through his upstretched arms in the final period of a desperately waged struggle, at a time when a tie score looked pretty much of a certainty.

With dramatic suddenness the entire complexion of the ball game changed.

Minnesota recovered on Washington's 30-yard line.

Minnesota passed to the 10.

Minnesota passed over the goal line for the touchdown.

It happened just like that, and almost as quickly.

When Ray King folded Uram's perfectly-maneuvered pass to his bosom, it was the margin which the Gophers were to win what was expected to be one of the great football games of the year, and which lived up to expectations.

The Gophers, with a surge of power which swept the Washington defense aside like chaff, scored in the early moments of the second period. Chunky Whitman Rork went bruising through guard to make the score, and the try for point was perfectly executed.

It was 7 to 0 at the half.

Coming back with a forward passing offensive, which dazed and befuddled the invaders, the Huskies tied the score in the third period. Dick Johnson accepted a left-handed forward from Haines' accurate arm to score.

Elmer Logg's kick deadlocked the score.

It was like that when the break came. Methodically and in a business-like manner the Gophers proceeded to score the winning touchdown, and that was all there was to that, maintaining their remarkable record of 18 straight victories.

Santa Clara 13, Stanford 0.

By the Associated Press.

PALO ALTO, Calif., Sept. 26.—University of Santa Clara defeated Stanford University, Western Rose Bowl choice of the last three years, 13 to 0, today in a game touching off the football season here. A crowd of 25,000 fans saw the Broncos score touchdowns in the second and fourth quarters and outplay "Tiny" Thornhill's 1936 gridiron contribution almost throughout.

ILLINOIS WINS FROM DE PAUL ON FIELD GOAL BY SPURGEON

By the Associated Press.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 26. — Slender Lowell Spurgeon kicked a slippery, tricky ball between the uprights from 27 yards out today to give Illinois three big points and a 9 to 6, opening victory over an inspired De Paul University eleven from Chicago.

Until Spurgeon swung his foot aganist the ball early in the final period, it appeared Illinois would have to settle for a 6 to 6 tie, so sturdily had De Paul fought the first three-quarters of the game.

De Paul, figured to give Illinois' sophomores a thorough testing, accomplished even more than that. Coach Bob Zuppke started six first year men in his lineup, and before he could replace them with tried veterans, De Paul scored a touchdown for a lead that stood up well into the second quarter.

Quick Kick Leads to Score.

A quick-kick by Bob Postaer, whose punting overshadowed the efforts of Illinois' Ken Nelson and Jay Wardley, started De Paul to its touchdown during the second minute of play. It went out of bounds on the Illini seven-yard line, and Wardley's return boot traveled only to his own 36. Willie Phillips tossed a 13-yard pass to Postaer, and on the next play Phillips slashed through Illinois' left tackle for 23 yards and a touchdown. Rain started to fall and Postaer's place-kick attempt for the extra point went astray.

Illinois veterans were pushed to the rescue but it was not until late in the second period that a scoring opening came. Nelson kicked out of bounds on De Paul's five-yard line, and Postaer was forced to kick back from behind his own goal line.

Illinois Sophomore Scores.

Lou Stasica, who made brilliant returns while he was in the Illini battle front, raced back 20 yards to De Paul's 36, and carrying the ball nine times out of ten plays, ripped to De Paul's one-yard mark. Ken Zimmerman, a sophomore, blasted over for the touchdown. The try for the point went wrong.

A heart-breaking pair of fumbles on one play opened the way for Spurgeon's place kick act. Phillips fumbled one of Wardley's kicks in the final session. Bill Corrigan, De Paul substitute back, grabbed the ball, but lost it. Illinois' captain, Elvin Sayre, recovered on De Paul's 12. Spurgeon, standing on the 27-yard line then kicked home the winning points.

BADGERS GET SCARE AT KICKOFF, THEN WIN FOR STUHLDREHER, 24-7

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 26.—The Wisconsin Badgers came through with flying colors for their new coach, Harry Stuhldreher, today by defeating South Dakota State, 24 to 7, before 15,000 persons in the season's opener.

The Jackrabbits, however, threw a scare into the Badgers on the first play of the game when Lienhart, fleet halfback, caught the kickoff and raced 80 yards for a touchdown. Barber converted to put South Dakota out in front.

Wisconsin rallied, and Jackowski quickly went over for a touchdown, but the ball was called back because of a penalty. Heavy plunging by Jankowski, Misiak and Malesevich wore down the game South Dakota forwards, however, and Malesevich tore across for the first Badger score in the second quarter, but the point conversion failed and the visitors still were ahead at the end of the half.

The Badgers really got going in the second half, Lovshin, Malesevich and Kurth scored touchdowns.

DARTMOUTH ON PARADE, MAKES 9 TOUCHDOWNS

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 26. — Four Dartmouth teams pounded through an outclassed Norwich eleven for nine touchdowns here this afternoon as a crowd of 7000 cheered every Norwich gain in the 58-0 rout. Paced by Whitey Pratt, who scored three times, the third and fourth Dartmouth teams played three periods of the encounter.

BERKELEY, Cal., Sept. 26.—University of California's football warriors opened their season here today with victories over the California Aggies and College of the Pacific.

Coach Leonard B. Allison used almost every player as his Bears swept to a 39 to 0 victory over the Aggies in the opener. Allison's crew, however, found the going harder in the nightcap against Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg's eleven, but won 14 to 0.

WRAY'S COLUMN

ness. His pitching can't be surpassed. But he had to win a dozen of his 26 victories this year by a one-run margin. His efficiency mark, as shown by his losing games, probably will set a world record.

This puts it up to the Giants to give Hubbell and his pitching associates runs in the world series.

Unless the National League is strong throughout in pitching and the American League weak, the conclusion seems obvious that the Yanks are going to give their hurlers far better help than the Giants will give Hubbell, Fitzsimmons and Schumacher.

There is this to be considered—the Yankees have no such ace as Hubbell. And, perhaps, the American League pitchers are not just what they ought to be. When Bump Hadley and Pat Malone are counted leading pitchers in the American League, it's time to step carefully with the family plate.

Still Wondering.

THE world is still trying to guess the Larry McPhail angle at Cincinnati. But the answers are not forthcoming.

The general public became rather interested in Mr. McPhail. He apparently did a good job in Redland. He appeared headed for big things. His club had climbed. His backer had made money. Plans for extension were going forward.

Then MacPhail resigned. And no explanation.

So far as can be learned, not a move is on to make room for him in either major league.

His case is almost as mysterious as that of Jockey Don Meade, with the exception that there is no implication of anything wrong in the case of McPhail.

More About Joe Louis.

A CORRESPONDENT asks three questions about Joe Louis and his fights, as follows:

1—Is Joe Louis an intentionally "dirty" fighter? Is it true that Louis continually fouled Schmeling deliberately?

2—Does the one-two punch consist of blows struck alternately with the right and left hands or does it consist of blows struck consecutively with one hand?

3—Do the rules of New York state that if a fighter is deliberately fouled and is floored for the count of 10, he immediately and automatically loses the fight?

As to No. 1—Joe Louis has shown no tendency toward deliberate fouling in any of his fights. In the Schmeling bout, when it was obvious that he did not know what he was doing, he hit Schmeling low, doing no damage. On the contrary, Schmeling hit Louis after the bell (also foul). Schmeling, after the fight absolved Louis of any deliberate intent to hit low.

Concerning No. 2—Fighters of today talk of a one-two punch, meaning a left quickly followed by a right. Old fighters like Jack Johnson say a one-two in the old sense meant hitting the body with the left first and bringing the same glove up quickly to the jaw.

No. 3—The New York regulations still make it possible to disqualify a fighter for deliberate fouls. There is, however, a rule that low blows cannot be considered as necessarily disqualifying an offender, because the commission has ruled that the protective device used in New York against low punches is practically punch proof.

The referee is instructed to count over the low blow victim. If he rises and continues the fight, his opponent loses the round.

This rule is extremely bad in effect since it encourages careless punching. With all due respect to the commission there seems no device on the market that can completely safeguard boxers from blows struck at all points below the belt.

Still Bet Crazy.

THIS thrill-seeking world is more betting-mad than ever in its history. We refer not to race track speculation but more particularly to the spread of betting on college football which, we predict, will attain a new peak.

That's not due to student betting. Its because of the exploitation of this form of wagering by purely profiteering groups.

Betting on football takes various forms. First of all, odds are offered on major games by the bookmaker. He has extended his field beyond its original limit of horseracing and fighting. The new football turnover is gravy for him. He knows little about it. His prices reflect, by their shortness, a percentage that makes his play an absolute certainty.

But that's O. K. He's in the business. Everybody knows that. If you patronize him you know that the retort is: "Protect yourself at all times."

Growth of the Pool.

Besides the bookmaker there are the promoters of football "pools." These are of various sorts ranging from cash prizes offered by various publications for guessing closest to 10 or 15 scores.

The pools are too various to be described in detail. It is sufficient to say that the demand by the public for some sort of tip as to how to bet in these pools has developed a group of technicians who will sell you their "ratings" —very much like race track tips, —to assist you in picking the winners.

Magazines are published, devoted to football tipping. Advertisements appear in these publications inviting you to make your wagers with this or that firm.

As sports editor, this writer has received offers of "football ratings" from several sources, all of which very frankly admit that the betting interest in football is such that "no newspaper can afford not to carry football ratings" or tips, in other words.

Germ of Trouble Here.

SINCE it is all based on college performance, it is obvious that there is a distinct possibility of future trouble in this situation. Whenever professional betting develops to such a degree, suspicion can hardly be far behind.

Isn't it a bit too bad that what was—still is perhaps — a great game of enthusiastic amateurs should be made the medium of professional exploitation?

Still Bet Crazy.

THIS thrill-seeking world is more betting-mad than ever in its history. We refer not to race track speculation but more particularly to the spread of betting on college football which, we predict, will attain a new peak.

That's not due to student betting. Its because of the exploitation of this form of wagering by purely profiteering groups.

Betting on football takes various forms. First of all, odds are offered on major games by the bookmaker. He has extended his field beyond its original limit of horseracing and fighting. The new football turnover is gravy for him. He knows little about it. His prices reflect, by their shortness, a percentage that makes his play an absolute certainty.

But that's O. K. He's in the business. Everybody knows that. If you patronize him you know that the retort is: "Protect yourself at all times."

Growth of the Pool.

Besides the bookmaker there are the promoters of football "pools." These are of various sorts ranging from cash prizes offered by various publications for guessing closest to 10 or 15 scores.

The pools are too various to be described in detail. It is sufficient to say that the demand by the public for some sort of tip as to how to bet in these pools has developed a group of technicians who will sell you their "ratings"—very much like race track tips,—to assist you in picking the winners.

Magazines are published, devoted to football tipping. Advertisements appear in these publications inviting you to make your wagers with this or that firm.

As sports editor, this writer has received offers of "football ratings" from several sources, all of which very frankly admit that the betting interest in football is such that "no newspaper can afford not to carry football ratings" or tips, in other words.

Germ of Trouble Here.

SINCE it is all based on college performance, it is obvious that there is a distinct possibility of future trouble in this situation. Whenever professional betting develops to such a degree, suspicion can hardly be far behind.

Isn't it a bit too bad that what was—still is perhaps — a great game of enthusiastic amateurs should be made the medium of professional exploitation?

By Herman Wecke.

That the pitchers of the Giants and Yankees, contenders for world baseball supremacy in the series beginning at the Polo Grounds next Wednesday, with the exception of Carl Hubbell, are an ordinary lot, is indicated by statistics for the season. These figures show that only three flingers besides the star left-hander of Bill Terry's crew have stopped the opposition with fewer than four runs a game.

As a lot, the National League representatives have an edge on their American League rivals, having yielded an average of 4.14 tallies each nine innings, against a figure of 4.68 for the Yankee corps. Hubbell's sensational work over the season is brought out forcibly when his record is compared with that of his mates and the marks of the flingers Joe McCarthy will rely on in the coming classic.

Look at the Record.

Comparing Hubbell with the others on the two staffs, the following facts are brought out:

That the southpaw has permitted an average of almost one run a game fewer than any other pitcher on the two teams.

That he has pitched as many complete games as any other, with

That he owns the greatest number of strikeouts.

That he has pitched the most innings.

That he has given fewer bases on balls, counting only those twirlers considered as regulars.

That with 26 victories he leads his rivals.

Hubbell, in winning his 26 games, of them in succession against but defeats, has gone the route on occasions. He has pitched 305 innings and in that time he has yielded but 83 runs (earned and unearned), an average of but 2.43 a game. He has allowed only 264 hits, fanned 125 batters and walked only 56.

Indicating that Hubbell's record for the 1936 campaign is a truly remarkable one. In piling up his mark, the lefthander has not been aided by sensational batting support. This is indicated clearly when it is taken into consideration that 12 of his victories have come by the margin of one run. In four of the contests in which he has suffered defeat, his mates scored only one run for him, being shut out on three occasions, while in the other, the 17-inning duel he lost to Leroy Parmelee and the Cardinals early in May, his mates counted only once. In these four games, the lefthander himself allowed only six tallies. Eight of the games in which Hubbell has been credited with victory by one run have come in his winning streak of 16, the best in the majors since Schoolboy Rowe won the same number for the Tigers in 1934.

While Hubbell has hurled 25 complete games, all the other members of the Giant staff have gone the route only 34 times. Thus Hubbell has pitched almost one-half of the full contests twirled by Terry's hurlers this season.

Gabler's Record Good.

Two teammates rank next to the lefthander in efficiency. Frank Gabler, the young righthander, has stopped the opposition with 3.33 runs a game, but he has gone the route only three times. Then comes Fred Fitzsimmons, the roly-poly veteran. Fitzsimmons has stopped the enemy with 3.42 tallies in each battle.

Fitzsimmons, Handicapped by Injuries Early in Race, Strong at the Finish

Handicapped by injuries early in the season, Fitz proved an important factor in the Giants' final drive for the pennant. The right-hander finished by taking nine of his last starts, going the route on sev- occasions. In the last 10 games, Fitzsimmons yielded but 22 runs in innings, an average of but 2.34 a game. Hubbell, in his winning streak of 16, has stopped the enemy with 1.80 runs a game. Thus Fitzsimmons' late record compares favorably with that of the left-hander. Which indicates that Fitz may be of some real value to the Giants in the coming series with Joe McCarthy's sluggers.

Pearson Yankees' Ace.

For the Yankees, Monte Pearson, right-hander obtained from the Indians, has been the most effective, yielding 3.96 tallies a game. Whether Pearson will be at his best in the series, however, is a question. Forced out for 10 days with an ankle injury, Pearson, in his start against the Athletics last Thursday, was forced out with an injury to his back. Thus he may be handicapped in the battle with the Giants. Pearson, in 223 innings, has been found for 98 runs. He has gone the route 15 times. The former Indian has fanned 117 and walked 133 batters.

Next in effectiveness among the Yankees come Pat Malone, who served in a pair of world series with the Cubs, and Murphy. Neither is regarded as a regular. Malone has worked five complete games and Murphy only two. Each has permitted an average of 4.14 runs a game.

Charley Ruffing, favored by many as McCarthy's starting pitcher against Hubbell in the first game, and who has pitched 25 full battles, has yielded 4.32. One of the disappointments on the Yankee staff is the work of Vernon Gomez, a few years ago regarded as one of the best southpaws in baseball. Gomez, pitching only 10 complete games, has been found for 4.95 runs by the enemy batters in each nine rounds.

Hal Schumacher, who with Hubbell and Fitzsimmons, has been named as a starting pitcher by Terry, has allowed 4.32 runs a game, pitching 215 innings and going the route nine times. Excluding the relief pitchers, Schumacher is the only member of the two staffs under the .500 mark. He has won 11 and dropped 13.

Giant Pitchers' Records Better.

The combined records of the Giant pitchers show that they have yielded 621 runs in 1356 innings, while twirling 59 complete games. The Yankee hill men on the other hand have gone the route on 75 occasions and in 1331 innings have been found for 689 runs by the opposition.

Thus the figures indicate that the real difference between the pitching staffs of the two world series contenders is Carl Hubbell.

On the receiving end of the battery, each club owns a star, Bill Dickey, for the Yanks, and Gus Mancuso, former Cardinal, with the Giants. Dickey is outhitting Mancuso by 57 points, .358 to .301. He has 22 home runs to but five for the former Redbird, while he has batted across 106 tallies to 64 for Mancuso. The Yankee star has played in 109 games, 30 fewer than his rival. He has scored 98 runs to 55 for Mancuso.

Each team has two other catchers, but it is doubtful if they will see service. Glenn and Jorgens, the Yankee reserves, .273 each, while Spencer of the Giants has .278 and Danning .161. Glenn has been in 41 games, Jorgens 31, Danning 30 and Spencer but 19.

Yanks Have Batting Edge.

Team batting records are clearly in favor of the American Leaguers. The Yankees, according to latest averages, are hitting .301 against .280 for the Giants. The men of McCarthy scored 1051 runs in their first 152 games, an average of 6.9 a game, while the Giants, in 151, counted but 734 times or 4.9 each contest, a difference of two runs a battle in favor of the entry of McCarthy.

The Yankees own 1644 hits, including 310 doubles, 82 triples and 179 home runs, against 1497 safeties for the Giants, with 234 two baggers, 46 triples and 95 round trippers. Which shows a decided slugging advantage for the Yankees. The Yankees have pilfered more than twice as many bases as their rivals, with 74 against only 31. The American Leaguers have drawn 688 bases on balls compared to 426 for the Giants.

In fielding, the Giants have a margin of one percentage point with .974 to .973. The Yankees, however, have turned 141 double to 126 for their rivals.

Yankees' Pitching Better Than Fans Believe, McCarthy Writes; Thinks They'll Cool Off Giants

By Joe McCarthy,
Manager of New York Yankees.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Ever since I became manager of the Yankees in 1931, I have nursed one big ambition, and that was to meet the Giants in a world series. Not that tackling the New York representatives of the National League stood out as a new experience for me, because I fough the late John J. McGraw plenty in my five years as pilot of the Cubs.

But to battle the Giants as manager of the Yankees, to face the possibility of not only a world championship victory, but a success earned through beating the club from the Polo Grounds, held out to me what I regarded as the greatest satisfaction offered in a whole baseball career.

Now I face the fulfillment of that ambition. The Yankees meet the Giants at the Polo Grounds next Wednesday, and I am confronted with the necessity of planning a battle against one of the "hottest" teams in the history of the National League.

There is no getting away from the fact that, in spite of our great hitting and our fine pitching—and we have better hurling than most of the experts give us credit for—Bill Terry's club presents some interesting problems for us.

Giants Came from Behind.

On July 15, the Giants were in fifth place, 10 and one-half games behind the pace. Then they began to move, and they never stopped until they had worn down the opposition and landed in the big series.

A team of that character, in that physical and mental position means trouble. It has to be "cooled off." Making a man for man analysis, I have no doubt as to our ability to perform that "cooling off" process with the aid of extra base hits. You may recollect that one of the "hottest" teams we have seen in 20 years represented the National League last October, against the Tigers.

The Cubs had won their pennant by taking 21 straight games and performing a baseball miracle. When they won the first game of the world series by 3 to 0, they got hotter than ever.

But over night they "cooled off." Detroit bats turned the trick. They did it with a home run by Hank Greenberg, doubles by Mickey Cochrane and Billy Rogell. They won by 8 to 3, and I knew then and there that Charley Grimm's team had lost that momentum which had carried it right through a month of brilliant victories.

Momentum Sometimes Wins.

I am aware of the fact that there are examples of world series clubs which managed to carry their pennant winning momentum through the classic. I know that the Braves of 1914, who were last on July 4, not only won the pennant but trounced the great Athletics in four consecutive games.

But I also know what my ball club can do. I know how it can rise to the occasion when the money is on the line. I saw it all season, knocking down one contender after another just as soon as the threat showed its head over the trench.

I know how "hot" this team of mine can get when the incentive is greatest. Players of the type we have on the Yankees may look relaxed before a big series. They have been coasting for weeks. But just show them that championship, and see how they throw off that appaient lethargy and go to it, hammer and tongs.

Every Pitch Will Be An $800 Ball, Says Dizzy Dean

DIZZY DEAN said in a radio interview last night that every pitch he throws against the Cubs today, "will be an $800 ball."

Dizzy explained that each Cardinal expects to get $1800 as his share of the world series money provided the Redbirds finish second. If they finish in a tie for second and third money with the Cubs by losing today's game it will cost each Redbird about $800, according to Dizzy.

Dean explained that if his younger brother Paul had been able to turn in 15 victories the Cardinals would be playing the Yankees in the world series. However, Paul's bad arm, coupled with injuries to Manager Frisch and the two Martins ruined the club's chances of winning the National League pennant, in Dizzy's opinion.

Dizzy will leave for Wichita, Kan., immediately after today's game, he said. He also plans appearing in Oklahoma, Oakland, and San Francisco, before returning to St. Louis for his 1936 "adios."

CREEL BEATS EVENS 6 AND 4 FOR SOUTHPAW GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

pitched onto the green and took a five.

They halved with the eighth with pars and Evens cut Creel's lead to one up at the turn when Howard put his tee shot out of bounds and took a seven to Evens' five.

Howard had a three on each of the next three holes to increase his advantage to three up again as Evens had a five on the tenth and a 5 on the twelfth where he was behind some bushes off the tee.

Creel also won the thirteenth with a par four when Evens missed a short putt for a half and the Coloradoan was four up.

Evens was trapped with his second shot at the fourteenth but made a great out and sank the putt for a birdie four to win the hole from Creel's five after Howard had topped his second shot badly.

Creel got into a trap at the fifteenth with his second shot and needed six strokes to lose the hole to Evens' par five and Fred was only two down.

Two Up at Lunch Time.

Evens cut another hole off Creel's lead by winning the sixteenth with a par four when he was just over the back edge of the green with his second, chipped on nicely and got down in one putt while Howard took a five.

They both hit the seventeenth green with their tee shots and got their pars, but Creel went to lunch two up when he won the eighteenth with a par four, hitting the green nicely with his second and getting down in two putts, while Evens took a five.

Creel added two more holes to his lead at the nineteenth and twentieth, with fours, while Evens took fives.

They halved the twenty-first and the twenty-second, then came the hole which may have had considerable to do with the result.

Both were in the ditch at the twenty-third, Evens following Creel in after Howard, with a wind at his back, had driven into the trench which is in front of the green, with a wooden club. Fred, instead of playing in safely, followed suit and lost the hole when Howard made the better out and got a five to Fred's six. That put Evens five down.

Creel then proceeded to mess up the twenty-fourth, taking a six, but Fred hit a bad second at the twenty-fifth and lost to Howard's par five.

Evens was on the twenty-sixth green from the tee while Creel was short and Fred won the hole with a par three when Howard took a four.

Creel was trapped with his third at the twenty-seventh and his six cost him the hole to Evens' five, Fred thus making the final turn three down.

One of Best Shots of Day.

Howard made one of the greatest shots of the day at the twenty-eighth, where he put his second through some trees to the green and won the hole to go four up when Freddy took a five, due to a pitched third shot which was a bit too strong.

Evens three putted the twenty-ninth and only got a half in four after Creel was trapped to the right from the tee.

Howard was to the left of the thirtieth green behind a trap from the tee, but pitched on nicely and got a four to win the hole when Evens took a five, being trapped with his second.

They halved the thirty-first with par fours, due a fine cut which Evens made after being in the sand on his second shot.

Creel made two great shots to the thirty-second and was on the back edge, while Evens was on in three. When Howard pitched stony to the hole Evens conceded putt hole and match.

Cubs Win, 12-2; Up to Dizzy to Win Second Place in 1936 Finale Today

cially fond of Cardinal pitching, for he made two singles, two doubles and a home run, which is about as well as one can do in five trips to the plate.

After the Cubs had been retired in the fifth it began to rain and play was suspended for eight minutes. When play was resumed the Cardinals weren't much more powerful at bat than they had been in the previous innings.

Heusser was removed in favor of a pinch batter and Henry "Cotton" Pippen was the fourth hurler to try to stop the Cubs. He didn't succeed, either, for they gathered one run off him in the seventh and two in the eighth. Lee's triple and Galan's homer, the third of the day for the Cub batters, produced the tallies in the eighth.

Cards Blanked to Ninth.

George Earnshaw saw action in the ninth and a walk, Gill's double, a wild pitch and Jurges' single accounted for the Cubs' final pair of markers.

The Cards scored in their half when Pepper Martin dropped a double in front of Galan, to open the inning. Medwick fouled out, but Mize singled to right, scoring Martin. Gelbert doubled down the right field line, scoring Mize. Lee then bore down and retired Gutteridge on a pop fly and Ogrodowski on a grounder, thereby hanging up his eighteenth victory of the season. He has lost 11.

By their victory, the Cubs assured of finishing no worse than third, for now they own a two-game edge over the Pirates who lost yesterday.

GLENDALE CLUB HOLDS PISTOL SHOOT TODAY

The annual City-County championship rifle and pistol matches, sponsored by the Glendale Shooting Club, will be held today on the outdoor ranges of the club. The ranges are located at Hollow (Mo.) about 23 miles west of the city limits on the Manchester road.

A Dewar course for the rifle title, consisting of 20 shots for record at 50 yards and 20 for record at 100 yards, and a pistol event consisting of 30 shots for record at 50 yards, all slow fire, are the principal events. There will be re-entry matches for rifle shooters at 50 yards and for pistol shooters at 20 yards.

RED BIRD NOTES

FOOT LOOSE and fancy free, will be the title of a track and field sketch preceding the game. The boys will toe the mark at 1:30 p. m. for their base-running, fungo hitting and other exercises.

The traveling troop of the Royal Canadian Mounted police from Regina, Saskatchewan, 36 strong, which is here for an exhibition, will be the guests of the Cardinals today.

Capt. Leo Durocher, who has been out of the Redbird line-up for the past few days with a cold, again was given a rest and Gelbert played short.

While Gill was at bat in the fifth it started to drizzle. Then he lofted his home run between the 374 and 354 marks in right center.

Before the Cardinals went to bat in the seventh, Rip Collins and Terry Moore tossed four dozen autographed baseballs to the boys and girls.

The official attendance was 5164 paid, 2101 boys and 971 girls, a total of 8236.

GRANVILLE WINS $25,000 LAWRENCE REALIZATION STAKES

GIANT KILLER BEATEN A FULL TWO LENGTHS BY 1 TO 8 CHOICE

Son of Gallant Fox Strengthens His Claim to 1936 Championship in Winning at Belmont.

By the Associated Press.

BELMONT PARK, N. Y., Sept. 26.—His equine excellency, Granville, William Woodward's champion of American thoroughbreds, today added to his laurels by winning the forty-fourth Lawrenec Realization, last of the metropolitan's three-year-old classics, before more than 15,000 admiring fans. The Belair beauty, quoted at 1 to 8, was taken in hand through the final sixteenth of the mile and five furlongs test and won by two lengths from W. M. Jeffords' Giant Killer.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Memory Book was third, a length and a half back, and a head better than Jean Bart, stablemate to Giant Killer. Mrs. Dodge Sloan's Corundum completed the field. Granville covered the route in 2:43 3-5 under his 126 pounds, including Jimmy Stout. He earned $19,550, bringing his seasonal total to $110,295. As a juvenile, he won only $1525.

The veteran trainer, James Fitzsimmons, thus saddled his sixth winner of the famous fixture. His other victors were Aga Khan, 1924; Marconi, 1925; Gallant Fox, daddy of today's winner, 1930; Fairno, 1932, and Carry Over, 1934.

Jean Bart did his best to make Giant Killer's task easier by rolling along with a wide early advantage. He sprinted past Granville in the run to the first turn and opened up three lengths, with Stout confidently waiting to strike astride the champion. It was not until they rounded the far turn out of the backstretch that Granville's move began. Stout shot him around Jean Bart and the Woodward star dashed well clear of the field, until his advantage was three lengths midway of the stretch. Jean Bart folded up as Memory Book had a brief sojourn in second place, but it remained for the plodding Giant Killer to supply what opposition there was in the last sixteenth. Stout already had the race won and the Jeffords colt's late rally could not menace Granville.

ARGENTINES DEFEAT U. S. TEAM, 8 TO 4, TAKE WORLD TITLE

jam their way into horseflesh, can thank probably the fleetest polo ponies ever herded together for their decisive, straight match victory. Greentree's stars, headed by Tommy Hitchcock and G. H. (Pete) Bostwick, were a close match of the riders from the Argentine, and their passing and shots were just as precise. But the ponies—they were the big difference.

Far faster and even more polo wise—so it seemed—the Argentine ponies outraced the American ponies like that great Man o' War once overtook his blueblood challengers. Time and again today, as the crowd stood up and yelled for a goal, the little ponies from the Pampa regions would break the rooters' hearts with lightning speed. No less than 10 American threats headed out into the open with no blue-shirted Gaucho in the way, only to be shattered by lightning-footed chargers which never seemed to get enough of running.

Luis Duggan, mounted on the fastest ponies of all, led the Argentine attack today, scoring three goals. No sooner had the game begun than he gathered in the ball and broke into the clear with it. So fast did he streak away that he had a 30-yard lead as he nursed the ball along and then chipped it across leisurely. Back again, Duggan snared the ball and passed it to Roberto Cavanagh, who crossed the field and took it over without trouble. Bostwick gave a great exhibition of ball stroking near the close of the period as he survived some bad bumping and scored America's first goal.

Greentree was blanked in the second and third chukkers. Andrew Gazzotti galloped the entire length of International Field to tally with fast riding, in the second, and Duggan counted again in the third. The fourth chukker saw the hardest and roughest riding of the match with Gazzotti and Bostwick scoring. There was some hope in the fifth when Hitchcock scored to cut Greentree's handicap to 3-5, but the Argentines opened up in the sixth with two rapid fire goals in the final two minutes—one by Duggan on a long, angular pass from Gazzotti, and the other by Cavanagh. That broke the last hope of Greentree.

Hitchcock, slightly off his game, scored on only one free shot in four chances or the result might have been closer.

Ole Miss Upset By Tulane, 7-6

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 26.—Failure to convert the extra point gave Tulane University a 7-6 upset victory over the University of Mississippi in a gridiron thriller today before an estimated crowd of 18,000.

"Bucky" Bryan led Tulane to a touchdown in the third quarter. Moss converted the point.

Ole Miss scored in the fourth quarter when a long pass from Hall, Rebel fullback, to Halfback Peters placed the ball on Tulane's 20-yard line. Two five-yard penalties against Tulane helped advance the ball and big Clarence Hapes, Rebel half, took it over from the 10-yard line with straight line plunges. A. Breyer missed the kick for the point.

East St. Louis Beats Soldan in Air Duel, 19-7

East St. Louis High School's football team defeated Soldan, 19 to 7, yesterday afternoon at the Parsons Field, East St. Louis, in an aerial duel. Statistics on the game showed a total of 47 passes attempted. East St. Louis tried 20 and completed 10, while Soldan attempted 27 and was successful on eight occasions.

The victors lost no time in crossing the goal line for a touchdown. Soldan kicked off, and the East St. Louisans tallied after the next four plays. Eddie Posage tossed a pass to Irving Nicholson for the score. In the final minutes of the first quarter East St. Louis again scored as the passing combination of Posage to Johnny Vallina clicked.

East St. Louis came back in the second quarter to score another touchdown on a 14-yard pass, Posage to Vallina, which gave the victors an 18-1 advantage. Posage added the point after touchdown on a line plunge.

GOUTS & LUMBAGOES CHARITY GAME TODAY

The annual baseball game of the University City Gouts & Lumbagos Charity Association will be played this afternoon at the Heman Park, University City, starting at 1:30 o'clock. This is the fourth annual game, proceeds of which are devoted entirely to charity.

In addition to the game between the pajama-clad players, there will be drill teams, drum corps, clowns, music, and various other attractions. The admission is 25 cents.

50-Match Card.

George Smith, president of the Brown Bomber A. C., last night announced that 50 amateur matches will be fought in the annual local Negro boxing championships, Oct. 5 at the Croation Hall. The tournament will start at 7 o'clock and continue until early hours of the morning. A total of 200 fighters already have entered. Eliminations will be held during this week at the Pine Street Y. M. C. A.

PRINCIPIA HAS 14 VETERANS ON FOOTBALL SQUAD

Coach Bert Clark, of Principia College, has 14 members of last year's squad available for the 1936 campaign which opens Oct. 3 at Galesburg, Ill., against the Knox College eleven. In addition to the 14 regulars a total of 17 new men attended the two week's football camp which closed yesterday.

The four St. Louis players returning this year are the Stitt brothers, Earl and Bob, Dick Clute, and Ed Lewitz. Earl Stitt is a quarterback while Bob Stitt and Lewitz are halfbacks. Clute is a tackle. Adrian DeWindt, center and Dan Oakes, end, are the only St. Louisans among the new candidates. Both of them were members of the Principia Academy A team last year.

The other members of the 1935 squad are Dexter Andrews, Bradford, Mass., and William Price, Montclair, N. J., guards; Tuthill Bayley, Louisville, Ky., and Byron Howes, Highland Park, Ill., tackles; Alexander Gentlemen, Chicago, and Charles Spaulding, Norwalk, Conn., ends; Cleve Bennett, Burns, Oreg., Paul Haines, San Diego, Cal., and John Palmer, Dallas, Tex., halfbacks.

Coach Clark appears to have plenty of candidates for the end position among the new group of players. There are nine out for end, although two of them have also had previous experience in the backfield. These players are Robert Allen, Evanston, Ill.; Gary Bennett, Longview, Tex.; Lawrence Bradbury, Little Rock, Ark.; Robert Cease, Granite City, Ill.; Mark Haynes, Judith Gap, Mont.; Dan Oakes, St. Louis; Tom Palmer, Dallas, Tex.; Robert Leatzow, Chicago, and Fred Wilson, Evanston, Ill.

The other new men on the squad are Charles Bradbury, Champaign, Ill., tackle; Charles Casanave, Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Joe Myers, Evanston, Ill., centers; Robert Conrads, Chicago, and Clifton French, Minneapolis, guards, and James McConochie, Pelham, N. Y., quarterback.

In addition to Clark the Principia College coaching staff includes Boise Potthoff and Marvin Conklin. Potthoff, former Washington University star, served as line coach last year. Conklin was graduated from Principia College in 1934. He played halfback on the football squad for several years and was one of the most consistent ground gainers.

TATTERDEMALION SCORES NOSE VICTORY IN THE POTOMAC

HIGH FLEET IS BARELY BEATEN; 25,000 WITNESS HAVRE PROGRAM

Makalaw at $41.60 and Buck Langhorne at $20.50 Upset the Dope in Earlier Races.

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 26.—A lightly regarded colt, C. V. Whitney's Tatterdemalion, snatched the $10,00 added Potomac Handicap from a heavily backed filly today in as exciting a finish as has been seen here in many a day.

The bay son of St. Germans and Elf, under the strong urging of Jockey J. Westrope, raced up from last at the half-way mark to nose out George D. Widener's High Fleet. Another filly, Fox-Catcher Farms' Gold Seeker, was third, and a third filly, H. C. McGehee's Fair Knightess, was fourth in the mile and a sixteenth contest for three-year-olds.

The finish left the near capacity crowd of more than 22,000 breathless. No more than a neck separated the first three horses, and the judges called for the official photograph to decide the outcome. A tense cheer greeted the posting of the winner's number.

Tatterdemalion paid $17.90 straight in the mutuels. His price would have been higher had he not been coupled with Piccolo, a stable-mate, which wound up fifth. His time of 1:44 4-5 was not exceptional for the fast track.

First prize money of $8250 brought the Whitney colt's winning for the year to only $15,400, since he had come in first in only two of his 16 starts before today's triumph.

High Fleet, winner of more than $30,000 this season, leaped to the front soon after the start and Jockey I. Anderson brought her into the stretch a length ahead of the field. The top weight of 118 pounds was too much for the filly, however, and Tatterdemalion, carrying only 106, nosed ahead in the final strides.

The fourth filly in the race, E. D. Shafer's Floradora, came in last in the field of 10. Col. E. R. Bradley's gelding Bow And Arrow was sixth; Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Knight Warrior, seventh; Edward Brunner's Aneroid, eighth, and Mrs. John D. Hertz's Her Reigh, ninth.

Wright Accused of Rough Riding.

After the race, the stewards announced Jockey Wayne D. Wright had been suspended for the rest of the meeting for rough riding aboard Gold Seeker and his case referred to the Maryland Racing Commission. The announcement said he interfered with Bow And Arrow and caused the gelding to strike the fence at the three-eighths pole.

The betting, including the daily double, approximated $500,000, a high mark for the 11-day meeting which will end Wednesday.

The day's racing saw three jockeys score doubles: Westrope aboard the winner in the feature and Buck Langhorne in the fourth race; Apprentice W. Vassar, Queen Elizabeth in the sixth and Eudes in the seventh, and H. LeBlanc, My Count in the first and Makalaw, in the second.

Makalaw returned the highest mutuel price of the day, $41.60 for $2 straight. The pay-off on Buck Langhorne was $20.50.

BELLEVILLE TOWNSHIP ELEVEN WINS, 2-0, OVER BENLD HIGH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BENLD, Ill., Sept. 26.—The Belleville Township High School football team, minus its two regular halfbacks because of injuries, squeezed out a 2-0 victory over Benld High this afternoon.

The safety came in the opening period when Meng, left guard, and Mullet, left tackle, broke through the Benld line, blocked a kick and then tackled the Benld fullback who had recovered the ball behind the line.

Bud Becker, fullback for the winners, carried the greatest burden on attack, and lacking the two regular halfbacks, he failed to push across any touchdowns.

Mutuals: Tatterdemalion $17.90, $5.70, $3.90; High Fleet $3.50, $2.70; Gold Seeker, $4.10.

Tatterdemalion, saving ground while outrun for the first half, was sent to the outside for racing room, rallied when shaken up leaving the backstretch, circled horses to enter contention in the early stretch and under intermittent punishment was up in the concluding strides. High Fleet was tiptoed to the front at once, was steadied along while setting the pace and finished willingly although unable to resist the winner. Gold Seeker allowed to settle into stride, began bettering her position along the backstretch, went between horses to challenge High Fleet in the stretch but hung in last 30 yards. Fair Knightess was hard ridden throughout, pressed the pace but tired suddenly in the closing furlong. Piccolo raced on the inside all the way. Bow and Arrow saved ground and faltered after moving up menacingly entered the stretch. Aneroid stopped after running forwardly. Floradora quit after seven furlongs.

HORSES GO TO SCHOOL! For Jumping Races at Bridlespur

These are busy days at the Bridlespur Hunt Club as preparations go forward for the race meet to be held here Saturday, the feature of which will be the Mississippi Valley Gold Cup race. Here are some horses being schooled for the meet. The one to the left is Dr. Glenn, owned by August A. Busch Jr., and the other Arcade, owned by M. E. Rowan of Old Spring Farm, St. Louis County. Arcade won the Mississippi Gold Cup race at Bridlespur in 1932 and both of these horses are entered again this year.

WOMEN GOLFERS TO BEGIN PLAY TOMORROW IN NATIONAL MEET

SUMMIT, N. J., Sept. 26.—With Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare retired permanently from competitive golf, the women's national championship, which is to be started next Monday at the Canoe Brook Country Club of Summit, N. J., will be pretty much of an affair of youth.

The young women of the country have come a long way in refining themselves in the rhythmic art of pitching and putting, and there is no saying which one of them, if any, will succeed the gifted woman who has won the championship six times.

It may be that some of the older matrons or some of the older misses, inspired by the openness of the event, will take up where Mrs. Vare left off. But the odds are very much in favor of Pam Barton, the British women's champion, or the muscular Patty Berg, who was runner-up at Interlachen last September, or Marion Miley of Lexington, Ky., who has improved considerably, or some other ambitiously youthful miss, winning.

Truly there are at least 20 competent enough to win and to single that one out is to forecast the impossible, what with the qualification round still to be played and the draw still to be made. This is the fortieth championship and, curiously, there is no other in all the field of 188 save Mrs. Henry B. Stetson of Philadelphia who ever won the title previously.

Mrs. Stetson, then a woman far advanced in the thirties, with a daughter in her 'teens, won the tournament at the Merion Cricket Club just 10 years ago. Since then the crown has decorated the heads of only four women, Mrs. Miriam Burns Horn Tyson, who won in 1927; Mrs. Vare, who won in 1928, 1929, 1930 and 1935; Miss Helen Hicks, who won in 1931, and Miss Virginia Van Wie, who won in 1932, 1933 and 1934.

Sixty-four are to qualify Monday for match play, of which one round will be played Tuesday, two on Wednesday, one round each on Thursday and Friday and a 36-hole final on Saturday.

Polo.

MARCO POLO went to town
On a polo pony,
But he fell down and broke his crown,
And said the game was phoney.

In course of time he made the grade and he was much elated;
And that, we understand is how,
The game originated.

There were no players in the town,
And so he played a solo.
He rode his horse around the course
And said, "I'll call it polo."

He had to stage a one-horse show,
As he was no high roller;
But in the game he soon became
A famous 13-goaler.

Lay On, MacDuff.

MacDonough: What's MacDuff cackling about?

MacDougal: He just laid a stymie.

We hold no brief but it seems as though nobody wants the stymie to stay in but the rule makers.

The Dirty Double Crosser!

Al Ettore said before the fight that if Mike Jacobs sat in the fifth row he would knock Joe Louis into his lap.

The probabilities are that Mike heard this crack and crossed Al by not sitting in the fifth row. We wouldn't put it past him.

We know just about how Al must have felt when he scanned the fifth row and found no sign of Mike. It's enough to disconcert anybody to have his plan of battle go haywire on account of a flank movement or something.

Experts wouldn't have favored the Giants had they know what was ahead, to-wit: Terry able to play only part of the season, Leslie with a lame back, Castleman a flop, Leiber falling down, Jackson in early batting slump, Gumbert effective only seven innings.—Exchange.

Compared to the Cardinals' major casualties, Lady Luck was shooting the works for the Giants.

Outlaw May Be "Collared" When He Tries to Win His Second Valley Cup Race Here

Eastern horse owners will make the sixth running of the Mississippi Valley Gold Cup more than a runaway for one outstanding entry at the Bridlespur race meet here next Saturday.

Within the next few days several outstanding jumpers from the East will be brought to St. Louis to be entered in this and other races on program.

Benjamin Leslie Behr, two-time winner of the cup, will bring his Outlaw back in an attempt to capture the trophy for all time. Outlaw won the race in 1934 but he will have much stiffer competition this year. Arundel from the Francis Garvin Stables is one of the entries expected to give Outlaw a close race.

Seven or more starters will face the barrier in the cup race which offers a $1,000 purse and is for 4-year-olds and upward over about three miles of timber course with about 21 jumps of four feet in height.

Behr also plans to enter another horse in attempting to gain permanent possession of the cup but his best bet will be Outlaw, one of the best steeplechase runners in the nation.

A Sir Galahad III Offspring.

A son of Sir Galahad III-Inlaw, Outlaw established a rather good record. He won the Langollen Cup, $5000 added, the Mississippi Valley Cup, and ran third in the Maryland Hunt Cup. From here he will go East to compete for the $1000 Wissashicken Cup, having won the three-time trophy twice before.

In addition to Arundel, the Garvin Stables also will enter Tertius.

A secondary feature of the race meet will be the $600 August A. Busch Jr. Steeplechase over brush. Outstanding of the entries so far is Ondott, which won a couple of races at Saratoga this year under Frank Slate.

There will be several other races. The first, scheduled for 2 o'clock, will be the Hit and Run Flat race, open to farmers and landowners over whose property the Bridlespur hounds hunt. This race will be ridden only on mules which are the property of the owners entering them and which must have been worked on a farm at least four months prior to the date of entry.

Novelty Races on Program.

The second race, named Gone Away, is a mile and a furlong on the flat for three-year-olds and upward. The third, called Beginner's Luck, is for three-year-olds and upward, maidens and winners of one race. It will be about two miles over brush.

The cup race is fourth, and the Busch Memorial fifth. The sixth will be the Young Entry, open to members of the Bridlespur Hunt field who have not reached the age of 16.

Good-looking hair is a Social Asset

Use VITALIS and the "60-Second Workout"

1. 50 SECONDS to rub—hair-nourishing oils are replenished. Circulation quickens. Your hair takes on new life.

2. 10 SECONDS to comb and brush—your hair looks rich and lustrous, but with no "patent-leather" shine.

GOOD-LOOKING HAIR alone won't carry you to fame and social success. But well-kept hair is a definite asset in a man's business and social life. Yet many men never think of it as a "plus"—never give their hair even the little time it needs for health and grooming.

Tight, dry scalp is often to blame for dull, lifeless, unkempt hair. And to waken your scalp—to bring your hair back to life and lustre—there is nothing like Vitalis and the stimulating "60-Second Workout."

Vitalis and massage quickens the circulation in the scalp—restores the flow of natural, nourishing oils—leaves your hair alive and lustrous and easy to comb. Loose dandruff goes—and with it, one threat of falling hair. And yet there's no trace of that objectionable "patent-leather" look.

Give your hair a chance. Get a bottle of Vitalis from your druggist. Start your first "60-Second Workout" today—keep it up regularly.

ASK YOUR BARBER
He's an expert on the care of scalp and hair. He is recommending Vitalis in the new single-application Sealtube. It is the most sanitary package for you. Be sure to get a Sealtube.

Kirkwood Runs Up 31-0 Score On Clayton

Scoring in every period, Kirkwood High School yesterday administered a 31 to 0 trouncing to Clayton, at Kirkwood, avenging last year's defeat. The victors outweighed Clayton nearly 14 pounds a man and were quick to use this advantage as they drove their way into scoring position early in the first period. A lateral, Johnson to Morgan, netted the first six points after Morgan fumbled, recovered and outran his opponents for 25 yards. A lateral pass for the point after touchdown was knocked down by Withington.

Early in the second quarter a long pass from Hughes to Leverage netted 30 yards from where Johnson easily plunged through center for the remaining three yards and the second touchdown. Johnson was stopped at the line of scrimmage in trying to make the point after touchdown.

Leverage intercepted a Clayton pass and ran 50 yards, to Clayton's 20-yard line. Levitt circled left end for the third tally. Morgan fumbled, but recovered a lateral pass from Levitt and stepped across the goal line untouched for the point after touchdown.

BARNEY PELTY BRINGS HIS FARMINGTON NINE TO OPPOSE EDGEMONT

Barney Pelty (in the flesh—not a moving picture) comes to town this afternoon. Barney may be something akin to a myth to the younger generation, but he was a real, live, hard working, winning baseball pitcher back in 1908 when the St. Louis Browns came very close to winning the American League championship. Today, he is business manager, field manager, traveling secretary and chief umpire bait of the Farmington, Mo., nine, champions of the Ozark League.

Last Sunday, the Edgemont A. C. team of the Missouri-Illinois Trolley League, visited Farmington and defeated Barney Pelty's team, 8 to 3, and this afternoon, at State Street Park in East St. Louis (8000 State street) the two clubs will play the second game of their post-season series. Play starts at 3 p. m.

Boxer Collapses In Fight, Dies

By the Associated Press.

ATMORE, Ala., Sept. 26.—Sammy Lucas, 23-year-old Jacksonville, Fla., boxer, who collapsed in the eighth round of his fight with Woodrow Chancey of Orlando, Fla., here last night, died in a hospital today.

Chancey said tearfully: "That finishes my fighting for good."

Lucas never regained consciousness.

DUKE DEFEATS COLGATE, 6-0; 26,000 ATTEND

By the Associated Press.

DURHAM, N. C., Sept. 26.—Duke's Blue Devils, champions of the Southern Conference, launched the new football season today with an intersectional conquest over Colgate's Red Raiders before a "homecoming day" crowd of 26,000. The score was 6 to 0 but Wallace Wade's pupils held more decisive command of the entire game than the count indicated.

Duke put over the only score of the briskly-waged battle with a 66-yard drive in the third period. Eric Tipton furnished the scoring punch, lugging tne ball through Colgate's stubbornly-resisting forwards from the one-yard line, but Elmore Hackneys' passing and elusive open-field running contributed substantially to the decisive march.

The widely-heralded "hocus pocus" attack of the Red Raiders failed to materialize. Rarely in scoring range and only in Duke's territory three times all afternoon, Colgate had few chances to open up its bag of lateral passing tricks. Duke was well coached to throttle the "razzle dazzle" stuff before it could assume threatening proportions.

CUBS VS. GIANTS AT THE POLO GROUNDS

67% PREFER MILD VINTAGE TOBACCO

THE BIG PENNANT DRIVE...The New York Giants vs. the Chicago Cubs. Amid the roars of thousands of fans, the Giants battle to hold their league lead . . . the Cubs to tear it away from them. Top-notch baseball by two great teams. And up in the stands the fans gave Vintage tobacco another taste victory.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 11—It's a sure bet when you back the taste of Vintage tobacco. Its mild, mellow flavor wins every time. At the Polo Grounds, 271 fans, watching the tense pennant drive, made a taste test. By an overwhelming majority, they preferred the flavor of Vintage tobacco.

We picked smokers at random from the crowd . . . gave each two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another, representing the leading nationally advertised brands.

No names or familiar bands on the cigars . . . not a thing to prejudice the smokers . . . Taste alone counted. Each man smoked both cigars, then indicated the one he liked best. 67% preferred the Vintage White Owl's mildness.

Wherever you are, you can get the same mild, uniform cigar that won these taste tests. It costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.

● No one field can always produce good tobacco. In a Vintage year, the leaf is richer, more full-bodied. In our really mild White Owl Cigar, we use only tobacco of Vintage quality. That means special buying.

● White Owl's Crop Inspection System, the only known organization of its kind, keeps a check on growing conditions in the finest filler-tobacco districts in America. We know where Vintage tobacco is maturing and buy the best of it for White Owl.

● Aging by nature! . . . an average of three years. No economical short cuts . . . no secret processes. Vintage tobacco tastes good in its natural state—doesn't need artificial treatment.

OSAGE HILLS PROPERTY DEAL IS CONCLUDED

New Interest to Acquire Remaining Lots, Clubhouse, Golf Course and Other Facilities in Kirkwood Addition.

PURCHASERS PLAN ERECTION OF HOMES

Sears - Roebuck Acquisition Arouses Renewed Interest in Commanding Corner Sites in Uptown Centers.

By BERRY MOORE.

Negotiations have been concluded whereby outside interests will acquire the remaining unsold property in Osage Hills, a residential development at Big Bend boulevard and Meramec River, in the western part of Kirkwood, according to an authentic source. Overtures looking to the acquisition of this property were begun a month or two ago, as was told in the Post-Dispatch. The deal now, it is understood, is in the option stage.

Foreclosure proceedings may be necessary to acquire title to the property, now subject to mortgages held by the Central States Life Insurance Co. and the General American Life Insurance Co., and under which it is available by virtue of the provisions of the indentures.

The property involved in the deal includes 205 lots, the Osage Hills Country Club, together with auxiliary buildings, golf course and other recreational features. The prospective buyers have plans for the erection of between 35 and 40 houses on a scale which will set a new high standard for this development, it is understood.

The Central States Life has a mortgage on the ground to be acquired. The General American Life has a mortgage on the golf course, comprising 82 acres, the clubhouse and auxiliary buildings. The total amount of the mortgage indebtedness was not disclosed.

The tract, comprising 300 acres, was placed on the market in subdivision form in 1926 by Bixby-Smith, Inc. A substantial amount has been expended for surface and municipal improvements. It is said that all the remaining unsold ground of the original owners is sought by the purchasers. Many lots in the addition have been acquired by persons who have erected homes. None of the individually owned houses, or lots is included in the deal.

Purchase contracts were closed yesterday with the Henry R. Weisels Co. for properties with a total valuation of $75,000 or more. Announcement in this connection will be made shortly, it is stated. Another purchase was that by the Dubinsky Realty Co. of a group of buildings owned by clients of the Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co. The identity of the purchasers, composing a syndicate, is withheld, pending modernization plans.

Awakens Renewed Interest.

Characterized as one of the most striking of the fall, Sears-Roebuck & Co.'s purchase, embracing approximately a half block at the southeast corner of Kingshighway and Easton avenue, has aroused renewed speculative interest in sites occupying strategic positions in uptown centers, realtors declare. As a result there has been a significant number of inquiries as to holdings in this category, presumably on behalf of real estate operators and chain store interests. There is, however, a dearth of such holdings available at attractive prices.

Incidentally the actual seller of the Kingshighway-Easton half block, which was carried in a straw name, had taken the property under a $100,000 mortgage, which the price paid by Sears-Roebuck approximated, it was stated—encouraging to mortgage holders, to say the least. Accordingly, the purchase is referred to in realty circles as a windfall for the seller whose identity is withheld. The transaction was handled by Edward F. Bokern of the E. A. Bokern Real Estate Co. The half block was acquired for a gas and Eight new industries were established and expansions were announced by 27 companies in the St. Louis industrial district during June, July and August, according to the report of the Industrial Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, made public yesterday.

The new industries and expansions represent an added industrial investment of $11,834,000, and requires the services of 730 additional employes. A total of 486,850 square feet of existing floor space has been absorbed and 97,850 square feet of new industrial space is being constructed as a result of the industrial developments.

The New Concerns.

Following are the new companies reported:

When placed in operation, the plant will employ 300 persons.

Pedrick Laboratories, Inc., Sand Springs, Ok., Dr. C. Pedrick, president, 1550 South Second street, recently acquired 75,000 square feet of floor space at the above address. The company is employing 20 persons locally in the manufacture of dog and cat food.

Machinery and equipment costing more than $10,000 has been purchased by the company, which also engages in contract enamel work.

WOMEN'S DRESS HOUSE LEASES STORE ON 7TH

Sherman Wash Wear, Inc. to Occupy Quarters at Corner of St. Charles.

Sherman Wash Wear, Inc., with headquarters in Chicago, has taken a long-term lease on the storeroom in the eight-story Sesame Building, at the northwest corner of Seventh and St. Charles streets, with plans for a store on a pretentious scale.

Negotiations for the lease were conducted through the Henry R. Weisels Co. The building is owned by the Sesame Real Estate Co., of which John S. Leahy, attorney, is president.

The storeroom has a window frontage of 17 feet on Seventh street and 64 feet on St. Charles street. A distinctive store front will be installed and extensive interior alterations will be made.

The concern also contemplates establishing stores in University City, Wellston, Maplewood and in the Grand-Gravois district. The Weisels Co. has been commissioned to find locations for these stores.

The company manfactures women's wash dresses, which it sells direct to the consumer at retail. It operates 13 stores in Chicago and 25 stores in other large cities, including Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Louisville, Atlanta, Birmingham, Chattanooga, Little Rock, and Jacksonville, Fla.

The Sherman Wash Wear, Inc., is the second chain concern recently to stake its claim at this intersection, a strategic point in the downtown shopping center of the city.

Taking time by the forelock, Wilbur-Rogers, Inc., a subsidiary of Blaunder's of Philadelphia, a women's apparel concern on a national scale, recently acquired a 15-year lease of the major part of the three-story building at the southeast corner of Seventh and St. Charles streets, owned by the Lessor-Goldman Co. This lease, which becomes effective Jan. 1, 1937, was arranged by Arthur S. Martin & Son.

The leasee has plans for a store on an extensive scale. It will have a ground floor frontage on Seventh of 40 feet and of 57 feet on St. Charles, including the basement. "It will embrace the entire second and third floors, each 57 by 75 feet, of the building. Extensive improvements to the premises are contemplated, including the installation of a handsome store front, air conditioning equipment and modernistic fixtures.

MORTGAGE BANKERS CONVENTION, OCT. 7-9

Financing Through Private Enterprises to Be Central Theme of Discussion.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—More than 300 are booked to attend the twenty-third annual convention of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America to be held in Memphis Oct. 7-9, it was announced today. Special train arrangements from points in the 40 states where the association has members are being made.

"Mortgage financing through private enterprise has and will continue to meet all legitimate needs" will be the central theme of discussion at the convention, according to L. A. McLean, president of the association.

Guest speakers will include Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Arthur Babson of the Babson Statistical Organization; I. Friedlander, immediate past president of the United States Building and Loan League; Judge Charles N. Burch, general solicitor of the Illinois Central Railroad, and Harvey T. Harrison of Little Rock.

"The theme of our discussions this year is in line with our efforts within the past several years to the effect that private mortgage lenders are well able to supply the great bulk of the mortgage money needed today if allowed to do so without undue Government interference. The private mortgage banker today finds himself in a most peculiar position because of the fact that seven distinct Government agencies are still competing directly with him in his business. Against these odds, however, he is winning the battle, as witness the tremendous amount of new home construction now going on and financed privately. It is our contention that all legitimate needs for mortgage financing can be supplied by private lenders if given the opportunity."

tire service station and for additional parking space by Sears-Roebuck whose three-story fireproof department store stands on adjoining ground at 1414 North Kingshighway. It also will be available for the ultimate expansion of the store.

Apartments Under Negotiation.

Divers and sundry apartments owned by insurance companies or by mortgage bondholders are under negotiation, with both speculators and investors as prospective purchasers. Buildings of this character, however, are not available at prices which prevailed two or three years ago. Divergence of opinions as to values, accordingly, is a deterrent to negotiations in this field. It is not as it was in the predepression era. One cannot buy apartments now on margin. Hence, the relatively few transactions involving buildings of this type.

Demand for lots in Blue Ridge Terrace, the apartment section of the Moorlands, is well sustained. Both operators and investors have acquired lots in Blue Ridge in anticipation of the demand for sites for apartments. Between 15 and 20 lots in this addition have been acquired recently, either by speculators or as sites for building projects through Cornet & Zeibig. Several large apartments recently have been completed in this addition, including several on a pretentious scale by clients of the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co., M. H. Rodemyer & Co. and the John P. Dolan Realty Co.

Promoters are negotiating with the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co. for a loan for the erection of an extensive apartment building, planned for a site on Byron place west of Glenridge drive. It is to be air-conditioned and will be replete with innovations. Anderson-Stocke-Buermann financed the construction of a 12-family building recently completed on the south side of Cromwell drive, east of Westwood drive, in Blue Ridge, which is attracting much attention. The building is unique in that it extends through the block to Clayton road on which it has a second frontage.

Marked interest is also displayed in county tracts, ranging from five to 100 acres, according to Beverly C. Stevens, a director of the County Real Estate Board. It is not confined to any particular section, but is of broad proportions, extending from Florissant road on the north to Gravois road on the south. Acreage is sought as sites for homes and estates as well as speculation, or as an investment. Overflow of construction from the city into the county is a factor in the renewed demand, he declared.

Negotiations have been concluded for several handsome homes in the county, including one in Lake Forest and another on Taylor avenue, in Kirkwood, both on behalf of clients of the Glik Real Estate Co. Details in these withheld pending execution of deeds.

Building Budget Study.

Evergreens and Shrubs Should Be Set Out Now

The activities of the amateur gardener never cease and the mere fact of changing seasons means little except a change in the kind of activity. This is the time of year when the forward looking gardener takes stock of his garden and considers what shrubs and evergreens he shall set out.

A good six weeks till frost will allow shrubs and evergreens enough time to get themselves established in their new environment and when spring comes they will begin to grow with real vigor. Of course it is important to keep the new additions to the garden family moist since fall drying out is quite detrimental to the future growth of the plants.

Evergreens, either the coniferous or broadleaved varieties, require certain conditions for healthy growth. Since evergreens transpire even in winter it is important to have a good root system established before freezing weather. This allows the moisture of the ground to be of benefit to the plant and it will not be called upon to use cell sap, which often results in the death of the plant.

Plants sold with burlap covering of thin mesh may be set out as they are, since the roots will work their way through the meshes. Heavy burlap should be removed without breaking the ball of soil. The surrounding soil must be brought in close contact with the root ball. Air spaces, especially underneath and left as a result of careless tamping, mean that no moisture is carried and it becomes difficult for the root system to become established. The soil should be carefully worked before the plants are set out and all coarse material should be removed. Organic matter should be included in the soil, as this increases the moisture-holding capacity. Peat moss, stable manure or humus may be used since these open the soil up and permit adequate drainage. Of course, plants should be thoroughly watered after they have been set out.

A mulch is important to evergreens, since it aids the retention of moisture and prevents deep freezing, allowing the roots to go on growing for a long period. A shelter from the high winds and too much sun is also advisable. A protection that is open enough to permit circulation of air and at the same time casts a shadow so that the rays of the sun do not linger too long on one part of the plant, will help the uniform growth.

Spring and summer blooming shrubs profit by treatment of this kind. These shrubs are usually chosen as spots of color for spring and summer blooming.

Lilacs, which everyone knows, should be set out now. There is a late growing kind called Syringa villosa with blooms of a rosy tint that is especially good. Hardy perennial phlox may be set out and hollyhocks and lupines may be taken up and set out in other spots at this time of year.

Flowering quince, sometimes called firebush, which blooms in late April and May in some localities, should be set out now; likewise Forsythis or Golden Bell and, the standby of many gardens, the Spiraeas, which blooms in May and June.

With a little thought and planning, it is possible to have shrubs that will bloom during the greater part of the year, leaving the evergreens as spots of cheerful green when the trees are barren and a cold snow swirls about the house.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. The hardware in our home, which is made of bronze, has become very discolored and dingy. Is there anything that can be done to brighten it? MRS. J. T.

A. Go over the hardware with a fine emery cloth and finish with a brass polish.

Q. The radiators in our house, painted with gold paint, are beginning to flake off. We want to remove this gilt and use a paint. Is there any that you can recommend? KATHERINE W.

A. Brush the radiators vigorously with a wire brush to get off most of the gilt that still remains on them. Then wipe well with turpentine. Use a flat wall paint that has been thinned with one-fourth as much turpentine and apply in three coats. Be sure that the radiators are cold and see that they remain so until the last coat has hardened.

Q. How much of a house can I build for $5000? PROSPECT.

A. That is almost like asking: "How much is a pair of shoes:" It depends on quality and size. If your budget is limited and you need a definite number of rooms, you will have to accept the quality in the size that your appropriation will buy. If you demand quality, then you must accept as much house of that quality as you can get for the price. And don't forget all the extras that go with a building: The driveway, paths, grading, planting, etc.

Q. My house needs painting, but not badly. Do you think it would be wise to put on one coat now or wait and put on two coats, say, a year from now? ST. LOUIS COUNTY.

A. Where the paint is still in reasonably good condition — that is, free from large checks or blisters—one coat would be sufficient. In this case, where any bare wood does occur, the bare spots should be touched up with two coats prior to the application of the single coat. In all cases, however, it is advisable to consult a reliable painter and ask his advice regarding the condition of the present paint and thus know more accurately whether one coat will suffice.

Q. How can I have a new bathtub installed without having a crack appear where the tub and tile meet? HERMAN O.

A. Have an iron angle screwed to the studs to receive the edge of the tub. The usual practice is to use a piece of wood for this, but the wood shrinks and then the crack appears. The iron angle eliminates this trouble.

Q. Is it possible to make a bathroom in a space 4 feet by 6 feet? L. C. M.

A. Yes; it can be done, depending somewhat on the location of the door and window. It may be necessary to use a shower instead of a tub. Ask some architect to lay it out for you.

Q. Can you tell me how to stop rattling windows? PINE LAWN.

A. Weatherstripping is the best remedy. Metal weatherstrips will hold the sash in place so they cannot rattle.

Q. What is the best way to build a corner cupboard in a dining room? CLARA T.

A. It can be built entirely of wood, or it may be built up of lath and plaster, with just wood trim about the opening. It is a matter of choice which method you use. We suggest that you have a design made by some competent architect, so it will best fit the purpose for which you intend to use it.

Q. I need room in my garage for sleeping quarters. Do you think the second floor, under the roof, would be suitable. A. J. H.

A. If the garage is wide enough and the pitch is high enough to get a room with walls at least four feet high where it intersects the roof, will full ceiling height over at least half of the floor area, it should be all right. Be sure you have adequate light and ventilation. It would be advisable to insulate the room, particularly over the ceiling and along the slope.

A Colonial Cottage in Brick and Shingle

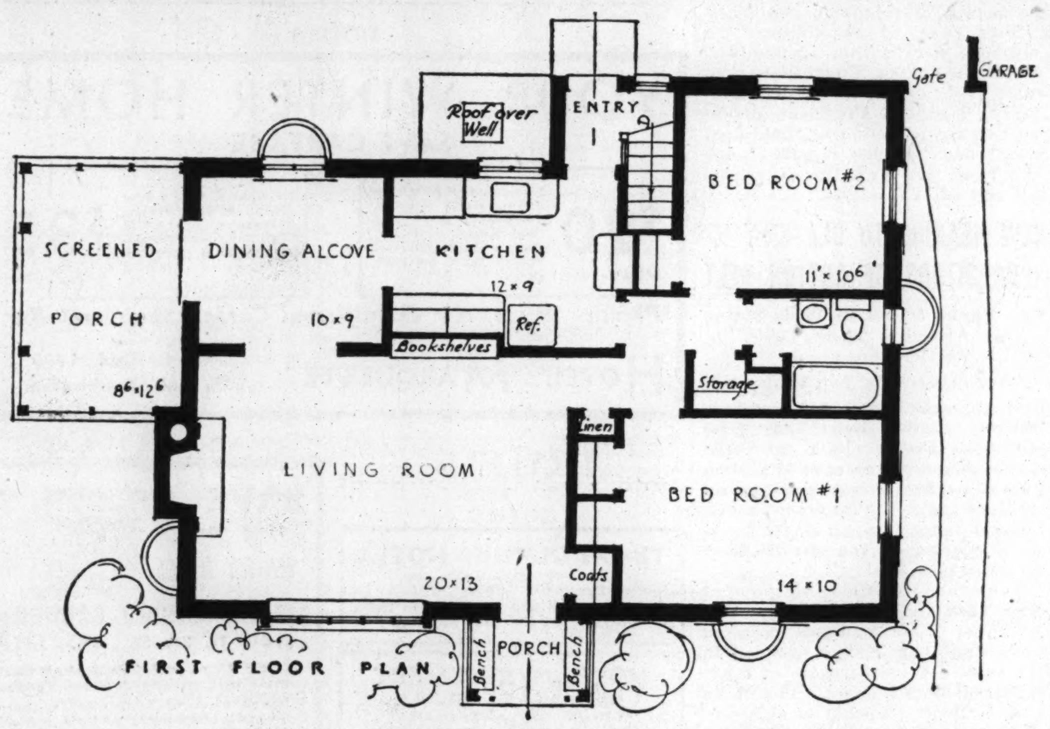
This Livable Small House Which Has All Living Space Planned for One Floor Has a Number of Attractive Points, One of Them a View.



DESPITE the fact that the term "small house" has now become a definite part of the language few really understand the real meaning. Most people who talk about small houses think of a large house in miniature with all its luxuries, but at a considerably reduced cost.

What the small house really means is simplified living, with all the necessary spaces and few, if any, of the luxuries. The small house is the simplified house and the Colonial cottage shown here is a good example of the livable small house. It was planned for Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wehrle by F. Ray Leimkuehler and has been built at Eureka, Mo.

In planning this one-story dwelling in used brick and shingle, the architect took advantage of the magnificent view across a wide valley. The house stands on the crest of a slope and the living room, bedroom and screened porch have the advantage of this fine sweep of countryside.

Since this house was built in the country where there are no municipally owned and operated water works, the next problem was the location of a well that might be convenient for the kitchen. An artesian well was dug and located at the back of the house and in conjunction with the kitchen. It is roofed over and the pump is located in the basement.

ALL living quarters have been planned for one floor. The attic space, used only for storage at present, is well ventilated and accessible from a permanent ladder placed in the storage closet. Demands for expansion later on may take in this attic and a stair may be built to coincide with the present stairway that leads to the basement which combines an inside and outside entrance.

There is no entrance hall and one enters directly into the living room. There is a well placed coat closet to the right of the door. Circulation in the two sections of the house is very simple, with practically no hall space.

The living room is a good-sized one whose chief attraction is its picture window, which looks out on a broad expanse of valley. The window is made up of five casements with transoms, screened and operated from the inside. The fireplace is in simple colonial design of brick and wood. The fireplace wall is paneled in knotty pine, which is stained a rich honey color and waxed. Open book shelves with cabinets below occupy another wall in which is a radio outlet.

A dining alcove which seats four people comfortably, opens off the living room and connects with the kitchen. Double French doors open on the screened porch, which is to be used as a dining porch during the warm weather. Meals here should be leisurely occasions, since the view here is likewise over the valley. The architect suggested exposed rafters stained dark for this porch, because he visualized a colorful decoration of strings of onions and peppers to give country atmosphere. The wood trim in the living and dining rooms is stained a honey color and waxed.

BOTH bedrooms have two exposures, which insure excellent cross ventilation. Here the wood trim is painted and the walls are of tinted plaster which may be papered or painted later. The kitchen has specially designed cabinets for storage and work. The floor is covered with linoleum. The bathroom has a ceramic tile floor with mat glaze and tile wainscoting.

Windows in the bedrooms are double hung and provided with shutters which insure privacy. Window sills throughout the house are of tile. Gutters and downspouts are copper and all doors are the six-panel colonial type. Finish hardware is bronze and lighting fixtures conform with the colonial tone of the house.

The entrance porch has side trellises and built-in benches. The door here is not recessed and has a glazed upper section with a paneled lower portion. The storage closet on the first floor is completely cedar lined. The entire house is insulated and weather-stripped.

There is a fully excavated basement with rooms for storage, heating plant and coal bins. The basement areas are precast half circles set in six inches of gravel, which allows accumulated water to drain into the ground. In the interest of termite prevention, all wood near the ground in the basement has been eliminated. Sashes in this part of the house are steeel.

A chicken yard at the back of the house is enclosed by a Colonial picket fence. Thus far no effort has been made to lay out gardens, since the house stands on a lot that has natural landscaping.

Construction of the house is brick veneer, painted white with wood shingles in the gable ends. The cubage has been figured at 21,800 feet and the estimated cost is 23 cents per cubic foot.

FOR BETTER LIVING

It should be possible to carry on a telephone conversation out of hearing of the assembled family. The custom of having the phone in the living room or hall where every word can be heard is an unkind one. Whenever possible, phones should be in closets where one can close the door and feel reasonably free to speak one's mind.

Casement windows have been steadily improving until they are practically foolproof now. There is one on the market which fits closely into a wooden frame, has an inner screen and the choice of double glazing if you want to cut down your winter fuel cost. This casement operates from the inside and does away with removing screens, etc. In addition, it is equipped with a pin and slot which holds the window securely even when the outside hinges have been removed, thus making housebreaking a remote possibility.

To produce that superfine cup of breakfast coffee a manufacturer has created what is called a self measuring percolator. Number of cups is indicated on the side of the pot and the basket has various levels for varying amounts. The bottom has rounded sides which makes the daily cleaning a pleasure rather than a task.

A custom common to many homes of storing paint cans and brushes and various kinds of litter in closets under the cellar stairs is one that should be corrected. Such accumulations are fire hazards should combustion occur; the closet, which is usually under the stair from first to second floor, would be burned, with the danger of burning the stair above and possibly cutting off the only avenue of escape from the second floor. Keep the space under all stairs unencumbered.

Bamboo furniture needs slightly different treatment from the ordinary hardwood articles, the fiber requiring "feeding" from time to time in order to prevent dryness. It should be rubbed regularly with a mixture of linseed and turpentine, applied with a flannel, followed by a brisk polish with soft rags. Bamboo furniture should also be exposed as much as possible to the air and kept as far away from the fire as convenient.

Sow Perennials Now for Early Bloom Next Year

Perennial seed should be planted as soon as possible if you are to have seedlings to set out this fall. Next season seems a long way off to be preparing for during these hot weeks, but the job isn't a difficult one, and it will repay you many times the effort you put forth now.

In making a bed for perennial seed take precautions to protect the tiny shoots from the sun and hot winds. If you have a cold frame, which is not in use, it will serve nicely until they have grown enough to stand transplanting. The sides will protect from some of the sun, and most of the wind, and if you construct a lattice from ordinary plaster slats, placing them about two inches apart, and then setting on top of the frame, the danger of too much sun will be eliminated.

If the frame was used last spring, the soil might need replacing, and certainly will need much cleaning. If it appears to be in good condition, clean out all vines, pieces of wood, and hard lumps of earth; then, sift it with a coarse screen. When you are ready to plant, sift the top layer again with a fine screen. This will assure the seeds close contact with the soil, and result in speedy germination.

It will be necessary to watch the perennials more closely than you did your annuals last spring, because of the weather and the fact that they germinate more slowly. If your seed bed is kept sufficiently moist, little difficulty will be experienced. During extremely hot days, cover the frame or bed with a cloth or newspaper.

What perennials to plant? You will have to be the judge, and your garden needs will provide the answer.

For the early summer display delphinium, pyrethrums, gaillardias, sweet Williams, campanulas and fox-gloves, as well as the lovely columbines should be planted. The hollyhocks and hardly phlox are best for midsummer, and should not be neglected, as this season lacks something in color from the earlier summer, and you should provide a few annuals to supplement the perennials.

Jig Saw Decorations Easily Removed

Houses substantially built a generation ago frequently show no definite signs of deterioration. They are "dated," however, by the excessive ornamentation — a "ginger bread" effect popular at the time of their erection.

If the "gingerbread" can be successfully removed exteriorally and interiorally the plain effect resulting is more in the present manner and gives the house a modern look.

A house of this type ordinarily contains a series of small cut-up rooms. If partitions are removed the more spacious rooms are attractive and offer greater possibilities in the way of redecorating and furnishing as well as comfort.

To Finish Wicker Furniture

Wicker or reed furniture should be perfectly clean before any paint or lacquer is applied. Scrub it well with washing soda and, when it is thoroughly dry, apply a good coat of thin shellac to seal the raw surface. Finishing wicker furniture with a brush is a task requiring great patience and diligence. If you have a spray to use for applying the finish you will find your work remarkably lightened and the finished results excellent.

A Few Brush Tips

FENCE posts and uprights for yard swings—as a matter of fact, any wooden post that is to be sunk in the ground—should be well protected from the moisture in the earth. The wood should be thoroughly soaked in creosote or double-coated with this material. A coat of asphalt paint may then be applied. Such treatment will prevent rotting and the destruction of the wood by insects.

To disguise an ugly cast-iron mantelpiece in a bedroom, English decorators painted the mantelpiece and a six-inch border entirely around the fireplace in a color that would harmonize with the rest of the room's color scheme.

The way to obtain an old ivory finish for woodwork or furniture is to tint light ivory paint with raw sienna and burnt umber. Apply a glaze coat of raw sienna mixed with burnt umber after that and then wipe lightly.

Lawns Require Care for Winter

Lawn grasses are so hardy that no damage is done to them by low temperatures alone. But extensive winter damage may result from poor drainage, and from the heaving action of alternate freezing and thawing.

Water expands when frozen and contracts when it thaws, as is well known to most gardeners. Since soil is usually moist in the winter, expansion and shrinkage occur whenever freezing and thawing take place. Freezing lifts the soil, and thawing lets it drop, at the same time making it soft and wet. The action is most violent near the surface, since winter thawing is seldom deep, so that shallow rooted plants are often heaved entirely out of the ground by repeated thaws.

Grass which has developed a deep, sturdy root system, will resist heaving successfully. Poorly nourished grass will have shallow roots and may suffer serious injury. A relatively poor lawn may be put into condition by proper attention this fall, though it would be much better if it were cared for throughout the season, and fed to produce a heavy growth which will kill out weeds, and resist the heat of midsummer.

The most important factor in producing a sturdy, deep-rooted turf is adequate plant food. Grass makes heavy demands upon the soil and will quickly exhaust its food supply if it is not constantly renewed. An adequate feeding program calls for four pounds of a complete plant food at the rate of four pounds for each 100 square feet in the early spring; half this quantity six weeks later, and another application of four pounds per 100 square feet in the early fall after the heat of summer has passed. When watering the lawn soak it thoroughly, as sprinkling encourages the development of shallow roots, which suffer from heaving. Do not cut the grass shorter than 1½ inches, or let it grow longer than 3 inches.

Framing of Roof Needs Attention

The framing of the roof is most important in the building of a house and should be given very careful attention. It must be borne in mind that a pitched roof has a definite thrust to the outside, and unless the rafters are tied together close to the base there is a tendency for the outside walls to spread, which will weaken the structure and allow the ridge to sag.

Therefore the ceiling joists nearest the base of the rafters should run in the same direction as the rafters and should be securely tied all the way from one outside wall to the other, either as single pieces of lumber or if two or more pieces are used they should lap well where they meet and should be thoroughly spiked together. If this line of joists coincides with the bases of the roof rafters so that they can run alongside each other and can be spiked together, a perfect tie is effected.

If the joists do not meet the roof rafters at the eaves, then pieces of the lumber, called collar beams, should be nailed across from rafter to rafter as ties and these should be as near the bottom of the rafters as possible.

If it is not possible to get such a tie, it may be necessary to run purlins, which are girders running parallel to the ridge, to support the rafters. These can be put at the point where the nearest joists meet the rafters and will relieve the thrust, or pressure, against the side walls. In any event, if you are interested in building a house, check the manner in which your roof is tied together, or trouble may result.

A Stairway.

When the recreation room is so located that it must be approached through other less attractive portions of the cellar, a spiral stair can sometimes be installed to connect with a room directly overhead. A trap door in the floor will serve as an entrance and will add a bit of glamour and excitement to the descent to the cave below.

REALTORS TO STUDY DISTRICT INFLUENCE

To Find Value One Must Look at Neighborhood as Well as Property.

A piece of real estate ends at its lot line. But its use has a thousand roots in the character and expected future of the neighborhood around it. To find its value one must look at the neighborhood as well as at the property, appraisal specialists know. To find the mortgage risk you need to judge the neighborhood facts, mortgage specialists have emphasized more and more in the last two years. And to find the right buyer, under our changed conditions, and aid him in finding a property soundly adapted to his economic use, this same comparatively new tool of neighborhood analysis again has an important part, Realtor brokers point out.

"Neighborhood Analysis as the Basis of Creative Selling" will be a central topic on the program of the Brokers Division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards when it meets in New Orleans in connection with the annual convention of the association, Nov. 16-21.

It is significant that neighborhood analysis, tracing the roots of a property's use, is scheduled also by the Institute of Real Estate Management of the association for discussion at the New Orleans meeting. The Institute stresses the need for such analysis as the foundation of a management plan that would give a building its maximum earning power.

On Brokers' Program.

Walter L. Greene, Birmingham, Ala., will outline before the Brokers' Division the way in which analysis of the locality can spot out the facts and so clear the way for creative suggestions for real estate use.

Greene, former chairman of the sales division of the Birmingham Real Estate Board and of the Realtor Secretaries Division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, was for six years sales manager of the Jemison Companies, Birmingham, is now executive assistant to Robert Jemison Jr., State director for Alabama, FHA.

Benjamin F. Bills, Chicago, will talk before the Relator brokers on preparing a sales plan for a single-family residence.

Stewart B. Matthews, Chicago, sales manager, Baird & Warner, will lead a round-table on new selling plans.

Vincent P. Bradley, Trenton, N. J., will speak on follow-up systems and methods that real estate firms are using. Mr. Bradley, secretary and treasurer of the W. M. Dickinson Co., Trenton, was for years head of the New Jersey Real Estate License Commission.

Also on the Brokers Division program: Preparing the sales plan of a commercial property; the percentage lease, its advantages and disadvantages; hiring and keeping salesmen (round table); commissions and special services (round table).

ASSOCIATION'S COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION TO MEET SEPT. 29

Initial meeting of the general committee on education of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, appointed by Walter W. Rose, president, persuant to April action of the association's board of directors, has been called for Sept. 29. The meeting will be held at the Palmer House, Chicago.

The committee has the task of planning some correlation in the advanced technical education in real estate, felt to be coming needed work, new frontiers for which were opened by the association's American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers in courses given this and the preceding summer in co-operation with the School of Business of the University of Chicago, and by its Institute of Real Estate Management, in a course given this summer, also in co-operation with the School of Business of the university.

Members of the general committee are: Walter S. Schmidt, Cincinnati, chairman and general representative; President Rose, general representative, ex-officio; K. Lee Hyder, Milwaukee, and Newton C. Farr, Chicago, for appraisers; Alfred H. Wagg, West Palm Beach, and Benjamin F. Bills, Chicago, for brokers; Harry A. Taylor, East Orange, N. J., and Henry T. Holsman, Chicago, for property managers; Waverly Taylor, Washington, D. C., and J. C. Nichols, Kansas City, for land developers and home builders.

NYA SOIL CONSERVATION AND WATER CONTROL WORK

Small Dams, Terracing, Planting, Exhibit Jobs for Men and Women 18 to 25 Years Old.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The National Youth Administration today announced the launching of a nationwide program of soil conservation and water control in co-operation with other Government agencies engaged in the work.

State directors were authorized to submit projects for the erection of small dams, terracing operations, planting of cover vegetation, and other soil conservation work. Unemployed men between 18 and 25 will be used in the construction work while women of the same age group will be put to work on the preparation of exhibits and educational material for school and community centers.

The program will not involve additional outlays of money, Richard R. Brown, deputy executive director of NYA, said.

Brown said Texas already has devised its conservation program and will have approximately 1000 youths at work within the next two weeks.

U. S. C. OF C. ASSAILS EFFECT OF CORPORATION SURPLUS TAX

In Review Asserts That Business Sentiment for Repeal of Levy is Increasing.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Business sentiment for repeal of the New Deal tax on undistributed corporate earnings was reported by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States today to be gaining momentum. In its periodical Washington review, the chamber called on business executives to send it confidential reports on concrete examples of the results of the tax.

In a special tax supplement to the regular review, it said the surtax placed "a brake on expanding business activity." At the same time, the supplement said, the levy would intensify any boom period by "coercing" corporations to distribute earnings and thus tend to increase spending."

Reduction of expenditures was the only way to a balanced Federal budget, the chamber contended.

COUGHLIN REPEATS 'BULLETS' ASSERTION DESPITE CRITICISM

'Shuttling' of Gold Back and Forth Between the Nations Called 'Harbinger of War.'

By the Associated Press,

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—In the face of criticism from prelates of the Catholic Church, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin tonight reiterated his assertion that "if and when" Communism becomes effective in America and the ballot proves useless, he, "as one American," would "not disdain using bullets for the preservation" of American liberties.

Newspapers, he said in a radio address, instead of printing his indictment of "modern capitalism," had sought to "becloud the issue" by publishing the statement of an "anonymous prelate" in Rome and of Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati.

He quoted from Pope Pius XI that, unless what he called the evils of modern capitalism were removed, "the peace and tranquillity of the nation cannot be defended except by force."

On devaluation of the French franc, Father Coughlin said that Secretary Morgenthau and the fiscal heads of France and Great Britain had gotten together with the international bankers to fix the value of the franc at 23 to the dollar. "Does not the Constitution prescribe that Congress shall have the right to fix the value of foreign coins?" he asked. The world is "weary," he said, of the "shuttling" of gold back and forth between the nations. Always, he continued ,this has been a "harbinger of war" and a forerunner of revolution. He predicted war "within 12 months."

William Lemke, Coughlin-backed Union party candidate for the presidency, described President Roosevelt and Gov. Landon as "gold dust twins" and "coupon clippers," one "the head end and the other the tail end of Wall street."

NEW HEARING TO CLASSIFY CREDITORS OF COTTON BELT

Two Banks Object to Their Status as Affecting Their Voice. in Reorganization.

After counsel for two bank creditors of the St. Louis Southwestern Railway (Cotton Belt) had filed objections Friday to a proposed classification of the railway's creditors in pending reorganization proceedings under the Bankruptcy Act, Federal Judge Charles B. Davis reset a hearing on the classification for Dec. 11.

The two banks, Chase National of New York and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. of St. Louis, objected to having their claims grouped in the same class with those of other collateral note holders. The claim of the Chase National is $3,500,000 and that of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. is $1,000,000. Other noteholders in the class in which it is proposed to place the two banks are Southern Pacific Co. (assignee of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation), $17,882,250, and Railroad Credit Corporation, $1,627,675.

The amended Bankruptcy Act provides that a reorganization plan may be made effective by the court when two-thirds of the creditors, in amount, in each class have approved it. If the two banks were placed in the same class with the other note holders they would not be able, because of the comparative smallness of their claims, to make effective objection to a reorganization plan.

The proposed classification follows that in the Missouri Pacific reorganization case which has been upheld by the Federal District Court and the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, a case in which banking interests are seeking a review by the United States Supreme Court.

Time Change Takes Effect Today on KSD

Virtually All Network Programs Scheduled an Hour Later — Some of Station's Local Programs Shifted.

BECAUSE New York changes from Daylight Saving Time to Eastern Standard Time today, most of the network programs scheduled on St. Louis stations will be broadcast an hour later than in the past six months.

Shifting of some chain programs to different days, changes necessitated in the scheduling of local programs, and the coming of wholly new programs and the return of noted singers and comedians in fall and winter series, will necessitate more careful study of the Post-Dispatch's radio program listings.

Beginning today, KSD will broadcast the Community Forum at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoons.

In a talk this afternoon, at 12:45 o'clock, Dr. Emmet Kane will discuss several matters brought up by Father Coughlin in the latter's address in the Arena last Tuesday.

J. Roy Stockton and Jimmy Connelman's sports reviews on KSD will be carried at 9 o'clock tonight and at 6:45 p. m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Tom Collins, humorist and writer, and a quartet will be starred in a comedy transcription series on KSD at 6:30 p. m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays that will start tomorrow. Collins will play a genial, easy-going editor of a small town newspaper. Everett Kemp will play "Hank," a tramp printer. The quartet will be the Texas Rangers, heard often on the CBS network.

A KSD studio program, set for 6:30 p. m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, will feature Russ David's ensemble. It will be called "Twilight Serenade."

"Songs That Will Never Grow Old" is the title of a new transcription program at 11:30 a. m. Wednesdays on KSD.

"Moving Stories of Life" is another KSD transcription series scheduled at 1:45 Wednesday afternoons.

KSD's Colonel Courtesy programs, featuring sketches and singers, will be broadcast at 6:30 Saturdays.

Allen Prescott's humorous Wife Savers programs, which have won him a following all over the country, may be heard on KSD at 10:45 a. m. Tuesdays and Thursdays.

A new KSD program starting at 5 p. m. today, will be heard weekly at this time. The show consists of the "Office Girls" harmony trio, Allan Clarke, baritone and a two-piano team of Russ David and Lee Sanguinette. The idea is that the singers consult the Files of Melody for their tunes.

KSD and KFUO Exchange Time Today.

TODAY, KSD and KFUO will exchange afternoon periods. KFUO will use the time from 2:30 to 4 o'clock, and KSD will have the time straight through from 4 o'clock until 9:15 tonight. The Shut-in-Hour, formerly broadcast by KFUO from 2 to 3 p. m. will be put on the air from 2:30 to 3:30. The German program, formerly scheduled from 3 to 3:30, will be broadcast by KFUO from 3:30 to 4 o'clock.

WJJD, Chicago, has filed a petition for unlimited broadcasting time.

They will be supported by an orchestra led by Joseph Bonime and the Melodeers Quartet. Miss Claire, who has played in Broadway shows and in several radio dramas, will head a cast of actors in sketches based on the works of American playwrights. KSD Prepares For Broadcasting Of World Series

ARRANGEMENTS have been made so that KSD will be able to broadcast the World Series baseball games. On each weekday when a game is played, KFUO will use the period from 11:45 a. m. to 12:15 noon instead of 12:15 to 12:45, and will delay the start of its mid-afternoon broadcasting until the conclusion of the game. If a game is played next Sunday, KFUO will sign off at 12:15 noon instead of 12:30 and will await the end of the game to return to the air.

The broadcasts for the World Series will begin at 12:15 noon. The first 15 minutes will be devoted to a description of the scenes, the day's lineup and other preliminary details. The play-by-play accounts will start at 12:30. Tom Manning of the NBC Cleveland studios and Ty Tyson of WWJ, Detroit, veteran sports announcers, will be at the microphone for KSD and the WEAF and WJZ network broadcasts, and Warren Brown, a Chicago sports writer, will give the word pictures of the color at the games. Bill Dyer, Frank Laux and Boake Carter will head the announcers for the CBS network.

The Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech football game will be covered by Ted Husing at 2:15 p. m. Saturday on the CBS net.

Summaries of the play in the Women's National Golf tournament at Summit, N. J., will be carried by the WJZ chain, at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow, at 5:25 p. m. Tuesday through Friday and at 5:15 p. m. Saturday.

Marion Talley Now on KSD

Her Concert Becomes 4 P. M. Sunday Feature Today—Amos 'n' Andy Shift to 6 O'Clock—Another Good Will Court Session at 7 O'Clock Tonight.

MARION TALLEY, who sang for some time Friday nights on KSD and recently has been scheduled on the WEAF network at a time when the station could not carry her concerts, will be back on the Post-Dispatch's station at 4 o'clock this afternoon and subsequent Sundays for full half-hour programs. As in the past, she will sing with a large orchestra led by Josef Koestner. For today, Miss Talley has programmed Koestner's arrangement of "Chinese Lullaby" from "East Is West" and songs from "Roberta." The Paul Taylor Choristers are also billed. Among other pieces, the orchestra will play for the first time anywhere a Chinese musical sketch which Koestner composed recently.

Amos 'n' Andy will move tomorrow to the 6 to 6:15 p. m. spot on KSD daily except Saturday and Sunday. They will have that period throughout the fall and winter.

A second session of the Good Will Court, in which persons from all walks of life take their troubles before a microphone in the NBC New York studios for counsel by two Magistrates, will be broadcast by KSD from 7 to 8 o'clock this evening. Listeners who heard the first of these programs last Sunday evening said that it was one of the most moving they had ever tuned in.

Harry Richman, the night elug and stage entertainer who recently completed a round-trip trans-Atlantic flight with Pilot Dick Merrill, is billed with Richard Himber's orchestra at 8:30 tomorrow night on KSD.

Jimmy, Lucille and Russell Gleason, one of Hollywood's better known families of actors, will play a sketch on Fred Astaire's program Tuesday night on KSD. Astaire also will feature the "Pixilated Sisters," a comedy "hit" in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," and Freda Shaw's Etude Singing Society, Negro group of "Show Boat."

Grantland Rice, the sports writer, is back on the Jessica Dragonette program, at 7 o'clock Friday nights on KSD, to discuss coming football games, condition of the players, last minute situations confronting the coaches and his opinions as to the probable outcome.

"Frame of Mind," a comedy based on adventures resulting from amnesia, will be performed in KSD's First Nighter period Friday night, with Don Ameche and Barbara Luddy playing the "leads."

Beverly Roberts, who was successful as a singer in Paris and London before she got to Hollywood, will be the singing headliner with Bob Burns next Thursday night on KSD.

One of his most thrilling experiences will be related on the Leo Reisman program Tuesday night on KSD by Dr. Victor Heiser, author of "An American Physician's Odyssey," who has served as doctor to head hunters, tribal chiefs in savage lands, kings and others the world over.

Jean Dickinson, the soprano, will sing with an orchestra at 8 o'clock tomorrow night on KSD.

Burns and Allen On Hollywood Program.

GEORGE BURNS and Gracie Allen are substituting for Dick Powell, who is honeymooning, in the Hollywood Hotel Friday nights. With them this week will be Jane Withers, the child movie actress; Slim Summerville, Robert Warwick and Igor Gorin, the baritone.

Bruna Castagna's concert on the CBS net and KMOX will be broadcast Saturday at a new time—6:30 p. m.

A time change for the program starring Oscar Shaw, Carmella Ponselle, Elizabeth Lennox, the contralto, and Victor Arden's orchestra puts it on the CBS net and KMOX at 7 p. m. Fridays.

Irving Reis will repeat his production of "St. Louis Blues" Saturday night when the Columbia workshop experimental drama is moved to 7 p. m. on KMOX.

Shandor, the violinist, is to play over KWK at 11 p. m. Monday through Friday.

Vera Brodsky and Harold Briggs, the piano team, have been engaged as a permanent feature of Fred Waring's Tuesday night program.

Irene Rich will play the woman sleuth in "Lady Detective" Friday evening.

On KSD Next Saturday Night

ARTHUR ALLEN and PARKER FENNELLY, noted players of "Down East" roles, who are cast as "Dan'l Dickey" and "Hiram Neville" in KSD's new serial, Snow Village Sketches, a comedy of neighborliness, scheduled to open at 8 o'clock Saturday night.

Gossip From the Studios

HONEY DEAN, who plays "Georgia Ann," the "blues" singer, on KSD's Show Boat Thursday nights, is 18 years old and was born in Mobile, Ala. She learned to play the piano as a youngster, was good at track and field sports, taught Sunday school in her 'teens, made her first money as secretary to a criminal lawyer. She sang at parties, and when on a trip to visit relatives in New York in 1934 had an NBC studio audition after a network official heard her sing at an informal affair. She was given a commercial program immediately. . . .

Blanche Stewart, Mary Livingstone's understudy and leader of the Chicken Sisters, has been engaged for another year on Jack Benny's programs. Last winter, she attracted listeners' attention when she created the role of Mary's "sister" when Mary appeared at rehearsal suffering from laryngitis. . . . Frances Langford, the singer, was Gracie Allen with a Southern accent, and Dick Powell took George Burns' place in the Sept. 16 Burns and Allen broadcast. Two hours before the broadcast, the producer decided Gracie should not take part as she had too bad a cold. Miss Langford and Powell were hastily summoned to the rescue, and Burns and his aids worked out a script. HONEY DEAN

Hildegarde, the Wisconsin singer who made a reputation in London, is spotted on KWK at 9:15 p. m. Tuesday.

The first radio award of merit by the American Legion Auxiliary has been given to the CBS network's American School of the Air, which opened Feb. 4, 1930, and soon will resume its courses.

Organized labor's efforts to increase the power of its Chicago station, WCFL, to 50,000 watts, are being opposed determinedly by KJR, Seattle, Wash. Both stations operate on the same channel with 5000 watts. KJR representatives said at a hearing the past week before FCC examiners that granting WCFL's request would be "calamitous to KJR," because of the interference that would result. Frank Morrison, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor; Rueben Soderstrom, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, and other prominent union leaders spoke in support of WCFL.

Highlights of the Dairy Cattle Congress at Waterloo, Ia., will be reported during three Home and Farm hours on KWK this week.

Fannie Hurst, the novelist, Princess Kropotkin and Sherwood Anderson will be among the speakers in the Magazine of the Air this week.

Joe Brown will play the title role in Ring Lardner's comedy of baseball, "Elmer the Great," for the second time in the Radio Theater, Monday night, Oct. 5.

Performances by the NBC Light Opera Company are now scheduled on the WJZ network at 1:30 p. m. Thursdays.

Frank Forrest, the tenor, will be featured on Rupert Hughes' Tuesday evening programs, and George Stoll's orchestra will replace that of Nat Shilkret. Denny Goodman's band will remain on the program.

Ethel Waters, the singer, is billed with Ben Bernie next Tuesday night.

The Romance of Helen Trent returns for a run at 11:30 a. m. Monday through Friday. Among new and returning serials are the Treasure Adventures of Jack Masters, at 4:30 p. m. Roosevelt's Address on KSD Thursday

President to Use Time on Networks Purchased by Democratic National Committee on Political Talk Basis.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S speech at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, will be broadcast by KSD at 8 o'clock next Thursday night. Time on the networks for his address has been bought by the Democratic National Committee.

Thus far this year the President's speeches have been broadcast by the networks as "sustaining" or non-commercial programs under the unwritten radio law that as the Chief Executive he can go on the air without cost whenever he sees fit. But on and after Tuesday, or from the time of his speech at the Democratic state convention at Syracuse, N. Y., until after Election Day, his talks will be regarded as political and his party will pay for his time on the air as would any other political organization.

For a while it looked as if Al Smith's address to be broadcast the same night would conflict with that by the President. His speech, to be delivered in Carnegie Hall, was booked for 8 to 9 o'clock on the CBS network by the "Independent Coalition of American Women," headed by Mrs. E. T. Meredith, wife of the onetime Secretary of Agriculture in President Wilson's Cabinet, some time before the Democratic National Committee engaged the period from 8 to 8:30 on WEAF and CBS chains.

However, former Gov. Smith, learning of the situation, telegraphed to the President that he had cancelled the first half hour of his period on the chain and would not begin his speech until 8:30 when Mr. Roosevelt would have finished speaking.

The Democratic National Committee, Martin Codel writes from Washington, has requested that the NBC include in none of its networks, for any speeches of any kind that President Roosevelt may make, KFI and KECA, Los Angeles, which are owned by Earle C. Anthony, Inc. The reason was the statement by the management of the two stations that it would broadcast no more speeches by the President during the campaign unless they were paid for at regular rates. The management said that it regarded the President's recent non-sponsored "fireside talk" on drouth relief and re-employment as nothing else than political. There is a difference, it argued, between Roosevelt as President and Roosevelt as candidate, and his radio time should be bought as for Gov. Landon and Col. Knox and other political speakers.

Four Serials Added by KSD To Schedule

'Snow Village Sketches,' 'Tom Mix's Adventures,' 'Thatcher Colt, Detective' and 'Little Orphan Annie.'

SNOW VILLAGE SKETCHES, oldest of network dramatic series, which was broadcast for the first time Feb. 29, 1928, will be back on the air at 8 o'clock next Saturday night for a weekly run on KSD. The script, which will carry further the life and experiences of the lovably, homespun people of Snow Village, a mythical typical town in the New Hampshire hills, will be written by Henry Fisk Carlton and William Ford Manley, authors of the sketches since the beginning. Harold Magee again will be the director.

Arthur Allen and Parker Fennelly, well-known character actors of radio, who created the roles of "Dan'l Dickey" and "Hiram Neville," the principals in the Snow Village sketches, again will play their crotchety parts, and will be joined by the "Pettingills," "Willy Peters" and the other villagers.

The fidelity and vividness of the characters and events of the sketches have won widespread praise for authors and actors alike. Carlton and Manley have lived among the people and neighborhoods they portray. Manley was born and educated in Boston. Carlton, who attended Harvard University, climbs Mount Washington, in the White Mountains, every summer.

The role of Thatcher Colt will be played by Hanley Stafford, veteran of many network programs. Pontiac Field Men Prove Safe Driving To Be Practicable Factory Persistent in Inducing Them to Make Business of It at All Times.

The Pontiac Motor Co. is making a persistent effort to keep its own sales employes in the field safety-minded. About a year ago, all field men periodically. Recent slogans tiac Safety Men, the purpose being to show how a large group, averaging 3000 miles per man each month, could avoid accidents when there was individual care combined with up-to-date motor cars.

Safety slogans, printed on colored 3x5-inch cards, are mailed to the men periodically. Recent slogans included: "Time gained at a street crossing is often lost in the emergency ward"; "Good judgment and safe driving go together. Practice them"; "Pedestrians should be seen and not hit"; "The Judge says, 'Take time or do time' "; "Look Out for Children. You never can tell what they'll do, and you're always wrong if you hit one," and "Are you a safe driver?" More than 50 safety slogans have been issued.

Recently Pontiac Safety Men were asked to check 25 illustrations showing what was wrong with drivers and pedestrians, compare their answers with a key sheet and grade themselves.

Safe driving is kept before these Pontiac men, who drive about 1,000,000 miles every month, and, according to C. P. Simpson, vice-president and general sales manager, this has a remarkable effect in reducing accidents.

"A recent report covering a six-months' period for the Pontiac Safety Men shows that 250 of them drove the six months without a single accident," said Simpson. "Fifty-one of the men had only one accident in that time, and there were no fatal accidents anywhere in the country. Three of our zones had no accidents for any of their men.

"Thus it shows that men can make a business of driving safely."

Dodge Truck Starts Mexico City-Ottawa Demonstration Trip

To Show Closeness in Hours of Mexican Capital to U. S. and Canadian Markets—Due Here Oct. 1.

Starting yesterday, a loaded Dodge truck was to set out to mark a new commercial tail over improved highways between Mexico City and Ottawa, Canada, going by Washington, D. C., New York, Boston and other cities. The idea was to link for the first time by truck the three principal countries of North America, the major consuming markets of the continent as well as the three national capitals.

The truck will stop at St. Louis City Hall long enough to give to Dickmann greetings and gifts from the Mayor of Mexico City.

The route is approximately 4000 miles long. The trip is sponsored by Dodge in co-operation with the Mayor of Mexico City, in the interest of international goodwill and commerce. Including its preliminary trip to Mexico City, the truck will have traveled 7000 miles before it returns to Detroit.

The trip is made possible by the opening of the Pan-American highway, which spans the 765 miles between Laredo, Tex., and Mexico City, thus making the central part of Mexico accessible at last by good roads.

Wide Variety on Route.

It will cover practically all types of climatic conditions to which a truck is subjected in North America, from the high mountain passes of the Pan-American highway to the sea level district along the Atlantic seaboard. It also passes through the dry area in the deserts of Northern Mexico and Southwestern United States to the moist areas in parts of the Eastern States through which it will travel. While most of the route will be covered in daylight hours, night travel will be necessary at times.

The truck is a standard Dodge one and one-half ton model, exactly as built every month.

On the theory that safety must go with progress in the motor world, Dodge engaged as driver Al Radero of Detroit, whose record is 500,000 miles without a mishap.

Leaving Mexico City yesterday, the truck is scheduled to pass through Springfield, Mo., and St. Louis, on Oct. 1. It should arrive in Washington Oct. 4, in New York City on Oct. 6 and in Montreal and Ottawa on Oct. 9. It will leave Toronto on Oct. 12 to return to the Dodge main plant.

Reason for choosing this route was to demonstrate how close in hours Mexico City is to the largest consuming markets in the United States and Canada.

The truck will take approximately 15 days to cover leisurely the route between the three national capitals. No attempt at speed will be made, as the trip is also intended as a demonstration of highway safety.

Dodge Executives Tell Dealers of Plans For Fall Sales Drive

E. J. Poag Details Preparations by Factory for Final Quarter of Year.

Plans and preparations by the Dodge factory for sales activities in the last quarter of this year were discussed at a meeting of Dodge dealers and their salesmen which was held Monday at German House. The meeting was followed by a banquet in the evening at Hotel Jefferson.

Speakers at the meeting were E. J. Poag, director of merchandising and advertising, and Paul Jerrue, regional manager.

Poag pictured the pace at which the business of the automobile industry increased in the first eight months of 1936, and cited some of the factors that had made Dodge's share in the progressive business rise considerably higher than the average gain noted by the industry as a whole.

He quoted records showing that, whereas the business of the entire industry in the first seven months of 1936 exceeded by 26.5 per cent the business done in the like period of 1935, the 1936-over-1935 business gain thus far recorded by Dodge dealers alone was 35.6 per cent.

Poag's presentations were illustrated by sound and motion pictures. He emphasized the scope and thoroughness of the basic plans for guiding the work of the Dodge dealer organization, comprising more than 5000 retail outlets and recruiting more than 50,000 car merchants, salesmen, service experts and mechanics and other personnel connected with the business.

Chevrolet Dealers Entertain Service Men and Mechanics

The Chevrolet dealers of St. Louis and surrounding territory were hosts recently to their service men and mechanics at a meeting in the Club Continental, Hotel Jefferson.

R. C. Andrews, zone service and mechanical manager, presented certificate awards in recognition of outstanding work during the past year to 125 of the mechanics in attendance. T. L. West, regional service manager, and C. C. Schelp, city wholesale manager, assisted Andrews in the presentation.

Andrews said that it was necessary for Chevrolet approved mechanics to spend a year of intensive study in proper service methods and procedure, followed by rigid examinations before the certificates were awarded. These courses of instruction are held by Chevrolet dealers twice each month throughout the year to insure having his service work taken care of by men who have extensive knowledge of the progress constantly being made in the engineering and production departments of Chevrolet Motor Co.

During the meeting motion pictures were shown of engineering, research and tests at General Motors Proving Grounds, and a playlet was presented outlining some of the important operations in a dealer's service department.

Buick Co. Expands Field Organization, Creates 4 New Zones

Expansion of the field sales organization of the Buick Motor Co., in which four new zones have been created and all areas in the United States put under the direct management of the home office, is announced by W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager.

Effective at once, Hufstader said, new zone offices of the company will be operated in Cleveland, O.; El Paso, Tex.; Denver and Milwaukee. In addition, a new distributing organization has been appointed with headquarters in Boise, Ida., and new distributors named in Spokane and Seattle, Wash.

The move is the second in two years effecting a major reorganization and development of the Buick field forces. The first was in 1934 when the company re-established its own regional and zone offices in 24 key points throughout the country and control of all Buick sales activity in the field was taken over by the home office in Flint. Theretofore, Buick sales had been directed in conjunction with those of the Pontiac and Olds divisions of General Motors.

Sweepstakes Contest Will Close Wednesday

Paul A. Jerrue, regional manager of Dodge Brothers Corporation, said yesterday that the great Dodge and Plymouth Election Sweepstakes Campaign would close Wednesday, Sept. 30, and that the salesmen winners would be announced shortly thereafter.

He reported that again three St. Louis men were winners last week —A. E. Kulage, of E. R. Shade Motor Co.; W. Boka, of Rederer Motor Sales, Inc., and J. DeVine, of Boyd-Giomi Motor Co.

Removal of Sludge From Crankcase Urged

In preparation for cooler weather driving, sludge should be removed from the crankcase, transmission and rear end of a car by using regular flushing oils, according to the J & R Motor Supply Co.

The proper grades of lubricants should go into the engine and all working parts of every auto to insure safe driving and minimize wear. Battery, tires, brakes, spark plugs and ignition should be thoroughly gone over.

Model of Plymouth Plant in Detail Gift to Harvard University

Exact Scale Miniature of Half Mile Long Factory of Company in Detroit.

A present to Harvard University in honor of the school's 300th birthday, for the use of its students this fall, is an exact-scale miniature plan, in three dimensions, of the half-mile-long Plymouth automobile factory in Detroit. The specially-built model is 30 feet long and 7 feet high, and is a permanent gift to the university to illustrate modern manufacturing practice in one of the great industries.

Formal presentation to the Harvard School of Business Administration was made by B. E. Hutchinson, chairman of the Plymouth Division of the Chrysler Corporation, and H. G. Moock, Plymouth vice-president, in a ceremony at Cambridge.

Dean Wallace B. Donham of the business school and Georges F. Doriot, professor of industrial management, accepted for the university.

The Harvard model is an exact duplicate of the factory's master layout, used by Plymouth engineers in placing new machinery or controlling the flow of materials through the big main plant in Detroit.

It reproduces in scale the 17 miles of conveyors inside one building, and shows the exact location of all machines, assembly lines, loading and receiving docks in detail. Miniature freight trains and motor trucks appear in the yards of the model plant, to help students visualize the complete operation as developed in the world's most modern auto factory.

Three plant engineers at the Plymouth factory in Detroit worked two months to complete the Harvard model.

Rubber Vulcanizer 53 Feet Long Built By Goodrich Company

The largest vulcanizer ever constructed for the rubber industry, more than 53 feet long and weighing 90 tons, is being installed in the Akron, O., factory of the B. F Goodrich Co.

It has a cubic capacity of 65,000 gallons, is 15 feet in diameter, and will be used by Goodrich to cure rubber lined tanks, the vulcanizer being large enough to admit an entire standard sized railroad tank car.

Goodrich has pioneered in the lining of tank cars for transporting chemicals.

The new vulcanizer will be in service soon after the installation is completed this month. It was designed by the Goodrich engineering department, constructed in an Akron factory and moved to the Goodrich plant on a special eight-ton rig mounted on 16 large tires and drawn by three tractors.

It is constructed of metal more than an inch thick. The door, to be operated by a hydraulic lift, weighs 15 tons.

Use of alcohol as a motor fuel is increasing in Brazil.

Protection of Cars Against Freezing Up to Be Meetings Topic

A new record for protection of local cars again engine freezing in the coming winter will be attempted with the co-operation of automotive dealers, service station and garage men throughout this section. The drive will be launched at Prestone meetings Tuesday night in Tower Grove Turner Hall, 3546 Juniata street, and Wednesday night, Sept. 30, in North St. Louis Turner Hall, 1930 Salisbury street.

"Going Places," a new six-reel motion picture made especially for the series of Prestone meetings sponsored by the National Carbon Co., will be shown at both meetings. There will be an additional short film, "Spills and Thrills," made up of shots of automobile and plane crashes, dare-devil stunts and news releases, some of them never before shown. The meetings will begin at 8 o'clock.

Cooling system engineers will be at the meetings to discuss the latest developments in winter car protection. Dealers, automotive specialists and garage men are expected to be at the meetings, which will be in charge of H. C. "Jack" Priesmeyer, local representative of the National Carbon Co.

Larger Engine Size for 1937 Cars Plan of One Big Factory

A swing to larger motors is a predominant theme of some companies as they prepare their 1937 automobile models, said Detroit auto reports the past week.

"For some years there has been some uncertainty which way engineering would jump—to the small, compact, high-speed motor or to the larger, powerful and more smoothly operating unit," the reports said.

"A builder in the quality field has definitely decided on the latter and cites the following reasons:

"1—The big engine permits a lower ratio between engine speed and wheel speed. This means fewer revolutions will be required of the motor to cover a given mileage. Obviously, there is then less wear on moving parts. Also obviously, gasoline and oil consumption are materially reduced.

"2—Turning over more slowly, yet with the same power production, the big motor is quieter.

Expedition Starts To Collect Curios for San Francisco Fair

Plans to Travel to Many Countries With Trailer Attached to Ford V-8.

The Streeter West Expedition, collectors of the unusual in all countries and climes, has set out on a 2½-year world tour in a Ford V-8 sedan, with trailer attached, from San Francisco. Headed by Mark L. Streeter, formerly an Idaho rancher, the expedition is scheduled to touch many countries, the first on the itinerary being Mexico. In each country, Streeter plans to collect curios which will be placed on exhibition at the San Francisco Golden Gate World Exposition in 1939.

Accompanying Streeter will be Orin Denny, explorer and photographer; Orin Denny Jr., who will be director of equipment and caretaker of the Ford V-8; Mrs. Denny and Streeter's wife.

The party is routed through Mexico City, Central America, South America. From Buenos Aires, Argentina, the car and trailer will be shipped to Capetown, South Africa. A tour through Western Africa will be followed by a jump to Europe, then Asia and the other side of Africa, the South Sea Islands, Japan, Hawaii and home.

Streeter said that the Ford V-8 and trailer would be driven to the nearest seaport and put aboard ship. When road conditions again allow auto travel, they will be disembarked. In the meantime, members of the expedition will push through by the best means available and meet the ship where auto travel can be resumed.

"However, we do not intend to freight the car and trailer unless it is absolutely necessary. We are prepared for the roughest, toughest sort of conditions, and the Ford V-8 will carry a plentiful reserve of gasoline, oil and accessories," Streeter said.

"We will be in many out-of-the-way corners of the world—places where motor transportation, if it exists at all, is limited. In localities like these, a popular make of car and service facilities are absolutely necessary.

"We must have an automobile equipped to stand the hardest knocks of travel. In many places we shall be forced to make our own roads.

The expedition will return to San Francisco in the spring of 1938, following which a year's tour of the United States will be conducted. The Ford V-8 will be placed on exhibition at the World's Fair of 1939 with the hundreds of oddities the expedition expects to gather.

AMERICA'S BIG MONEY-SAVING CAR, OWNERS SAY!

Report 18 to 24 Miles Per Gallon!

Costs Just a Few Dollars More Than Lowest-Priced Cars!

Milwaukee 23 Miles per Gallon!

"There's no doubt about it — Dodge actually costs less to own and operate than a smaller, lowest-priced car," says J. O. Franklin, Jr. "My big, new Dodge has proved that to me right on the road. It's big—roomy—safe and easy to drive—yet I am getting up to 23 miles to a gallon, and saving 18 to 20% on oil. The beauty of it is that my Dodge is just about as easy to pay for as a small car!"

Dallas 20 Miles per Gallon!

"I had heard a lot about the economy of the new Dodge," says Grace Smith, "but I will frankly admit I was skeptical until I got a new Dodge and really had a chance to try it out. But the first week convinced me and I have averaged 20 miles per gallon right from the start!"

Washington 19 Miles per Gallon!

"Many people have been able to drive Dodge cars over 100,000 miles," comments Harry A. Olive. "That means dependability and that's one reason I bought a Dodge. It costs very little more to pay for than small cars and the small amount of gas and oil which it consumes—I have been getting 19 miles to the gallon of gas—more than balances this difference."

Is it any wonder more people are buying Dodge cars than any other make excepting the three lowest-priced cars?

KNOX SAYS ELECTION HINGES ON 5 STATES

Names Pennsylvania, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept., 26.—Five states Pennsylvania, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana, were termed the "real battlefield" of 1936 politics tonight by Col. Frank Knox, Republican vice-presidential nominee.

The Chicago publisher said this in an interview, after surveying the 23 states in which he has campaigned. He said "the tide is rising fast" for his party.

Knox was back in Chicago after a 17-day trip, which took him to the Pacific Coast and back through the Southwest. He wound up this phase of his touring, expected to total 22,000 miles in all, with a night address Friday in Ottumwa, Ia. His special campaign train, which set out from Manchester, N. H., on Aug. 31, had carried him 9071 miles when it arrived at the Union Station here today.

He claimed New York for his party.

Knox called the New England states unanimously Republican and said the eastern section of Pennsylvania was overwhelmingly Republican. His comment on other states he has toured was:

Maryland—"Very debatable, but almost half the old Democrats are cold to the New Deal."

West Virginia—"The open support of Gov. Landon by Senator Rush Holt hurts the Democrats."

Minnesota—"The death of Gov. Olson leaves the Farmer-Labor party divided. The Lemke vote will be heavier there than in any other state, and it is a defection from the Roosevelt vote."

South Dakota—"The administration hurt itself there by advertising the State as being desolated by the drouth."

Wyoming—'Senator Robert Carey is sure of re-election, and the State ticket is going over."

Montana—"At the moment, it is Democratic. The outcome depends on the size of the Lemke vote, which will come—four out of five—as a net loss for the Democrats."

Idaho—"Senator Borah will win by 30,000 to 40,000. The Gov. Ross campaign is a fizzle. He has found active opposition in his own ranks."

California and Washington—"Democratic, at the moment. But if the Communist element in the Democratic party gets any stronger, decent Democrats are going to enter the Republican party."

Arizona—"There is a sharp dispute among the Democrats. The Republican party, on the other hand, has the strongest candidate for Governor in many years. I put it in the Republican column."

New Mexico—"Safely Republican. The Bronson Cutting Republicans and the old liners have joined forces, and we'll elect two Senators along with the State ticket."

Colorado—"It's fighting ground, but the Republicans have the edge."

Iowa—"Iowa is obviously under the influence of the big swing to Gov. Landon.

Donald, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dyer, 4229A Arco avenue, suffered a fracture of the left leg last night when he was struck by an automobile in the 1100 block of Tower Grove avenue. The other boy was only slightly hurt. Donald remained at City Hospital.

ARRESTED POLL CLERK RELEASED ON BOND

Ex-Convict Booked as "Suspected of False Registration."

Paul McCune, 3952 St. Ferdinand avenue, a former reformatory inmate whom police arrested yesterday morning, when they found him serving as an election clerk under an assumed name, was booked as "suspected of false registration" and released on $2500 bond during the afternoon.

Picked up 57 times by police for questioning since his release from the Boonville Reformatory in 1925 after he served a sentence for highway robbery, McCune was questioned again by two patrolmen who observed him canvassing last week's registration in the 4000 block of Cottage avenue. He produced a commission as a Democratic election clerk for the Fifteenth Precinct of the Twentieth Ward, issued to Robert Murray, and admitted, police said, giving that name when he applied for appointment.

He also admitted he had registered as Robert Murray in the Eleventh Precinct of the Twentieth Ward, police said. A person convicted of a felony is not entitled to vote unless he receives a full pardon. McCune was quoted by police as explaining he used the name of Murray "because that was the name he was known by in the neighborhood." His bond, to answer any charge that might be placed against him, is returnable Oct. 5 in Judge Dickmann's Court of Criminal Correction.

Recognized by Policeman.

Patrolmen Ned Collins and Hardy Doerr, assigned to keep watch on election canvassers and give any assistance needed, recognized the pug-nosed McCune and took him to the Deer Street Station.

It was McCune's nose that brought about his arrest in 1926, when he was charged with the holdup of William Brown, chain store manager, who recalled the robber's nose as an outstanding feature. Capt. George Dineen, remembering McCune was definitely pug-nosed, arrested him and Brown identified him as the robber. McCune, offering an alibi defense, was acquitted.

Served 28 Months.

McCune, now 30 years old, served 28 months of a four-year sentence at Boonville. His numerous arrests since his release have been in connection with police investigation and his record shows no other conviction.

A substitute clerk was sent by the Election Board to join the Republican clerk and complete the canvassing.

The application on file with the Election Board under the name of Murray does not show who recommended him. The applicant stated he had served previously as an election official but other records indicate that Murray served neither at the Aug. 4 primary election nor at the June 18 registration. The applicant said he had never been arrested and police reported Robert Murray had never been arrested.

Canadian Mounted Police Arrive for Horse Show

35 Men and Their Trained Bays Make 1600-Mile Trip — Musical Equestrian Drill at Each Performance.

The scarlet-coated members of Troop 1, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, are ready for the opening of the National Horse Show tomorrow evening at the Arena.

Their horses, 35 trained bays, arrived yesterday and the constables, in full regalia, were at the railroad spur behind the Arena stables at an early hour to unload them after the long journey from Regina, Saskatchewan.

It was the longest trip, for horse or man, that any troop of the Royal Mounted has taken into a foreign country, except for an expedition to Greenland.

The Canadians, in charge of Maj. C. H. Hill, superintendent, are not competing at the show but have been brought here as a special attraction to execute at each performance the 20-minute equestion musical drill for which they have become noted in the Dominion.

Autos and Motorcycles Also.

The 32 men, with Maj. Hill and two non-commissioned officers, reached St. Louis before the horses and were quartered at Hotel Chase. Each is considered an expert horseman, although the feel of the steering apparatus of a motor vehicle is as familiar as the bridle rein, for the horse in the Royal Canadian Mounted has made way, as in other services, for the speed and power of automobile and motorcycle.

The horses were led from the cars, each man assigned to his own mount, under the watchful eye of Maj. Hill. The Major, a tall, soldierly man with bristling red mustache, clad in blue uniform trimmed with gold braid but not the traditional red tunic, carefully noted each horse as it was led past him. Any perculiarity of gait led him to halt the procession and examine the animal. No serious injuries came to light, however.

"Gaunt. Small wonder, eh, after 1600 miles," he said, and ordered the troop to the bark-blanketed Arena floor to exercise the horses.

Troopers and horses both gave signs of enjoying the reunion. When the boxcar doors were opened and runways placed to the ground, the men with obvious impatience awaited the opportunity of locating their own animals. Occasionally, above the stamping and whinnying, a constable exclaimed: "There he is. I hear him," and changed to another waiting line. As the horses were haltered they nuzzled at tunic pockets.

They were exercised without riders for about two hours and allowed to roll in the bark until some of the stiffness of long confinement seemed to have left their legs.

Arctic Veterans Among Them.

Among the veterans of the Mounted are five who have seen service in the Arctic, the beat that has given much glamour to the traditions of the force, one—probably the oldest—being, "They always get their man." The five are Constables C. G. Moore, F. Box, T. W. Thomas, W. V. Young and T. E. Shillingford.

The horse show this year is for the benefit of the St. Louis Firemen's Pension and Relief Fund. Opening night has been designated as Orphans' night, and arrangements have been made to convey about 300 children from various institutions to and from the Arena.

Tuesday evening is Governors' night, and invitations have been extended to the chief executives of Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Kentucky and Indiana. The traditional night set aside for the Veiled Prophet Queen, Miss Lila Marshall Childress, and her retinue, is Wednesday; Thursday night will be for Rotarians, Optimists, Kiwanians and members of other civic groups, and Saturday is called Mexico, Mo., night.

An unusual number of women are among the exhibitors at the show, among them Miss Frances Dodge of Rochester, Mrs. Loula Long Combs of Kansas City, Miss Ruth Suekoff of Chicago and Mrs. Paul E. Winter, Mrs. Dorothy Hyland, Miss Jacqueline Busch Jones, all of St. Louis.

More than $16,000 in prizes will be distributed among winners. The stakes include $1000 awards for roadsters, three-gaited and five-gaited saddle horses, ponies, hunters and jumpers.

MAN ARRESTED ADMITS PASSING 20 BAD CHECKS

Used Various Names, But Several Times Gave Correct Address, Where He Was Found by Police.

A 29-year-old former clerk in a handbook shop, arrested last night at the Downtown Y. M. C. A., where he resides, has admitted, according to police, cashing more than 20 bad checks, for a total of several hundred dollars, at drug stores and physicians' offices within the last 60 days. Police said he told them he spent most of the proceeds betting on horse races.

The man, booked as Milton Bobring, was arrested on descriptions furnished by victims. Although various names were used on the checks, the passer several times gave his address as the Y. M. C. A. The method used was to go to a physician's or chiropractor's office, obtain treatment and a prescription, then pay with a check for several dollars more than the fee. The passer would then have the prescription filled at a drug store, paying for it in the same way.

THREE HURT IN COLLISION INVOLVING THREE MACHINES

St. Charles Candidate Runs Into Car Driven by L. C. Stark's Chauffeur Which Hits Another.

Three persons were injured yesterday when the automobile in which they were riding collided head-on with another machine and then struck a third, on Highway 61 near Wentzville.

The accident occurred according to highway patrolmen, when John Busby, St. Charles, Democratic candate for coroner, northbound, attempted to pass an automobile driven by Oliver Shannon, 6725 Schofield place, St. Louis County.

Busby's car collided with that of J. D. Murphy, chauffeur for Lloyd C. Stark, Democratic nominee for Governor, who was on his way to St. Louis to drive Mrs. Stark back to Louisiana, Mo. All three cars went into the ditch and Bushby's machine turned over on the Shannon car.

Wiley Huston of St. Charles, Democratic State committeeman, and Mrs. Margaret Swift, 9430 St. Charles road, passengers in the Busby machine, were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital at St. Charles where it was said that Huston suffered possible internal injuries and Mrs. Swift a broken left leg. Mrs. Lydia Gallaher, of the Schofield place address, who was with Shannon, suffered a fractured right hand.

EIGHTEENTH ANNIVERSARY OF BATTLE OF ARGONNE

Conflict, in Which Missouri and Kansas National Guard Units Took Part, Lasted to Oct. 1.

The six-day period which began yesterday, Sept. 26 to Oct. 1, inclusive, is the eighteenth anniversary of the battle of the Argonne, in which St. Louis volunteer troops of the 138th Infantry and other Missouri and Kansas National Guard units of the Thirty-fifth Division saw their most active fighting of the World War, and sustained heavy losses.

The advance begun early on the morning of Sept. 26, 1918, against the mass of barbed wire and machine-gun emplacements composing the Hindenburg line. The especial task of the 138th, the taking of the town of Cheppy, was accomplished on the first day of the offensive. There were many casualties, including the death of Capt. Alexander Rives Skinker, under circumstances of such heroism that the Congressional Medal of Honor was awarded to him posthumously.

On this and the subsequent days of the drive several other St. Louis officers and many enlisted men were killed. For the Thirty-fifth Division, with a strength estimated at 15,000 men, the deaths exceeded 1000, with 7000 wounded and captured. The division accomplished the tasks assigned to it, in what proved to be the decisive battle of the war.

OPERATORS ACCEPT PROPOSAL TO END MILL WORKERS' STRIKE

Governor Petersen Says Union Agents Also Have Tentatively Agreed to It.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 26.—Gov. Hjalmar Petersen announced today representatives of the mills and operators had accepted a proposal to end the Mill and Elevator Workers' strike.

Shortly afterward the Governor said union representatives had tentatively accepted the proposal and would confer further with J. A. Mull, head of the operators' delegation.

The proposal was the same as that which yesterday settled the strike as it involved the Archer-Daniels-Midland Co.'s linseed mill and nine elevators. The mill operators agreed to recognize the right of collective bargaining and permit employes to elect their own representatives. The Flour, Feed, Cereal and Elevators Union No. 19,152 had sought union recognition.

Gov. Petersen said acceptance by the union would pave the way for the return to work of 1800 workers.

OPERATORS ACCEPT PROPOSAL TO END MILL WORKERS' STRIKE

Governor Petersen Says Union Agents Also Have Tentatively Agreed to It.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 26.—Gov. Hjalmar Petersen announced today representatives of the mills and operators had accepted a proposal to end the Mill and Elevator Workers' strike.

Shortly afterward the Governor said union representatives had tentatively accepted the proposal and would confer further with J. A. Mull, head of the operators' delegation.

The proposal was the same as that which yesterday settled the strike as it involved the Archer-Daniels-Midland Co.'s linseed mill and nine elevators. The mill operators agreed to recognize the right of collective bargaining and permit employes to elect their own representatives. The Flour, Feed, Cereal and Elevators Union No. 19,152 had sought union recognition.

Gov. Petersen said acceptance by the union would pave the way for the return to work of 1800 workers, tured. The division accomplished the tasks assigned to it, in what proved to be the decisive battle of the war.

Supper Party For Queen of Veiled Prophet

Celebration to Be Held at Hotel Jefferson After Coronation at Auditorium—Dancing Until Dawn.

INVITATIONS for the Queen's supper, which annually follows the Veiled Prophet Ball, have been mailed to the maids of honor. As has been the practice for the last few years, the party will be given in the Gold room of Hotel Jefferson, with additional tables in the Crystal room, dancing in the Ivory room and the entire mezzanine available for promenades.

Guests will gather at the hotel immediately after the ball at the Municipal Auditorium the night of Oct. 7, and there will have an opportunity of greeting the new queen and her court informally after having viewed her across an expanse of throne and dance floor during the coronation ceremonies. The supper carries with it an old tradition of "dancing until dawn," intended to keep alive the spirit of early balls as they were given in the river towns of New Orleans, Ste. Genevieve and St. Louis in the early days.

Reservations for the party will be accepted immediately by those holding invitations, and none will be honored after the capacity of the two rooms—1000 guests—is reached. Maids of honor have been requested to send the names of their escorts immediately, and those arranging parties for friends are already making plans.

Subdued lighting effects will be achieved largely by gold candelabra on each table, and a profusion of

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

By THE POE SISTERS.

MEMBERS of the G. A. R. in their picturesque final encampment in Washington last week missed the greetings of a gentle old lady who had welcomed them at their previous visits—Mrs. John A. Logan, widow of Gen. John A. Logan. Mrs. Logan died here a few years ago, but her daughter, Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, was one of the members of the advisory council at the recent event.

Another woman watched the passing of the thin, blue line with memories, not of Civil War days, but of life in the White House, where she was born while her grandfather, Gen. Grant, was president. This was Mme. Cantacuzene Grant, formerly Miss Julia Dent Grant, named for her grandmother.

WHEN Mme. Tjarda van Starkenborgh Stochouwer, wife of the new Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies, sailed to join her husband at his new post after passing the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Marburg, of Baltimore, at their North Shore home, she took with her shrubs, plants and seeds from noted American gardens. Not only flower seeds, but vegetable seeds as well were included. All these will be planted in the gardens of Buitenzorg Palace over which she will preside.

A wild garden is maintained by Mrs. Irwin L. Lenroot, wife of Judge Lenroot, and mother of Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, at their summer home in Northern Wisconsin.

Mrs. Lenroot has put her experiences with her garden into a book called "Will You Walk Into My Garden?"

ESCORTED by their 13-year-old brother, Basil Gordon Dickey and after a summer in Europe with their father, Robert R. Dickey, American Consul at Pau, France, Lelia Dickey, 9 years old, and Peter Dickey, 4, children of Mrs. Newbold Noyes, formerly Mrs. Dickey, are on their way to the United States.

The Dickey children are seasoned ocean travelers, having crossed several times.

Robert B. Dickey III, second son of Mrs. Noyes, now in his tenth year, is remaining in Europe, where he will attend an English school.

Gordon Dickey will enter St. George's School in Newport, R. I., and Lelia and Peter will join Mr. and Mrs. Noyes at their Washington home.

MARSH and Kimball Clark, 7-year-old twin sons of United States Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri, are rooting for big brother Champ Clark II, 13 years old, who has gone to Kent School in Connecticut, with the hope that he makes the baseball team or the crew there.

Young Champ has been a student at the Friends' School in Washington. He is an ardent follower of baseball.

Another Washington lad, Frederick C. Hicks Jr., has gone to Kent School also, where he has been for several terms. He was best man at his mother's second wedding. His mother, Mrs. Frederick C. Hicks, was married early this month to Robert Lister McNeil, chief of Clan McNeil, at a picturesque ceremony in Washington with bagpipe players attired in Scotch kilts.

FORMER Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson celebrated his birthday recently shooting grouse in Scotland. Mr. and Mrs. Stimson went to Europe several weeks ago for a vacation.

Woodley, the Stimson home in Northwest Washington, is being prepared for the return of its owners.

CLOTH COAT

Don't try to do without one! Have a fur coat, of course, but supplement it with a cloth coat for those many St. Louis days when a fur coat is too warm for comfort . . . for the occasions when a cloth coat is more smartly suited to your costume. Have it "Swing," Princess or straight line, but have it you must! Have it trimmed or untrimmed . . . black or in a rich new color, but don't fail to recognize its importance to the success of your Fall wardrobe; whether you want a sports or dress type—

Choose From Our Collection of Assured Successes

The period of conjecture is past and the coat fashions that will be known as "successful" are established! Our coat stocks now reach their peak of variety and authenticity. Each coat has been chosen for its fashion-rightness, for the intrinsic value of its fur and its price. The result is a collection that proves conclusively that now is the time . . . and Vandervoort's is the place to choose your coat.

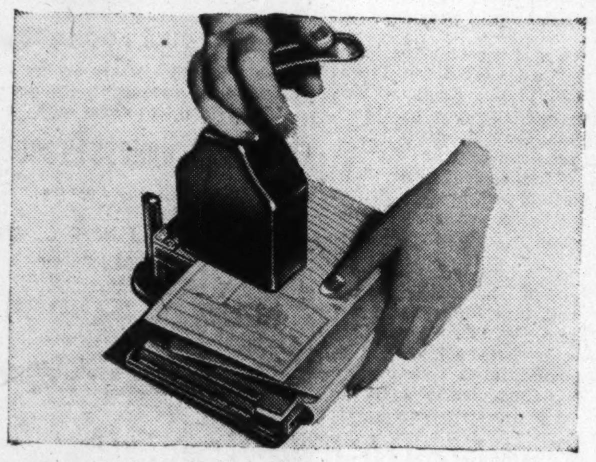
A new and unique system is being introduced to St. Louis for the first time, sponsored by St. Louis' leading stores. Charga-Plate is one of the revolutionary changes which modern times have brought about in retailing! An improvement, which we believe will rank in our customers' minds as one of our most outstanding advances.

SAVES TIME...
Hand the plate to the salesperson. No fuss... no questions... no delay.



IN A FEW SECONDS...
Prints name and address quickly on sales check—no chance for mistakes.

ACCURATE IDENTIFICATION
Prevents its use by another person. Customers retain the Charga-plate.

Known as the CHARGA-PLATE

For the Convenience of Charge Customers We Adopted CHARGA-PLATE

St. Louis' leading stores combined to bring about a community service for the benefit of charge customers. The result is the Charga-Plate—the new and exclusive convenience for charge customers. Your Charga-Plate, which will be mailed shortly, may be used only in the seven stores listed above where you have accounts at the present time.

The pictures tell the entire story—it's modern, accurate, and speedy. Simply hand your Charga-Plate to the salesperson after you have selected your merchandise, who in turn puts it in a nearby Addresser which automatically prints your name and address clearly on the salescheck. No questions, no fuss, no delay. You'll be delighted with this new service and the greater ease it will afford you.

What Is Charga-Plate? A small metal plate with your name and address embossed in raised letters on one side and space for your signature on the other. Tuck it in its leather case into your purse, or slip it into your pocket. It is an ever-present means of accurate identification.

How Do I Use It? First sign the identification on the reverse side of your Charga-Plate. This prevents its use by another person. Use your Plate on every charge purchase whether you take the merchandise or have it sent. Just hand the Plate to the salesperson. In a matter of seconds it records all necessary information on the salescheck and your Charga-Plate is handed back to you.

Watch the papers for later announcements of the first mailing of Plates.

All customers will have only one Plate, as through a system of notching in the top portion of the Plate, it automatically serves its purpose in those of the seven stores listed above in which you have accounts at the present time.

EAST SIDE WPA LEVEE WORK HALF FINISHED

Excavation Machinery Being Introduced to Offset Wage-Hour Adjustments.

Work of rehabilitating the drainage system of the East Side Levee and Sanitary District under a WPA grant of $3,561,581 is 50 per cent complete, Fred G. Austin, WPA administrator of the East St. Louis district, reported yesterday.

A total of 3342 men, mostly unskilled laborers, are employed in St. Clair and Madison counties widening the beds and raising the levees of 22.5 miles of ditches and canals.

The rehabilitation program embraces Schoenberger Creek from French Village to Harding ditch; Harding ditch from Spring lake to the Mississippi River and the Cahokia canal from Peters' station to the new Cahokia Creek diversion canal. Several small tributary creeks and canals are also included.

The laborers are widening the beds to 20 feet so that storm water can be carried off rapidly from the highlands in the Bluffs when sudden downpours or prolonged heavy rains occur. Schoenberger Creek and Harding ditch, their beds choked with brush and silt deposits, have frequently overflowed onto adjacent property, involving the Levee Board in many lawsuits. The heightened levees are designed to prevent this.

Distribution of Workers.

In St. Clair County 2263 men, of whom 1213 are Negroes, are employed at a security wage of $52 per month. In Madison County, 1079 men, including 400 Negroes, are at work at $48. Of the total allocation, $2,047,320 is to be spent in St. Clair County and $1,514,261 in Madison.

Effective July 1, working time of the laborers was reduced from 130 hours per month to 104, and the hourly rate increased to the prevailing wage of 50 cents per hour, the monthly pay remaining the same. To offset this loss of time, reduce unit excavation costs and maintain operations at a normal pace, excavation machinery is being introduced. One drag line has been put in service in Madison County, and as soon as bids, recently opened, are approved, four more machines will be placed in operation.

Austin said engineering calculations showed the average cost of excavation by hand labor, carried on since the project began last December, has been $1.97 per cubic yard. Costs under the new 50 cents per hour rate are $2.56 per cubic yard. Machine excavation, he said, will reduce the cost to about 20 cents per cubic yard, depending on location. A laborer with a shovel, Austin said, can remove an average of two cubic yards per six-hour day, while a power shovel of the type to be used can dig up 780 cubic yards.

What Machines Will Do.

The four new draglines, Austin said, will operate 12 hours a day, five days a week, and on a double-shift basis, will do the work of approximately 3000 men. Workers will not be dismissed to make way for machines, but will be put to work shaping up the levees after them. As other large WPA projects are begun, men will be transferred to them from the drainage ditch job, which will serve as a reservoir of labor, Austin said.

In defending the use of hand labor at higher costs in the past, Austin said that when WPA began in the district, prospective sponsoring bodies were reluctant to undertake projects employing large numbers of men, and to absorb the maximum of unemployed quickly use of hand labor in place of machines had to be resorted to. The project was designed, he said, more to take the maximum number of men off relief and put them on constructive jobs than to accomplish a needed engineering task on a strict efficiency basis.

OBJECTION TO EXECUTRIX OF HUGH K. WAGNER ESTATE

Widow Files Petition Against Appointment of Miss Gladys Walton, His Secretary.

Objection to the appointment of Miss Gladys Walton, 5534 Cates avenue, as executrix of the estate of Hugh K. Wagner, patent attorney, who died July 14, is made in a petition filed in Probate Court which yesterday was set for hearing Oct. 30 before Judge Glendy B. Arnold.

The objector is Mrs. Annette E. Wagner, widow of the attorney. She alleges that Miss Walton, who was Mr. Wagner's secretary, is not qualified to act as executrix because of her physical condition and for the further reason that she will assert a certain claim against the estate.

Roger D. Moore, counsel for Miss Walton, informed the Court that his client recently had undergone a surgical operation from which she is recovering. At present she is at her home. By the will she was named executrix, but in the event she did not qualify, Paul B. Wagner, 2580 Louisville avenue, son of testator, was to be executor. The son joined with Mrs. Wagner in asking the Court to disqualify Miss Walton. Their attorney, Perry Post Taylor, opposed a long continuance of the matter.

Moore said that Miss Walton was the owner of a softball patent which Wagner assigned to her several years ago and from which she receives a royalty of about $500 a year. This patent, he said, is no part of the estate. The will bequeathed the good will of Wagner's law practice and papers and books of his library to his secretary, giving the residue of the estate, value of which was not learned, to the son. Mrs. Wagner was not mentioned in the will.

PLEA TO SET ASIDE ORDER FOR RECOUNT

James H. Stewart, Democratic Commiteeman of 13th Ward, Files Petition.

James H. Stewart, Democratic City Committeeman of the Thirteenth Ward, filed a motion yesterday asking Circuit Judge Granville Hogan to set aside an order he made Thursday directing the Board of Election Commissioners to recount the primary votes for Democratic committeeman in that ward. The order was made on motion of Hendy J. Phelan, who was defeated by Stewart and is contesting the latter's election. Stewart's majority was 19 votes.

Stewart alleges that the order of recount was made without notice to him or his attorney, Paul Dillon, of the filing of such motion, and no such petition should have been granted before it had been set on the law docket and arguments heard. He further contends that the election suit is not at issue, since he has a motion pending attacking the sufficiency of the petition. Ernest F. Oakley, representing Phelan, cited a statute which he said compelled the immediate issuance of the order.

Phelan's suit alleges irregularities in the count made in various precincts in the ward and he claims that a recount will show he, and not Stewart, was the actual winner. The motion attacking the petition contends that the contestants should be required to give the names of the 500 voters whose votes are alleged to have been wrongfully counted for Stewart when as a matter of fact such votes were not cast; further, the contestant be required to give the names of voters whose ballots are alleged to have been not numbered and also the names of voters whose ballots were counted for Stewart although they had been cast for Phelan.

Stewart also asks that Phelan be required to give the names of voters whose ballots are alleged to have been fraudulently altered. Another objection is that the petition does not state any grounds wherein the plaintiff was injured by an act of the defendant.

ILLINOIS HIGHWAY EMPLOYE BLAMES POLITICS FOR OUSTER

H. E. Stuck Says He Failed to Get Subscriptions to New Democratic Publication.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 26. — Henry E. Struck, a state highway engineer for 10 years, lays dismissal from his job to politics.

Struck expressed belief that he was fired because he failed to turn in five subscriptions to a Democratic publication "Truth." Struck said that earlier he had refused to join the Iroquois League and pay a percentage of his salary for political purposes, and that also he had refused to write five letters for the State Administration in the primary campaign.

Bridge engineers are not under civil service, it was pointed out by Daniel Sullivan, administrative auditor for the Governor. "No reason or explanation is necessary," he said.

EARLY CHARITY DRIVE IN EMPLOYES' DIVISION

Soliictation of 250,000 Persons to Begin Before Nov. 9, Official Date.

The Employes' Division of the United Charities campaign has decided to begin its drive to obtain subscriptions in advance of the opening date for the campaign, scheduled Nov. 9, it was announced yesterday by P. B. Postlewaite, chairman of the division.

Following a series of meetings last week of campaign managers and executives of larger business and manufacturing concerns, it was decided to begin solicitation early in order to complete the most difficult portion of the drive by the time the campaign officially opens. Chairmen of various units of the division have been appointed for the solicitation of about 250,000 employes in the city.

Director of Public Safety George Chadsey was appointed chairman of the public employes' unit for the solicitation among the personnel of all Federal, State and city officers in St. Louis. Superintendent of Instruction Henry J. Gerling will serve as chairman of the school unit, which will solicit contributions from employes of public, private, parochial and vocational schools.

Other unit chairmen include: Ben C. Comfort, president of the Mississippi River Fuel Corporation, utility unit; Jacob Van Dyke, president of Western Textile Products Co., industrial unit; Edwain B. Meissner, president of St. Louis Car Co., railroad unit, and J. K. Vardaman Jr., manager of the St. Louis branch of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, financial unit.

MISSOURI U. AGRICULTURAL ENROLLMENT UP 25 PER CENT

Comparison of Figure With 1935; 720 Students Degistered, Double Number of Three Years Ago.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 26.—Doubling its enrollment in three years, the Missouri College of Agriculture has the largest number of students in its history, according to Dean F. B. Mumford. The number of agriculture and home economics enrolled for the present semester is 720, one-fourth greater than the corresponding figure of one year ago.

This large enrollment in the College of Agriculture is due in part, Dean Mumford believes, to the widespread realization that technical training is becoming more and more essential to a successful farm life.

In the fields of agricultural and home economics teaching, extension work, soil conservation and commercial farm management there is an increasing demand for men and women trained by the College of Agriculture, Dean Mumford believes. During recent years the college has not been able to supply enough graduates to fill vacancies in vocational departments of Missouri high schools, in the field staff of the extension service, nor meet all the demands from business corporations managing farm property or dealing in agricultural commodities. All the facilities of the College of Agriculture are now occupied to their capacity, every section of the agricultural classes being filled.

SAFETY DRIVE CUTS AUTO DEATHS 53 PCT.

17 Pct. Drop in Accidents in 30 Days as Compared to Previous Month's Total.

Director of Streets and Sewers Frank J. McDevitt yesterday sent a report to Mayor Dickmann pointing out that automobile accidents, injuries, and fatalities had been materially reduced during the first month of the current safety campaign and suggesting, that if the campaign shows "equally favorable results" during the next three months, it be made permanent.

"Some few people," McDevitt said, "may object to the restrictions imposed upon their driving by this campaign, but if by Jan. 1, notwithstanding the driving hazards of the fall and winter months, we can show equally favorable results, all fair-minded people who are interested in public safety should agree with you that there is every reason for making this campaign permanent."

As is known, Mayor Dickmann last week extended the campaign, which was originally scheduled to be for 30 days only, until the first of the year. Chief feature of the campaign is, and will continue to be, strict enforcement of the city's 30-mile-per-hour speed limit.

Figures Given by McDevitt.

The principal figures which McDevitt presented to the Mayor were a comparison of the traffic situation for the month before the campaign started and for the first month of the campaign. They are as follows:

	July 25 to Aug. 23	Aug. 24 to Sept. 22	Per cent Reduced
Number of accidents	850	705	17.1
Traffic injuries	489	381	22.1
Traffic fatalities	13	6	53.8
Skull fractured, not killed	7	2	71.4
Hospital cases	401	320	20.2
Accidents involving alcoholism	54	45	16.7
Accidents where the driver fled	71	27	62.0

McDevitt also submitted figures comparing the first month of the campaign with the corresponding period last year. Here also there was a reduction in every category, except in the total number of accidents, which was the same for both years. Another set of figures showed that improvement had been made during each successive week of the campaign to date.

5864 Arrests in Month.

During the first month of the campaign police arrested 1628 drivers for alleged violation of the speed limit and 4236 for other infractions of the traffic ordinances.

McDevitt pointed out that fall and winter driving can be considerably more risky than summer driving, and added a few words of caution. "Our accident reports for the past three years," he said, "have shown that the fall and winter months may be considered months with a high accident frequency. This condition results from longer hours of night driving and the hazardous condition of our streets due to inclement weather. All citizens should be reminded of this and requested to make a special effort to exercise caution, courtesy and consideration."

McDevitt suggested that a special effort be made by police to see that trucks and all other vehicles going much below the speed limit be kept as close to the curb as possible and not hinder passing by other machines.

NUN FOR 50 YEARS DIES

Mother Catherine Lauer Was of Order of Religious of Sacred Heart

Mother Catherine Lauer, for 50 years a nun of the order of the Religious of the Sacred Heart, teacher and organist at the academy of the order at St. Charles, died yesterday following an abdominal operation at St. Joseph's Hospital, St. Charles. She was 73 years old.

ONE BONDSMAN FOR 15 IN VOTE FRAUD CASES

Joseph Webbe Has Signed as Surety for a Total of $20,500.

Joseph Webbe, professional bondsman, has signed bonds for 15 of the 35 persons under indictment for registration and election frauds.

Bonds in these cases, signed by him in the Courts of Criminal Correction for persons charged with misdemeanors and those gvien in felony cases in Circuit Court, amount to $20,500. They range from $1000 to $2500 for each offense.

In addition, Webbe, who gave his net worth as $15,300 in a sworn statement before Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood last Aug. 8, is surety on numerous other bonds for persons charged with various offenses. The qualification blank signed before Judge Kirkwood leaves unanswered the question as to whether he was surety on other criminal bail bonds.

Property listed by Webbe includes a three-story brick building at 915 Chouteau avenue, where he resides, bought in 1925 for $10,000 and assessed for taxes at $7000, and a two-story brick flat at 1117 South Tenth street, bought in 1935 for $5000 and assessed at $3000. Both were said to be free of incumbrance. In addition, he listed a gasoline filling station, an automobile and money in bank, but giving no values.

There are no bond forfeitures standing against Webbe and it is not customary to restrict the amount of bonds signed to the net worth of the signer. The usual fee of a professional bondsman is 5 per cent of the amount of the bond.

MORE CRIMES IN CITY IN LAST 3 MONTHS

Murder Rate Goes Up Slightly From Preceding Period.

Crimes committed in St. Louis during the second quarter of this year increased slightly in number over the first quarter, according to an analysis made public yesterday by Irving Weissman, research director of the Community Council. The report is based on figures compiled by the United States Department of Justice.

The murder rate was 3.2 for each 100,000 population, compared with 1.8 the first quarter of this year, and 2.4 in the second quarter of 1935. The city ranked second among 14 major cities in this crime, Washington being first with 3.5. Murder rates for other cities included in the analysis were Cincinnati, 3.1; Baltimore, 2.7; Cleveland, 2; Pittsburgh, 1.9; Chicago, 1.4; Philadelphia, 1.4; San Francisco, .9; Los Angeles, .8; Buffalo, .7; Detroit, .6; Milwaukee, .5; Boston, .4.

Robberies showed a marked decrease under the first period—from 18.4 to 8.6 for each 100,000 population. The largest number of robberies was reported from Pittsburgh, with 42.3. St. Louis ranked tenth among the cities in this classification. In larcenies, however, the city stood first, with 322.2 for each 100,000, which was an increase of 38.9 over the first quarters.

Automobile thefts were at the rate of 42.1 and the city ranked tenth among the 14. In Washington similar crimes totaled 145.2 for each 100,000 population, in Los Angeles, 135.1, and in San Francisco, 127.1. Burglaries were at the rate of 53 and the city ranked eighth; criminal attacks, 1.8, and "aggravated assaults," 13.5.

How Pershing Tried to Aid Allies And Preserve Identity of U. S. Army

American Military Strategists Contend Meuse-Argonne Victory Proved General Was Right in Keeping His Units Independent.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Eighteen years ago today the American First Army launched its pivotal attack which smashed the Hindenburg line on the Western front and forced the imperial German command to sue for armistice. But the 47 days of the Meuse-Argonne offensive, in the opinion of American military strategists, did more than clinch a victory for the allied cause in civilization's most devastating war.

They contend that it served also to justify Gen. John J. Pershing's long and sometimes acrimonious struggle with British and French commands to preserve the identity of the American army as an independent unit.

David Lloyd George, Great Britain's war-time Premier, recently published in his memoirs a severe criticism of the American Expeditionary Force's commander for his stubborn fight to keep his divisions intact instead of allowing them to be incorporated in the allied armies.

Even Before He Sailed.

Even before Pershing sailed for France, he wrote in his diary that "the evident rivalry between the British and French for control and use of our forces, even before we had an army in the field, bore out my impression that those two Governments were not working entirely in harmony."

Such was the situation which prompted Newton D. Baker, then Secretary of War, to incorporate in his instructions to Gen. Pershing, written on May 26, 1917, this paragraph: . . . "You are directed to co-operate with the forces of the other countries . . . but in so doing the underlying idea must be kept in view that the forces of the United States are a separate and distinct component of the combined forces, the identity of which must be preserved."

Not only were these Pershing's orders; they represented his own personal views.

He asked the Allies for ships in which to take American soldiers to Europe and found that their "apparent indifference gave further color to the suspicion that perhaps an American army as such was not wanted."

Meanwhile, the Balfour and Joffre missions to the United States had renewed in Washington the urgings of their respective governments that the United States ship men as fast as possible to the fighting lines for inclusion in both armies disregarding other divisional components such as artillery, supply and engineers.

Lloyd George's Memorandum.

Lloyd George sent a confidential memorandum to Col. Edward M. House in which he stated that American soldiers would not be ready to fight as an army until late in 1918 and that "even half trained American companies or battalions would fight well if mixed with two or three years' veterans."

Under pressure from all sides Pershing finally compromised to the extent of sending a maximum of six divisions of infantry, machine gun, engineer and signal troops during May, 1918, for training and service with the British army.

At the same time, however, he wrested from the supreme war council at a historic meeting at Abbeville, France, official recognition that "an American army should be formed as early as possible under its own commander and its own flag."

It was at this meeting that Pershing, facing Lloyd George, Premier Clemenceau of France, Premier Orlando of Italy, Marshall Foch and other Allied commanders, said: "Gentlemen, I will not be coerced."

That was in answer to their renewed demands that provision be made for a continuation of the arrangement which he had agreed to for May. He won his point.

Several months later, however, even as the important Meuse-Argonne offensive was in progress Lloyd George continued to complain of an autonomous American army.

EGGS FOUND TO TASTE LIKE CRATES THEY ARE STORED IN

Researchers at Cornell U. Say Spruce Containers the Most Desirable.

By the Associated Press.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 24.—Eggs taste of the crates they are stored in.

The crate flavors, announced today after three years' investigation by the Cornell University Agricultural Experiment Station, are "news pulp," "strawgoard," "spruce," "excelsior," "willow," "jack pine" and "aspen."

Eggs, it appears from this work, are capable of absorbing a flavor from almost anything that science has yet invented. Their ability to acquire a taste from other foodstuffs is familiar to both housewives and egg dealers.

But it was also known that eggs stored in a room by themselves might develop undesirable flavors. The source was not clear. The finest tests of chemistry failed to prove anything on either the eggs or the hens which had laid them.

Human tasters at Cornell in three years tasted thousands of eggs. The answer always came out the same, proof of the reliability of the human sense of taste.

The conclusions, published by Cornell University, are that "spruce fillers imparted the least flavor to the eggs and strawboard fillers imparted the cost."

To impart a flavor to an egg, the report states, the packing material must contain a compound which readily evaporates into the air. This compound permeates he shell of the egg.

ESTATE WHERE REAL MACBETH WAS KILLED OFFERED FOR SALE

6000-Acre Place in Scotland Includes Spot Where King Died in 1058.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Sept. 26.—Historically famous as the death scene of Macbeth, the 6000-acre estate of Lumphanan, Aberdeenshire, is now on the market.

Shakespeare made Dunsinane the spot where Macbeth met his dramatic end, in the climax of his great Elizabethan tragedy, but historical authority name Lumphanan as the place where the real Macbeth—a Scottish King who was killed in 1058 A. D.—lost his life in battle.

An age-old verse records the incident:

"O'er the Mounth they chased him then
Until the wood of Lumphanan;
This Macbeth slew they there
In the wood of Lumphanan."

A cairn of stones in a circular clump of trees, about a mile from the village of Lumphanan, marks the spot where Macbeth actually breathed his last.

EVIDENCE OF FIGHTING WOMEN

Skeletons of Vikings in England Disclose Female Remains.

By the Associated Press.

HULL, England, Sept. 26.—Early Viking raiders, the ferocious sea-warriors who sporadically pillaged England, took their women along on fighting expeditions, it is revealed here.

Discovery of a Viking burial spot, on a hill near Hull, discloses that the women apparently took an active part in battle. Eight skeletons were found, including several women. They had obviously been buried in a hurry after a clash with Saxon defenders. In one pit, a powerfully-built man had been thrown in face downward over the skeleton of a woman.

BLOW SCHOOL MOST COMPLETE IN CITY

Has Nine Grades and Vocational Department Since Recent Improvements.

Additional facilities at Blow School, made possible by alterations and additions costing $64,478, have widened the scope of its activities to a degree unequaled by any other St. Louis school.

The school, located in the Carondelet district, offers classes from kindergarten through the ninth grade, including vocational work. With the additions, it has 17 class rooms, manual training shop, general vocational shop, food laboratory, clothing laboratory, typewriting room, mechanical drawing room, science room, girls' gymnasium, boys' gymnasium, assembly room and lunch room.

"For pupils who have finished the eighth grade," James J. Fitzgerald, president of the Board of Education, said yesterday, "standard high school work of the first year level is offered, giving the student the opportunity of saving on car fare and lunch money during the first year of high school work.

"Those eighth grade graduates who prefer to prepare themselves for vocational training may obtain, through the shops and laboratories, the first year of vocational training in their home community which will prepare them for entrance at Hadley Vocational School for three years' more work.

"There is a preparatory department for pupils who have taken work through the eight grades but who need additional preparation for admittance to high school. This rehabilitation project has done much to assist a pupil retarded through illness, and who might have gone to high school as a failure, to prepare a firm foundation for the work to come under expert instruction.

"As an interesting example of the varied types of activity in the community, Blow School probably is unique in St. Louis."

POPE LIKES TO RIDE FAST, EVEN ON WINDING ROAD

Enjoys Speed of 50 to 55 Miles an Hour in Hills at Castel Gandolfo.

By the Associated Press.

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, Sept. 26.—Pope Pius delights in riding at a rate 50 to 55 miles an hour even on a curving road, it has been disclosed at the papal villa here in the Alban Hills where the Pope is spending the summer.

When in the Vatican the Pope used to drive occasionally late in the afternoon. He moved this up to noon at Castel Gandolfo because of the humidity rising from Lake Albano below the papal villa in the late afternoon.

There are only a few miles of road in the villa, and they are winding, but the Pope insists that his chauffeur, Cavaliere Stoppa, drive fast if he is going to drive at all.

The Pope enjoys it. Not so the prelate who must accompany him. The prelate, by custom, cannot sit alongside the Pope, who leans back in the middle of the rear seat of the large American car. Arm rests are arranged so that only one person can sit at the back. The prelate must face the Pope and consequently must ride backward.

Because of sickness at high speed, the prelate has sometimes had to ask the Pope to have the car stopped.

MARCH of FASHION

By

Sylvia Stiles

SCHOOL days may have nothing more to do with the "dear old golden rule days" as related in an obsolete song but they do have considerable to do with a modern rule of campus fashions. The rule is that sweaters and skirts, pearls and clodhoppers are the components of a school day wardrobe.

This was demonstrated last week at Washington University where registration, the annual "freshman mixer" and the start of autumn classes brought out fall costumes and introduced popular themes for the season. While there were some shirtwaist frocks in evidence, the new girls on the campus as well as the upperclassmen showed a preference for the uniform described above, a uniform which is recognized from coast to coast and which, in spite of certain propagandists, wavers little from well defined specifications.

—o—o—

● COOLER WEATHER made knitted wear ideal for campus activities but the chances are that the sweaters would have been out in all their glory regardless of temperatures. Knitted skirts were noted occasionally as a substitute for those of novelty wool, and a few jackets covered the sweaters as the college girls went to and from their classes. Likewise a culotte costume appeared in sufficient frequency to indicate that divided skirts are registering their fashion importance in St. Louis as they have been at some of the Eastern schools.

—o—o—

When a hat is worn at Washington University, its owner ignores the vogue of soaring crowns and tricky brims. There's only one model recognized in campus circles and that is the "knockabout" felt which has a brim turned up all around and which looks the most collegiate when the hat sits far back on the head.

—o—o—

PEARLS, AS HAVE BEEN mentioned, are accepted as a necessity in accessories but their popularity is no greater than the charm bracelets which dangle from every other wrist. Good luck pieces attached to metal chains are too numerous to mention here, some having a certain significance as omens and others chosen because of their oddity or ridiculous appearance. Now and then a girl was seen wearing gold beads instead of pearl ones, but it was hard to find a student without those dangling novelties on her arm.

—o—o—

● THE "FRESHMAN MIXER," as the Wednesday get-together for new students is termed, offered some interesting fashion sidelights in the way of color preferences. There was a definite trend toward the rust tones, the shades of "red earth," "tile" and other yellowish red hues being much in evidence. Combinations of gray and navy or brighter blue also were popular and sufficient freshmen wore black sweaters and skirts to indicate that they, like their elders, believe this season that no color can equal the fashion importance of black.

Miss Mary Wingert was there in an attractive sports frock of two-piece type. It combined red and gray checks. The overblouse fastened high at the neckline with one large red button. The three-quarter length bell-shaped sleeves were the sort that could be pushed up. Navy blue accessories were interesting with the red and gray, and included a turned-up felt sports hat and novelty ties.

—o—o—

Among those who wore suits to the "mixer" was Miss Sara Jean Alexander. Her suit was of gray tweed with which she chose black accessories. The jacket was fitted and belted across the back. A white crepe stud blouse was smart with this costume. Miss Alexander expects to wear this suit to school, often substituting sweaters for blouses and adding a checked swagger coat on cold days. She also will vary it with navy blue accessories.

—o—o—

● MISS PEGGY LOU BAKER was an exponent of the knitted suit. Her two-piece model with peplum blouse was of Spanish tile shade. The blouse was designed along sweater lines with heavy ribbing at the neckline and the bottom. A belt of the yarn tied in a bow at the front. Brown accessories which were most effective with the tile shade of the costume included a brown 'kerchief worn at the neckline, a brown felt hat of the knockabout type and brown sports oxfords with wide straps.

Dubonnet red cashmere was another popular shade for knitted suits. Among those who wore this tone was Miss Peggy Woodlock. It also was created with the blouse revealing the favoritism for the sweater mode. The neckline was of the boat type and finished with novelty ribbing forming the suggestion of a yoke. It fastened with buttons at either side. Sleeves were long and rather full. A sash of the knitted wool tied at the side front, the ends being quite long and giving the costume a Russian accent. A black antelope hat of the high Russian turban type was trimmed with a red feather. Black suede ties were cut high in the new boot style, repeating the Russian emphasis of the ensemble.

—o—o—

Tomato red was another of the distinctive shades seen at the freshman party. Miss Ruth Marie Goerlich's version of this frock was in the shirtwaist style buttoned from neckline to the waistline, with six black leather buttons. A turnover collar was mannish. Wide belt was of black leather. Sleeves were short. A black felt brimmed hat and black kid pumps repeated the dark trimming on the frock.

—o—o—

● A CERTAIN AMOUNT of green appears in every gathering this season. Miss Charlotte Sherwin was one who chose green. Her frock was in the deep pine tone of soft woolen and was trimmed with a lighter tone of the green. This dress was cut to suggest a coat with wide bands of stitching extending the entire length of the front. The skirt had the swinging movement because of its gored treatment. Two patch pockets trimmed the front of the blouse. Miss Sherwin's hat matched the tone of the dress while a lighter green feather matched the trimming. Her brown gabardine pumps had wide straps buckled at the side.

There was one all-black costume, worn by Miss Dolores Vollmar. The only relieving touch of color was a long strand of gold beads. The black wool skirt had a swinging movement. The sweater was of the regulation pull-on type, the neckline fitted high and flat as a perfect background for the glistening beads. Flat suede sports ox-

Presenting The "Mayor's" Wife-- MISS RUBY KEELER

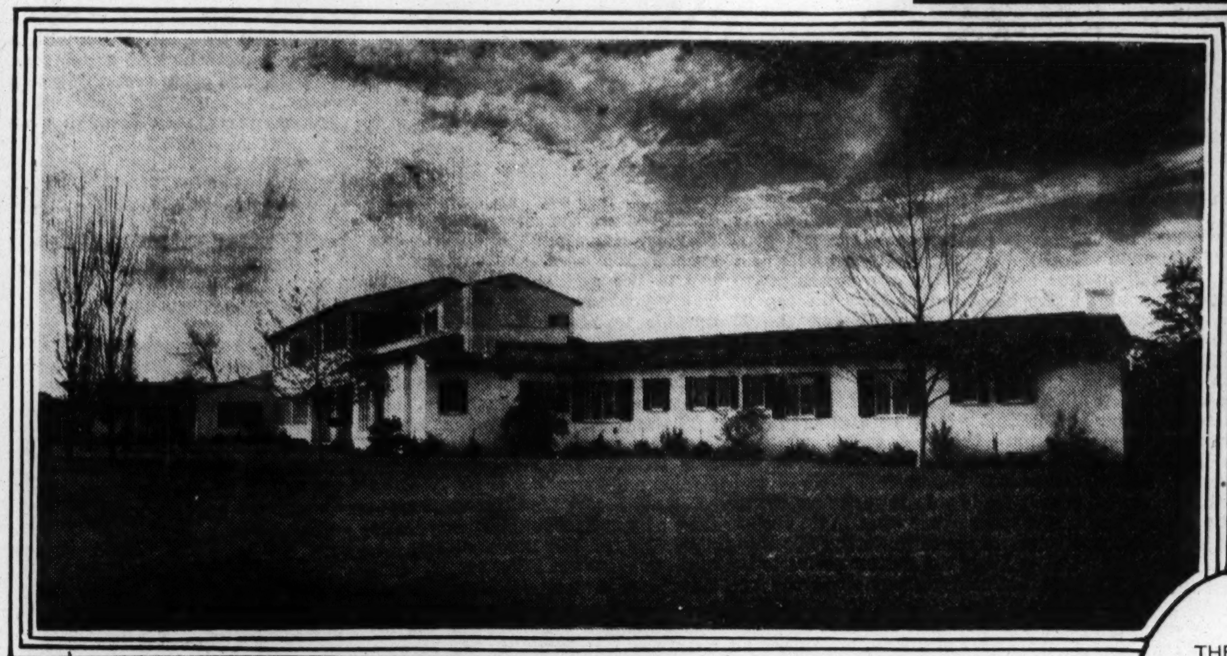
In Her Home at Encino, Cal., Where Her Husband Comedian Al Jolson, Has the Power to Give You the Key to the City.

By MARGARET POST NIEMEYER

A RECENT PHOTOGRAPH OF RUBY KEELER

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 26.

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, where I live, is only a half dozen miles from the little settlement called Encino where Al Jolson, the comedian, is the honorary mayor. Being mayor of Encino, which is really part of Los Angeles, is like being mayor of Carondelet. But, anyway, Al is called mayor all right and so his wife, Ruby Keeler may be safely called the First Lady of Encino. And she is just that. For Ruby and Al have the finest home on the finest estate in all the Encino movie colony and Mrs. Al has been, for the nine months which they have occupied the magnificent place, a most gracious hostess to all the Hollywood notables. The Jolson-Keeler estate is another one of the show places of this end of California so, living, as I have already remarked, just a few miles away, naturally I had never seen it until yesterday.



THE HOME OF MISS KEELER AND HER HUSBAND, AL JOLSON.

Several times, around the studio lot, Mrs. Jolson had asked me to drive out to her home for a little visit. "I never know what demands will be made on me by the studio," she said, "so come early any morning—come to breakfast."

So yesterday morning I went out to Encino at breakfast time. The morning was bright and dewey as I started out the broad highway but by the time I reached Encino the sun was pretty hot and I was glad to turn off of the main road into a shady restful one where huge trees, several feet in diameter, had been left standing undisturbed, almost in its center. I soon came to an estate with a high brick wall extending along it for several hundred feet over which vines climbed luxuriantly and at one end of which there was a large white entrance gate. I pulled up and got out of the car and rang the bell, and from a small opening in the wall directly over the bell there came immediately a voice inquiring, "who's there?" At first I thought that someone was playing a "knock-knock" game with me but I quickly recalled that I was on a business mission as well as pleasure and so replied in a dignified tone "Mrs. Niemeyer; I am a trifle early for calling but Miss Keeler told me to come for breakfast." The oracle spoke again and bade me enter, which I did as the double automobile gate swung open.

FOR a moment I stood transfixed by the beauty of the scene which greeted my eyes. Lovely trees and flowers still glistening with the morning's dew were everywhere, birds were flying about and singing joyously over their breakfasts in the fruit trees, and the fragrance of orange blossoms hung heavily in the air.

A broad, circular drive led from the lodge house at the entrance gate to the long low white house which was scarcely discernible through the intervening trees. As I walked up this path I was met by two very friendly little dogs, one a toy Pekingese and the other a Scotty. They evidently sensed that if a person were admitted inside the gates they need no longer be on guard, but rather that they should be hospitable. And so, with much tailwagging and ingratiating wriggling they escorted me to the front door which was held wide open by a smiling maid, and I heard the charming voice of Miss Keeler saying from some place within, "Won't you join me out here?"

The maid led me into a large square entrance hall, done in white and a soft restful blue, and one through it and out into the "sun room," where I found as domestic a scene as you could wish. Miss Keeler, in deep red print pajamas was seated at a gracefully wrought iron table, which was painted white and had a glass top. On it was spread a rather frugal breakfast of fruit, marmalade, tea and toast. And sitting on Ruby's lap, smiling broadly, was Al Jolson Jr., but better known to everyone out here as "Sonny Boy."

Miss Keeler, who is unbelievably young looking to have been identified with so many stage successes

Sports Costume

Red, yellow and green are gay companions in assembling an autumn sports costume. Red is bright in tone and supplies the skirt of the ensemble while green, equally vivid, appears as a windbreaker type of jacket. The third color enters the fashion picture in the form of a sweater. Add to these a brown felt hat banded with green and brown oxfords for the most striking combination you'll be likely to see.

This New York

by

Lucius Beebe

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.

DEPENDENT upon the presence in its midst of celebrities for a substantial proportion of its urban glamor, New York's cafe society (and that's a pretty embracing flock of folk nowadays) reacts particularly to the stimulus of half a dozen recurrent favorites, mostly stage personalities. Noel Coward is one. The Louis Bromfields, who are great party givers, are others. Libby Holman, when she is in circulation, is another. So is Cole Porter. Ailene Winslow, of Cleveland, practically holds court on her semi-annual visits. And Tallulah Bankhead, the glamor girl of two countries—she's just as popular in England as she is here—adds fresh cantos to the saga every time she comes to town. Everything about Miss Bankhead is legendary and a good deal of it grows in the telling, so that her every gesture, witticism or flirtation becomes Homeric, of a sort of epic significance in Fifty-second Street.

Just as the moment she is fresh on the town from the Coast in George Kelly's "Reflected Glory," and the autograph collectors are three deep around the stage door of the Morosco. Perfectly aware of the uses of a glamorous reputation, Miss Bankhead lives in orchidaceous magnificence, indulges in monumental rages and in general subscribes to the thesis that an actress owes it to her public to live vividly off stage as well as on.

But she never overdoes it, and

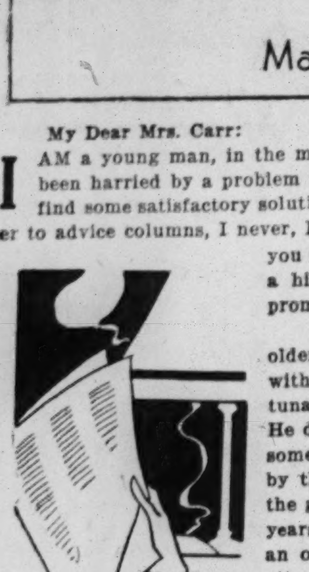
MY OPINION

by

Martha Carr

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a young man, in the middle twenties. For some time I have been harried by a problem which will become serious if I cannot find some satisfactory solution. Not an habitual reader of nor writer to advice columns, I never, I must confess, would have written to you were it not for a close friend. He has a high regard for you, and his urging prompted this letter.



Ever since my high school days an older brother has persistently interfered with my affairs of the heart, which, fortunately, were never very serious anyway. He didn't trouble me in the usual meddlesome ways of well-meaning relatives, but by the annoying process of appropriating the girls for himself. It was easy in those years because the girls were flattered that an older fellow should compete for their attention. Now, however, I have found the girl who comes closer than any other to having the qualities I admire most, and she resents by brother's attitude as much as I.

Her resentment, and my repeated remonstrances, seem only to heighten my brother's determination. He has even told me privately that he doesn't approve of her for me! His behavior, I think, may be explained as the result of a sophomoric belief in his talents as a Don Juan.

I'm trying to maintain a civilized attitude, but the going is hard. I'm humbly asking for your help. If you feel bluntness is incated, don't spare it. Sincerely, '34.

Oh yes, I know all about older brothers. But the trouble generally disappears before the brothers have attained your age and parts. Probably it is not a question of the over-emphasized authority of a senior member of the family. Possibly he just has a way with him, partly charm and partly cheek, which makes things move more smoothly for him—romances for instance. I feel very sure that the girl could, if she would, set him back a few paces and make way for you to take the stride to the front beside her. Ask her why she thinks she should be governed by this elder brother's attitude, if she feels the younger brother is the one she longs for at her side.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM PLANNING a birthday party for Nov. 21. I will then be 14 years old. I intend to invite about 10 children to it. I am a girl who is not a bit boy-crazy, but there are three or four boys in my class at school whom I like as friends. Do you think I should have all girls attend the party or have both boys and girls? I would like also to know if you can give some nicknames for Dolores, Rita and Lucille? D. G.

I believe you will have plenty of time for boys if you wait until your next birthday party. Anyhow, if you ask more girls than boys, there may be trouble; while you can still remain friendly with the boys at school, no feelings will be hurt, if you just do not include any at your party. "Dodo," "Ritzy" and "Lucie" are sometimes used in the place of the names you give.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I WOULD LIKE to know if you can advise me what to do for fleas on my cat? And how do you use it and must she be washed after using it? She is black and full of fleas. Many thanks,

LUCIE W.

Oh goodness, I hope you will not fondle her too much, before you rid her of the fleas! And I hope you will keep her out of doors all you can. Your mother will be just paralyzed if she gets fleas in the house and that is just what she will do if you do not rid her of these hopping things before cold weather.

You really should call a veterinarian or go to a pet shop and ask. Failing to get the information there, call the Humane Society; they will help you out.

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I HAVE A PROBLEM which may seem unimportant but it has troubled me a great deal. I live near a park and I am having trouble with small bugs which I believe are known as silver fish. Although they do no apparent harm to clothing or furniture, it is very embarrassing to have them about the house.

Do you know of anything which might be helpful in getting rid of these little insects? If so I would appreciate it if you would let me know? CONSTANT READER.

You will have to use a spray which may be procured at any of the companies which make a business of extermination of troublesome insects. You can readily find the names of these firms by looking in the telephone book.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

SOME OF THE PEOPLE I come in contact with tell me I am good company and very likeable. I can—and do—contribute my share when it comes to entertaining at a party. I am presentable enough and try to interest myself in what interests the other person. On the other hand, I lack some of the qualities that go toward making one popular; the gift of gab, for instance; but I make a good listener. But should the lack of such qualities I mention make me a bore and hence unwelcome, it seems, at times—intruding upon others?

The feeling of being an intruder still persists at times—sometimes just the enforced friendliness of others making me feel that way. Of course I do not expect you to point out just what is wrong, but I should be interested in hearing what you say on the subject. MATEO.

Sometimes one who feels as you do, shows a self-consciousness that does not make for ease either for yourself or those you are with. Thinking constantly of the impression you are making very often makes your interest, perhaps forced, and makes you seem lacking in tact. To project yourself or your ideas at the wrong time is a very bad move; watch carefully and do not intrude either your ideas or your presence at the wrong time. But do not intrude and then apologize; this makes for the discomfort of everyone present and brings about the enforced friendliness you speak of.

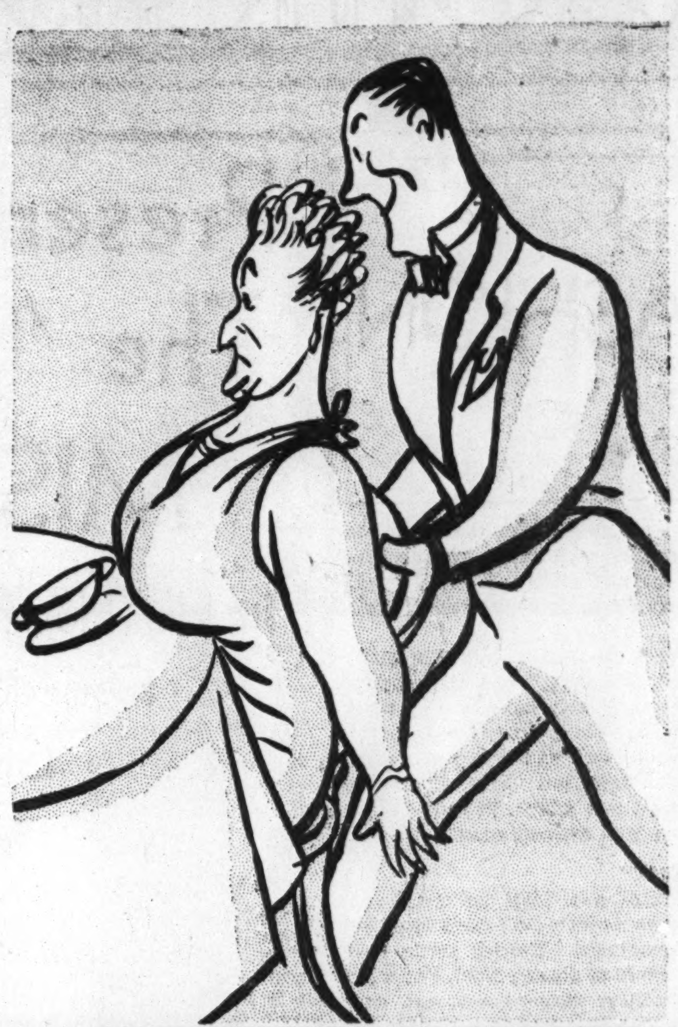
Try to go along easily, knowing how to do things, reading intelligently about what interests others, and having some definite plans of your own, without trying to force them upon others or being too shy to give voice to them when the occasion presents itself.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN on:

Gentlemen NOT Preferred

Present-Day Women Have Banished the Hand-Kisser, Hat-Lifter and His Ilk, and Wasn't He Always Something of a Donkey?



. . . THE MODERN WOMAN PREFERS NOT TO BE CUT IN TWAIN.

IT has been frequently remarked and written of late that the genus gentleman is rapidly becoming as extinct as the dodo or the parlor cuspidor. The remarkers and writers in point are inordinately tearful over the disappearance, deploring it with much nostalgic snuffling and whiffling and arguing that this is a sadder and duller and less romantic world for its going. What they do not, for all the possible correctness and justness of their sobs and sighs, seem to appreciate is that the gentleman's departure from the scene has not been a volitional one, but one that has been forced upon him. There is no place for him in the changed order of the world; there is no use for him. The gentleman, in short, is today regarded not only as an anachronism, but as a bore. Sometimes, indeed, he has come to be even a laughing-stock.

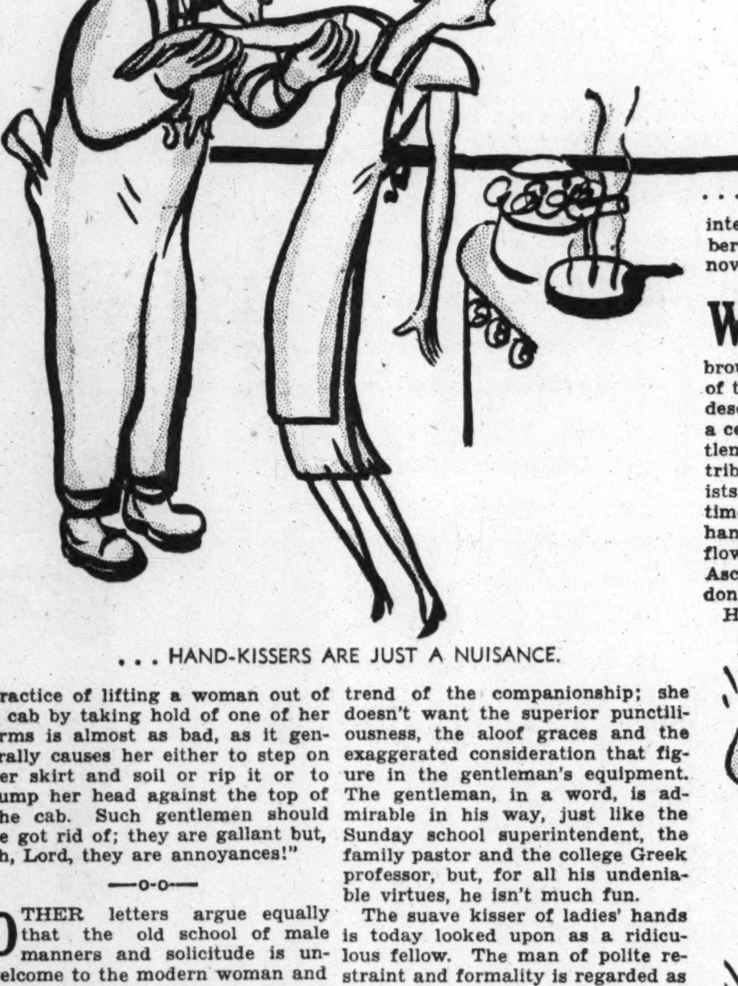
It is not the men who have brought about the banishment of the gentleman; it is the women. Women have indicated clearly in recent years that they have small regard or use for the species and, except for a few old ladies in lace collars and a few young female tenement offspring who have borrowed the novels of Laura Jean Libbey from the corner delicatessen dealer's wife, they are not sorry over its demise. The chief sneering opprobrium that may be visited on a man by a woman these days is that he is "a perfect gentleman." The term carries with it the implication of sissiness, the suggestion of priggishness, and the promise of a dismal evening.

But the women go even farther in their impatience with the last remaining specimens of the order. It is a rare week that the letter columns in our daily newspapers do not contain at least a half dozen feminine protests against the downright nuisance of having to come into contact with lingering members of the gentleman clan. One such recent letter runs as follows:

"I am glad that women have at last started a campaign against the Victorian custom that some men still persist in, that is, removing their hats in elevators. In taking them off, the men, who evidently consider themselves proper gentlemen, jam their elbows into the ribs of all the women around them and bruise the women. In the same way, if the elevator is crowded, it seems idiotic for men to let every woman in the car walk out first. This archaic custom blocks the exit and slows up egress considerably, besides making things awkward in general. Let's have less gentlemen and a darn sight more comfort!"

Another groan against the gentleman goes thus:

"No woman wants to complain about good manners in a man, but there is such a thing as carrying them too far. The old gentlemanly practice of pushing a woman's chair up close to the table, once she has seated herself in it, is especially irksome, as it not only disarrays her gown but often does sudden damage to her ankles and her knees. The other old gentlemanly practice of lifting a woman out of a cab by taking hold of one of her arms is almost as bad, as it generally causes her either to step on her skirt and soil or rip it or to bump her head against the top of the cab. Such gentlemen should be got rid of; they are gallant but, oh, Lord, they are annoyances!"



. . . HAND-KISSERS ARE JUST A NUISANCE.

—o-o—

OTHER letters argue equally that the old school of male manners and solicitude is unwelcome to the modern woman and that it tends only to make awkward and disconcerting what in its design it aims to make quite the opposite. The truth of the matter seems to be that the modern woman in the aggregate doesn't wish to be treated like a lady, with all the traditional prerogatives of a lady, but rather as man's counterpart, at least in most respects. As she more and more has risen to an equal plane with men, she less and less desires the condescension that is implicit in the elaborate manners of the gentleman.

She seeks in the male a genial companion, whatever may be the trend of the companionship; she doesn't want the superior punctiliousness, the aloof graces and the exaggerated consideration that figure in the gentleman's equipment. The gentleman, in a word, is admirable in his way, just like the Sunday school superintendent, the family pastor and the college Greek professor, but, for all his undeniable virtues, he isn't much fun.

The suave kisser of ladies' hands is today looked upon as a ridiculous fellow. The man of polite restraint and formality is regarded as being old before his time. The creature of unimpeachable manners is agreeable to the more elderly ladies, but the girls under 35 consider him a terrible bore. Grace has become a girl's name; ceremony has become a synonym for the funeral service; formality has become the designation of a dinner party for senile papas and mamas, an invitation to which breeds an instantaneous and overwhelming decision to plead a dire attack of hemmorrhagic smallpox as an excuse to stay away. And the word gentleman has come to be reserved exclusively for the vocabulary of waiters, interlocutors in minstrel shows, barber-shop manicurists and English novelists.

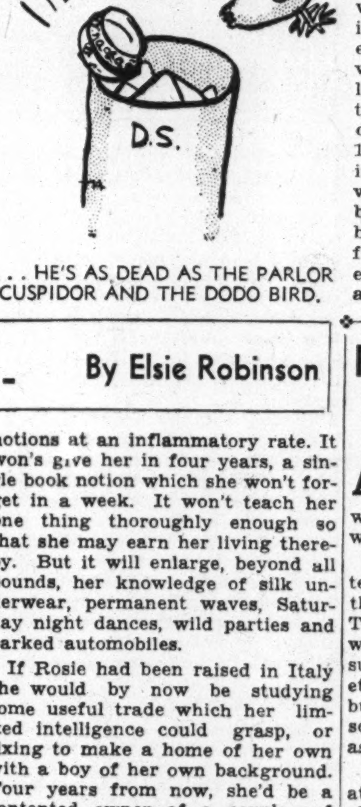
WHEN one muses on the so-called gentleman of the old school, one is reluctantly brought to the conclusion that much of the modern prejudice against his descendants is perhaps not without a certain degree of merit. The gentleman of the old school, despite the tributes paid to him by sentimentalists who cry into their beer every time any one mentions a four-in-hand driven by a magnifico with a flowing moustache and wearing an Ascot tie, was often something of a donkey.

His manners, seen through even the eyes of one of his impeccable equals and assigns, were often the manners of a Pinero stock company actor; his wardrobe was frequently idiosyncratic to the point of burlesque (consider, in example, Barry Wall's eight-inch-high collars, Ward McAllister's zebra trousers, Freddie Gebhard's Neapolitan ice cream waistcoats and James Hazen Hyde's sausage-like morning coats); his conduct was periodically akin to that of a circus clown, as in the case, for instance, of Harry Lehr and the notorious monkey dinner; and his snobbery was at times the acme of boorishness, as with the otherwise commendable and elegant Gen. Scott at the West Point reception to Edward VII, then Prince of Wales.



. . . HE'S AS DEAD AS THE PARLOR CUSPIDOR AND THE DODO BIRD.

The suspicion attaching to the practicing, professional gentleman in this altered world of ours is thus not of immediate birth; it has been for some time growing. Today's definition of a gentleman is other than it was in the yesterdays. No longer is it merely the man who can distinguish Marsh & Benson Madeira from one concocted in California, or sauce Bechamel from sauce Financiere, or a 1923 champagne from a 1924.

No longer is it merely the man who, like a Broadway night club singer, owns a wardrobe of 60 suits, or the man who, like some former Mexican barber now a great Hollywood leading man, breaks his waist in two bowing low at the sight of every woman he meets, or the man who, like a manufacturer of 15-cent lace-paper valentines, has at his tongue's end sweet nothings for ladies' flattery. The gentleman of 1936 is any man, humble or exalted in station, rich or poor in the world's goods, hovel or manor born, brash or courtly in manner, white, black or green, who alone is mindful of personal integrity, honor, tolerance, justice and the limits of his alcoholic capacity.

Bracelet Novelties For Sentimentalists

A SENTIMENTAL person prone to wearing her heart on her sleeve will be certain to want one of those clever new bracelet charms containing photographs of loved ones. They consist of crystal balls into which are embedded the tiny photographs. Two types are available, one equipped to hold a single picture and the other making room for two. The photos must make a trip to the manufacturer of the novelty in order to be placed correctly so don't expect your favorite shop to supply you in a hurry. As the chain is attached to each crystal ball, there's no reason why the trinket couldn't be worn as a pendant as well as a bracelet charm.

The vogue of charms has reached such heights that the shops now have entire display cases devoted to the fad. The list of subjects for charms goes through the animal kingdom and takes in such a varied scope that not even a baby buggy has been neglected. Metals, glass, wood, ivory and stone are used effectively in moulding the tiny good luck pieces.

Bracelet novelties of the season include some stunning narrow bands of glistening metal which are to be worn in bangle fashion. The trend is toward variation rather than in having the bracelets of matching metal. Bright and dull gold, bright and dull silver and a copper band may be worn fashionably together.

The twisted coil of silver or gold mesh which carries an evening 'kerchief is a fashion of the hour. The mesh is built so a large chiffon square can be wound around the coils and the ends left hanging.

FLAWS IN EDUCATION -:: -

By Elsie Robinson

ALL right—boo if you must—I still don't believe in our system of educating all youngsters regardless. Yes, I know the horrors of illiteracy. But haven't we, in our zeal to remove them, created other conditions far more perilous?

Mind you, I'm strong for giving the right kind of youngster all the education he can take. If a boy and girl have proved, by their elementary record, that they've a real hunger for information, I'd not only enable them to grasp all existing opportunities, but improve the opportunities themselves. Make colleges really free—really democratic. Subsidize our greatest assets—our brainy youngsters—as we do Going Businesses, so they won't be worn out by manual drudgery before they get around to their books.

But, while doing this for the youngsters who can use education, I'd also put a prompt stop on this business of ramming education down those who can't or won't. For it's my conclusion, after a lot of intensive snooping, that we're spoiling more lives than we're saving . . . making drifters, soreheads and bums out of young people who would otherwise be busy and contented citizens.

—o-o—

TAKE ROSIE, for example. Rosie's folks farm 12 miles from town. They're splendid people, born in the north of Italy—self-respecting, industrious, friendly—the sort of citizens America needs and should encourage. But at present, they're about as unhappy as possible, and all because you and I think Rosie Must Be Educated.

Rosie's a big, awkward, lovable kid—with about as much intelligence as a yearling steer. By some miracle she got through grammar school and is now ready for high school. Which is fine 'n' dandy for Rosie—but completely demoralizing for her family.

Rosie's father reads a little—her mother not at all. But if you rate them ignorant on that ground, you're crazy. In those vital crafts upon which our human life is based, they are Past Masters. There's no better hand with vines, garden truck or small stock than Rosie's father—no finer cook or housekeeper than Rosie's mother.

—o-o—

THEIR HOME, on a Sunday, is something to remember, with the long table set under the arbor on the hard, white earth that Rosie's mother waters and sweeps daily. . . . the good, fat flavor of the food rising from the heaped platters and mingling with the scent of ripening grapes and squash . . the light lying thick and golden as the muscat wine . . . and the babies and puppies tumbling all over the place. You'd ride many a mile before you came to an American home that holds half the solid comfort and neighborliness which theirs does. And all because their manner of life is perfectly adapted to their individual taste and ability.

But now comes Rosie—plus our American notions—and says that isn't enough. Already, for the past year, she has been complaining about everything in sight . . . ashamed to bring her friends home lest it seem "old fashioned" . . . demanding this and that useless, expensive trash.

High school will increase these notions at an inflammatory rate. It won's give her in four years, a single book notion which she won't forget in a week. It won't teach her one thing thoroughly enough so that she may earn her living thereby. But it will enlarge, beyond all bounds, her knowledge of silk underwear, permanent waves, Saturday night dances, wild parties and parked automobiles.

If Rosie had been raised in Italy she would by now be studying some useful trade which her limited intelligence could grasp, or fixing to make a home of her own with a boy of her own background. Four years from now, she'd be a contented owner of a couple of babies and an establishment.

Now, after graduation, Rosie will return home a thoroughly discontented, demoralized young woman, viciously infested with the virus of our modern restlessness and shoddy standards.

Which, I submit, outside of being a senseless waste of taxpayers' money, is doing dirt to Rosie. And spoiling things plenty for ourselves.

Bright Satins

Although black satin is being feted more than colors for autumn blouses and accessories, this doesn't mean that the glistening fabric isn't popular in high shades. Collars, vestees, cuffs and belts appear in vivid green and the new wine tones, supplying the dressy atmosphere for dark cloth frocks. Roman striped satin likewise is being employed rather extensively to trim dark dresses.

Peplum Theme In Fall Dresses

A COSTUME may look quite conservative from the front but it may adopt surprising accents which are discovered when the wearer's back is turned.

A definite trend toward back interest in costumes is a feature of the styles of the autumn season. This is developed in many different ways, the peplum theme being most successful in furthering the silhouette. Lengths of the peplums vary but all of them have a back flare, some sweeping downward as well as outward.

Waistlines are somewhat lower at the back than at the front, to place more emphasis upon the back of a garment. The basque blouse or jacket has returned to popularity and it brings with it many back gores which are cut so that they have the long-waisted sweep with fullness at the back of the hips.

Bustle themes also are important in presenting novel back treatments. They appear on some daytime costumes but are more apparent for evening wear. A pouf of the fabric of which a dress is made may be sufficient to give the appearance of a bustle but some designers do not mind adding a crinoline lining to get the desired effect.

Colored garments should never be boiled. They should be washed in soapy water, rinsed in warm water and dried indoors as bright sunshine destroys color. A little salt may be added to the steeping water as this tends to fix the colors ,while a spoonful of vinegar often helps to revive the color if this has faded in the wash.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

WE'VE always considered that fountain in the middle of Fountain avenue, just off Kingshighway, nothing more than a stumbling block. We hadn't anything against the fountain itself exactly, except that it stood in the park that makes a private place, with cockeyed traffic rules, out of what could be a first-rate thoroughfare. Now we discover that the thing has a history reaching back into lustier days, which entitles it to some respect.

Surmounted formerly by a female figure pouring water from a pitcher into a goblet, it stood on the trading floor of the Merchants' Exchange for many years, until the boys got to throwing each other in so often that it had to be moved.

It sounds fantastic, but it's true, because there's a hoary-haired employe at the Exchange who has witnessed more than one ducking in it. Late in the last century John A. Scudder presented the fountain to the Exchange without suspecting how irreverently members would use it. They considered it fun, too, to catch their fellows unawares where they perched on the rim of the pool, by tossing potatoes off the sample tables into the water right behind them. That was calculated to get any lazy trader on his feet in a hurry.

One summer a couple of the traders tried using the pool as an aquarium for live fish they brought home from the North woods. But someone went angling in the pool after hours and caught every last one of them.

Scudder must have been better pleased at the use the Veiled Prophet made of his fountain at the time of the ball in the trading hall. It was always the pivot of the decorative scheme, one year being converted into a mammoth golden bird cage with artificial canaries suspended in it.

—o-o—

OLDER St. Louis residents probably know that the Veiled Prophet Ball took place at the Merchants' Exchange until 1909, when it moved west with the city to the Coliseum. But did you know that for two years His Mysterious Majesty held court in the music hall at the old Exposition Building, wrecked later to make way for the Public Library?

Most old timers, whose memory has shortened as the years lengthen, cannot recall that brief interlude of 1889, and 1890, and no one seems to know just why the Veiled Potentate picked that spot to greet his people, except that it was a little more accessible than the Exchange on Third and Pine, and accommodations within were better.

The parquet seats in the music hall were covered with temporary flooring for the occasion and the royal throne occupied the stage. Decorations were not nearly so elaborate as they are now, and consisted chiefly of that perennial, smilax, of potted palms, festoons of the Prophet's colors and, marvel of marvels, electric lights.

At the first coming to the Exposition Hall, Gov. Francis, himself, flanked by guards in new uniforms, met the masked monarch at the entrance and escorted him to the throne room. At the second coming, the canvas canopy from curb to entrance collapsed on the crowd.

That was back in the days before there was a Veiled Prophet Queen but His Mysterious Majesty singled out a belle to be his partner for the Imperial Quadrille. In 1889 it was Miss Florence Lucas, and the year following, Miss Kate Hill was honored, with the King's first dance.

—o-o—

IF YOU'RE ever tempted to be blase and slightly cynical about the Veiled Prophet's hold over his beloved city, you should have been in Jefferson Memorial on a recent Saturday morning. You should have watched the eyes of two ragged little boys when they got their first look at this year's souvenirs in the Missouri Historical Society collection. They had read the notice in the evening paper and were there when the doors opened next morning.

—o-o—

THERE'S ONE true story about last year's ball that we've been chuckling over for a twelvemonth. In the topmost row of the gallery, on the very edge of her chair, sat a little lady, inconspicuously dressed and unobtrusive in her conduct, except possibly that she was more interested in the parade of matrons than her neighbors. She kept borrowed binoculars trained on the portals and as one matron emerged into the ballroom, she gave a tiny "yip" and fainted dead away.

They carried her up to a landing where, with a drink of water and some fanning, she quickly revived, all apologies for causing any disturbance. Said she, "You see, I am a dressmaker. And I've been working six weeks on that gown. And heaven help me if the lady hasn't it on backside-to."

Useful and Gay Equipment For Child's Nursery

Psychologists Have Joined Decorators in Creating Modern Furnishings.

IF YOU are shopping for equipment and accessories for the nursery or for a room for children still of tender years, you will be delighted at the things you will discover. Psychologists now have joined with decorators and designers in creating furnishings that are as charming and gay as they are sensible and useful.

If you lean to the modern, your taste and ideas can be gratified. And if you favor the more orthodox design and decor, you will find the shops filed with furniture and adjuncts that will please you.

So far as the modern is concerned, the emphasis is more on color than on abstractions and such. Functional furniture that is built-in is a feature of some new and most attractive nurseries developed along modern lines. We saw such a room with furniture of silver pine, which is pine stained a delicate silvery-gray, then beautifully waxed.

—o-o—

PEASANT decorations are liked for many nurseries because of the stimulus of the happy color schemes. Then there are little chairs done in bright blue with the backs showing cut-out designs of bunnies or little boys or little girls. A set that successfully combines the old with the modern is done in the silver-pine with nursery picture decorations and chromium trim. It may sound rather bewildering, but we can assure you that the set is charming.

Unit chests, shelves and closets are also to be had, and these are extremely useful. Although modern they will fit beautifully into any nursery or child's room. With these units no nurse of youngster can complain of lack of space in which to stow clothing, toys and other belongings.

Bedspreads and draperies, appliqued and woven with all sorts of designs ranging from nursery characters to comic strip protagonists, Micky Mouse, Pluto, Donald Duck and all the rest of the redoubtable group, are guaranteed to bring joy to juvenile hearts. Then there are animal book-ends, dishes with the aforementioned juvenile heroes, linoleum with nursery rhymes, alphabet, numbers and games.

—o-o—

WALL PLAQUES in felt, string, paper, cork, wood and metal, all made into figures, are guaranteed to beautify the nursery and delight the youthful occupants. The lamps are in a class by themselves, for they offer all sorts of amusing ideas for decoration. One lamp has a Noah's ark base, another is patterned on merry-go-round lines. And both have wood and composition figures that can be removed at will.

Then there are amusing side wall fixtures, brightly painted little wooden peasant figures with arms extended to hold lamps. Little doll lamps and soldier lamps are also to be had. All the lamps are brightly painted and the shades are well chosen.

Tunic Dresses

If the tunic craze has you in such a state that you are determined to appear in tunics from early until late, there are grand types in knitted sportswear as well as in formal evening costumes. The prize in knitted things goes to a rust-colored tunic presenting a popcorn stitch that gives a bubble effect in contrast to the plain stitch of the skirt. The blouse fastens high at the draped neckline, has long sleeves and a wide suede belt.

A stunning evening tunic dress typical of the trend combines faille taffeta with velvet. It is all black but there's nothing to keep you from buying skirt and blouse separately and making your own costume. This elegant version has a low decolletage and fullness gathered into a big pouf at the back.

International Trend in Hats

WHO—or what—started this internationalism in hats? We expected the Spanish revolution to give us something out of Spain, which it did in the way of Spanish toques and little hats of toreador cap inspiration. We knew that France would give us something—she always does—and so we have the Napoleonic influence, and hats inspired by the French guards of the Revolution.

We have the Greek helmet and the draped Persian toque, and the Turkish fez all contributing to our headgear—to say nothing of the Scotch bonnet inspired, they tell us, by a movie film.

And now a Parisian designer drags us in with an American Redskin treatment of quills. However, if our foreign entanglements are only along the style front, we'll survive!

GADGETS For COLLEGE GIRLS

By PRUNELLA WOOD

IF you'd believe the college shop experts in the department stores—and you might as well, they are smart as whips! —going to school with the wrong accessories though the proper clothes would be just about as embarrassing as dreaming you were in church clad in silk pajamas and a top hat.

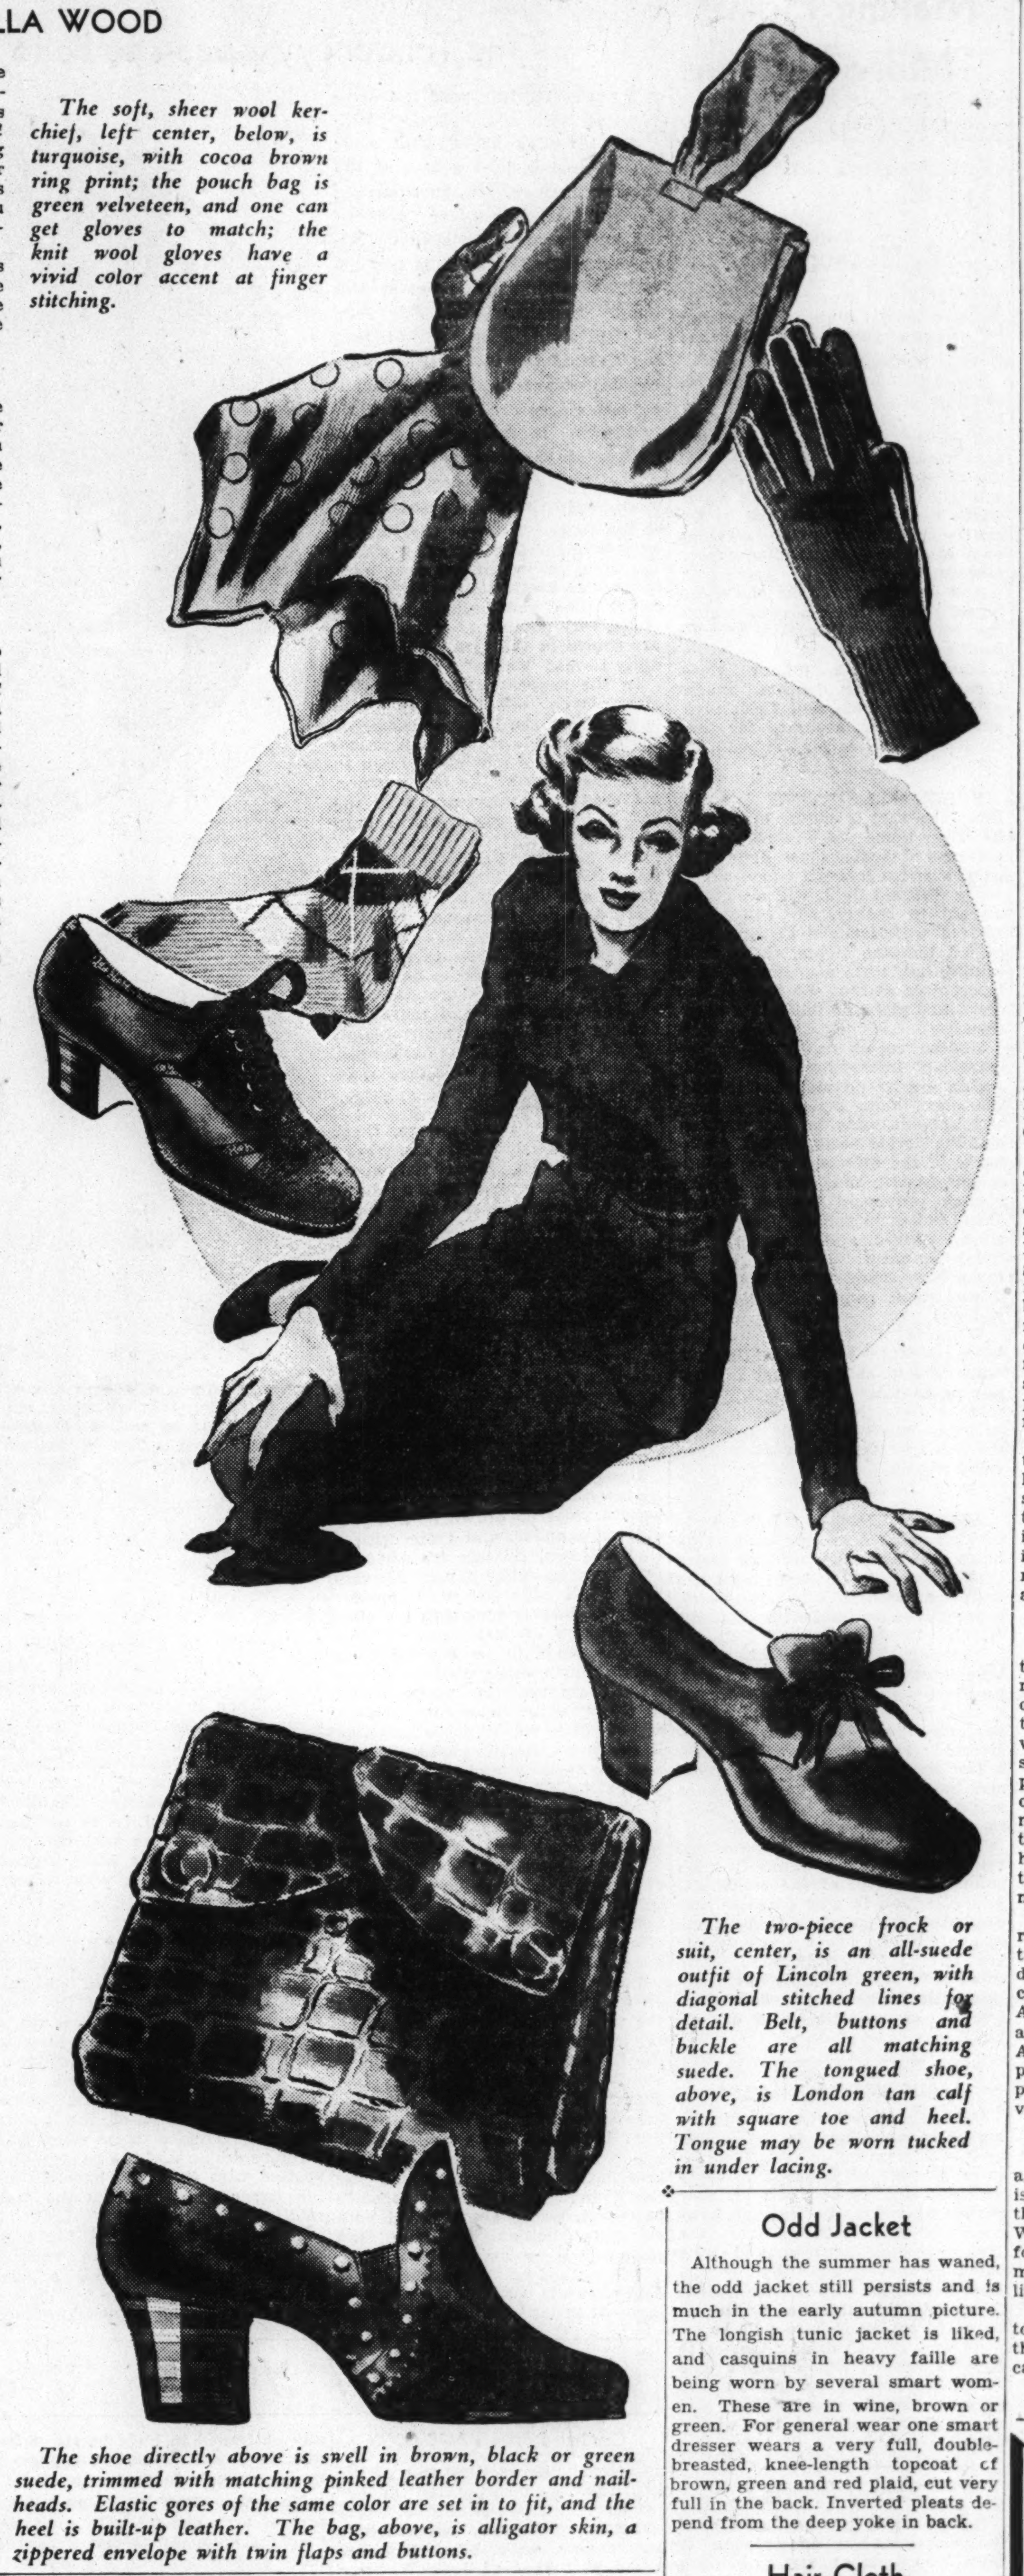
Perish the thought that this department should underrate such a contretemps!—so here goes for a few words on the "right you are" accessories.

—o-o—

THE spectator sports theme seems to be the safest for daily knocking about, which makes things easy. For there are loads of colors (some are bound to become) and these colors are so harmoniously chosen, that you can blend and accent, match and magpie, all that you want to without going far wrong.

—o-o—

IT'S a brain-saving stunt to pick out two main colors and maybe add just one dash of strong contrast to get up a smart symphony. Green and brown; wine and dusty or purple blue; brown and beige are some good basic alliances. For your flash, you might add halfhose, like the giddy Scotch wool plaid models sketched left center, or gray shoes like those beneath the socks—bucko with many perforations and brass eyelets. Your scarf can be in vivid contrast, or the quill on your casual hat, or the gloves and bag that you choose from the pile.



The soft, sheer wool kerchief, left center, below, is turquoise, with cocoa brown ring print; the pouch bag is green velveteen, and one can get gloves to match; the knit wool gloves have a vivid color accent at finger stitching.

The two-piece frock or suit, center, is an all-suede outfit of Lincoln green, with diagonal stitched lines for detail. Belt, buttons and buckle are all matching suede. The tongued shoe, above, is London tan calf with square toe and heel. Tongue may be worn tucked in under lacing.

The shoe directly above is swell in brown, black or green suede, trimmed with matching pinked leather border and nailheads. Elastic gores of the same color are set in to fit, and the heel is built-up leather. The bag, above, is alligator skin, a zippered envelope with twin flaps and buttons.

STYLE PARADE ON THE CAMPUS

fords also were black as was Miss Volmar's knockabout felt hat.

—o-o—

THE VOGUE of sweaters and skirts was shown more extensively on Thursday and Friday when students were ready for classroom work. Miss Evelyn Bissell, who was regarded as one of the best dressed girls on the campus last year and wore the college "uniform" almost exclusively has started this school year with a gray flecked wool sports skirt and a dark wine shade of Brooks sweater. Ankle socks match the tone of the sweater as does her felt hat. White saddle oxfords are worn with this costume, as are a double or triple strand of pearls and a charm bracelet. A gray three-quarter length polo coat is a smart addition to the costume on cool days.

That culottes, when well styled, will be worn again by some students, was evidenced with the selection of Miss Betsy Howell of brown wool culottes worn with a soft shade of pink slip-on sweater. British tan calfskin oxfords were good looking with this color combination, and of course, Miss Howell has not forgotten those essentials —pearls and good luck bracelets.

MISS LOUISE KRAUS also prefers sweaters and skirts but has appeared in a flattering red earth colored cashmere suit that varies the ensemble because of the knitted skirt which matches the sweater-like blouse. A yoke-effect adds variety to the blouse as do patch pockets. Gold beads, flap-tongued brown oxfords and a brown felt hat add to the attractiveness of this costume.

Miss Katherine ("Kay") Hampton likewise has decided to vary the sweater-and-wool skirt theme with an all-knitted costume occasionally. Her choice is dark green in color and follows the two-piece vogue with peplum blouse trimmed with brown patent leather. The belt is of this leather and there is a matching bow to finish the narrow standing collar. A three-quarter length knitted coat made along swagger lines completes a flattering ensemble.

—o-o—

MISS MARY STEVENS has a collection of sweaters and skirts in various interesting color combinations for campus wear and has reserved for special college occasions a one-piece black frock in which she appeared at several "rush" parties. It is of soft black woolen lightened with beige wool introduced to form a surplice front of the blouse. Sleeves are long and padded at the shoulders to add width to the silhouette. The skirt has a pleat at the center front which is placed to give a swinging line to the hem. A black felt hat and black gabardine and patent pumps complete this off-campus costume.

Beige, brown and green is a favorite color scheme of Miss Jeanne Brigham, another new upperclass student at Washington University. She illustrates the becomingness of this alliance with a brown tailored suit with which she has been wearing a beige angora sweater. The neckline is brightened by a green Ascot scarf while a felt hat of the same dark tone of green adds to the attractiveness of the ensemble. Brown suede sports shoes and other brown accessories are suitably chosen.

Challis Fabric in Autumn Frocks

ASK the saleswoman in your favorite shop which is the most popular fabric for autumn tailored frocks and she'll tell you it is challis.

This light weight wool material which fell from fashion grace so long ago that most of today's fashion followers can't remember, has put on a comeback that has the whole style world talking. Some designers used it rather discreetly as a dress trimming first, and also brought it out for scarfs, but with these exceptions it went along for years being classed as suitable primarily for children's dresses.

Look at it today—appearing in the company of silk velvet for dinner frocks as well as supplying at least half of the early fall street dresses. The wool version continues to be featured but the makers of synthetics have their own challis fabric which is not without its merits and popularity.

The designs which are small and scattered are preferred for dresses and the color combinations often are quite tsriking. One dress available in several color combinations is most effective when yellow ski figures are dotted over a dark green surface. Belt and buttons of natural calfskin are attractive. Another combination of scarlet and brown offers equal suggestions for ensembling bright accessories.

In another collection of dresses, the shirtwaist mode is exemplified in challis. Here are the familiar studs in place of buttons to fasten the front of a blouse. Solid colors and small scattered designs of bright tone on dark background vary the interest.

Odd Jacket

Although the summer has waned, the odd jacket still persists and is much in the early autumn picture. The longish tunic jacket is liked, and casquins in heavy faille are being worn by several smart women. These are in wine, brown or green. For general wear one smart dresser wears a very full, double-breasted, knee-length topcoat of brown, green and red plaid, cut very full in the back. Inverted pleats depend from the deep yoke in back.

Hair Cloth

Hair cloth makes a flashy little peplum suit which is an ideal town costume. The skirt is slender in spite of its goring because too much fullness at the hemline would spoil the effect of the rippling peplum. Contrary to the rule of most jackets which have the fullness at the back this one has the ripple circling the hipline. The upper part of the blouse fits as snugly as a basque and has a black Persian lamb collar. A satin blouse that ties at the neckline adds a note of glamor.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.

I'VE often wondered why so little attention is paid to the wives of professional ballplayers —but now a smart reporter has asked the helpmates of our Giants about the way their athletes were helped into their late-summer winning streak. Six of them live in the same apartment building, near the Polo Grounds beneath historic Cougan's Bluff. Jewell Moore said she fed her husband succulent steaks, garnished with mushrooms and pep talks, but it remained for Mrs. Mel Ott to say what a reporter loves to hear. She said that every morning she'd send their little daughter in to wake Mel and say "A home run for me today, daddy?"

"Oh, dear me! Oh, gracious sakes! It's a wonder the poor child didn't catch a clout or too, waking Daddy to lisp that!

ALL OF A SUDDEN Manhattan has become astonishingly traffic-conscious and the citizens are actually looking before they leap across the avenue against the red light. We are being constantly battered with "drive safely" campaigns, and both motorists and pedestrians are actually being careful in one of the world's most careless cities.

This consciousness is being pushed along by our new traffic rules, which provide all sorts of modest speeds for cars—including eight miles an hour turning a corner, instead of 88, which is the taxi-driver's par for the course. Each violation draws a stamp on the license, and when one achieves four, he is probably hanged publicly in Central Park.

I am in grave jeopardy. All my driving is done in the heart of the Island, where the traffic is maddest and parking is almost impossible. As a result, I am told that I drive, think and even use language like a taxi-driver. All I need is a badge and a three-day beard. When I ride in a taxi I really do all the driving. The hacker merely holds the wheel, like a robot, and mutters. Under the new stringency, it is probable that these pieces will ultimately be written from jail.

Visitors always complain bitterly that New Yorkers are a sour-faced lot, and it is a just charge. But the sheer nerve strain of trotting about the heart of town year after year is truly incredible, and turns us into chronic frowners and automatic curb-leapers. Very few of us are really sore.

REPORTS FROM London state that our Miriam Hopkins is slimmer than ever, if possible. She's one of the many who have turned themselves over to Dr. Jean Square, who has thought up a new reducing stunt from Japanese sources. Three people work on the customer at once, the idea being to exercise the muscles against their natural motion. Each treatment takes a half hour. Quite a beating one takes, too, I hear, but it works, if you are not torn apart. . . .

Speaking of our Japanese brethren, Able Seamen Ideta and Miszutani did sentry-go on Riverside drive while the two Nipponese cruisers lay in the Hudson recently. Asked by the Inquiring Reporter, as a novelty, what they thought of American girls, Seaman Ideta replied, through an honorable interpreter, "As girls, very pretty and very fine. As wives—too fresh." . . .

I WAS REMINDED all over again the other afternoon that this is a great town for ghosts—one of the greatest in the world, probably. Wherever you ramble here, you are forever rushing into spooks, and many of them are very spry and lively indeed.

This rumination on ghostly visitors was brought about by the fact that I bumped (or "bunked," as local stenos say) right smack dab

The House You Live In

LET ME SUGGEST

by

Josephine Walter

IF birds could go house hunting as humans do, they'd be very particular about the kind of cage they'd settle down in this season. For birds, both animate and inanimate, have become an important note in decoration this season and can afford to be choosy about the surroundings they keep.

This season, to be smart, your cardroom or sunroom should blossom into an aviary as well. But this doesn't mean that you can simply scatter a few bird cages around, let the inmates warble and let it go at that. The housing of your fine feathered friends must be given the same careful thought as the decorations of the room in which they are to be placed.

The newest bird cages are fashioned of the same materials as other decorative accessories. Thus, some of the most attractive cages this season are formed of the painted wire and iron that has been used so effectively for plant stands. In fact, combinations of cages and plant stands in this material are not only decoratively interesting but give the birds an illusion of living in a perennial garden.

Bamboo, reed and wicker are all used for cages in either natural tones or in colors to match the furniture used in a garden room. And most effective, especially in a modern room, would be one of the new cages constructed of chromium and clear glass with bars of crystal.

If you prefer your birds to be of the silent type that can't talk back there are any number of decorative accessories stressing the bird motif. Bird pictures with backgrounds of mirror or some vivid modern color and frames of bamboo or white wire can do much for an undistinguished interior while entire walls papered with a bird design can give the drabest room a gay, gardeny feeling. In addition, there are all sorts of perky pottery and china birds to dwell on hanging shelves or among the books in a bookcase.

—o-o—

And, while we're on the subject of the feathered species, one of the loveliest private greenhouses in St. Louis boasts not only a fine assortment of plants and flowers, but a rare collection of love birds, brought from all over the world. These birds, in the most glorious tones of blue, yellow and chartreuse have their cages built in right among the flowers and a more charming spot is hard to imagine.

● HOUSEHOLD HINT No. 982—One more item to make life easier for the hardworking housewife trying to get her closets in shape for the winter season. Some of the new shelf edgings have a backing of adhesive so that they may be pasted right to the shelf without any pinning or tacking. They come in many attractive designs and in a complete range of colors to match any scheme.

—o-o—

Bedside table lamps are almost always a problem, for if they are large enough to give a good reading light they usually take up almost all the room on the average, small-sized table. A lamp I saw the other day solved this problem adroitly and attractively as well. The base of the lamp was elongated on one side and set into it was a crystal ash tray, removable for cleaning. Thus, with lamp and ash tray compactly joined in one piece, the smallest sized table would prove adequate.

THIS WEEK'S Decorating Term: Chinoiseries — Chinese motifs in decoration. Particularly good at the moment because of the popularity of eighteenth century English style which frequently employed Chinese motifs in decoration.

—o-o—

● IN THE FIRST fine fever of fall decorating—and there's real alliteration for you, if I do say so and shouldn't — give a passing thought to the cook and her domain. It may quite literally prove to be bread cast upon the water. Putting a little flower box across the sill of the window, that is almost invariably to be found above the sink in modern kitchens, will not only keep her in a more cheerful mood but may ultimately redound to your own gastronomic delight. The box, made of the ever-appealing white wire, or of plain wood painted some bright tone to be found in the room, may be planted with mint, chives and parsley or other rarer herbs. And, so that she will not suspect your motives, you might sprinkle a few bright red geraniums in among the plants.

QUESTION: I have a golden oak dining room set of the pedestal table variety which is 23 years old (you know the type that you are always reading jokes about). I cannot afford to buy a new set so what can I do about it? I do not think I would like it painted white.

MRS. A. L. M.

Answer: Quite frankly I do not think there is a great deal you can do with a set of this type for no matter whether you paint it or not you cannot change the lines of the furniture. It would be possible to give it the new whitewashed treatment which is rubbed down and then waxed but I really do not believe it would be very suited to this type of furniture. Rather than spend any money on it at all, wouldn't it be possible for you to acquire a new set gradually. First the chairs, then the table and so on? I'm sorry not to be more helpful about this but I wouldn't want you to put any work on the furniture and then find, as you undoubtedly would, that you still don't like it.

Novelties For Making Home More Pleasant

Many New Ideas Are Being Incorporated in Modern Houses.

By Eleanor Ross

SHOPS and showrooms are replete with delightful ideas and novelties designed to make the home a pleasant place.

Radios find themselves incorporated in bookcases, writing desks, bars and mantels with happy results. The electric clock contrivance which can be set to start off the radio at a designated station is a bright idea. Instead of an alarm clock, we now can awaken to the crisp command of the morning gym class or to any other chosen program.

And at night, too, the clock can be set so that after a certain time the radio will automatically turn itself off.

Small radios in mirror glass, tinted in various delicate shades with electric blue and flesh pink, prime favorites, are nice for odd corners as well as for the boudoir.

—o-o—

BUILT-IN LIGHTING is something else that is adding brightness to the home. A mantel with placques of frosted glass, divided by narrow strips through which shines softly diffused light, will always be an aid to beauty, as will book shelves with troughs housing concealed lumiline lights. Coves containing lights are also incorporated in cornices so that the light shines down and picks up handsome draperies.

Modern rooms continue to be extremely interesting, but period rooms are by no means neglected. The shops show styles, furnishings and appointments for the modern and the period room, with the majority of the offerings being in excellent taste. The trend to the French provincial is very noticeable. Suites in solid walnut, beautifully carved and polished with finish in natural or blond walnut tones, have found many purchasers. These pieces range from the very elaborate to the chastely simple.

Wood is of increasing importance. Modern treatments include much wall paneling, either in walnut or in very light wood. Very often a room has two walls done in paper while the walls that hold the windows and the fireplace have wood paneling.

—o-o—

AND TALKING of fireplaces reminds us that the mantel and frame made of elaborately worked strips of bamboo has appeared in more than one modern interior. Photo murals are also used with excellent effect.

Venetian blinds seem to be a fixture now. Usually the tapes pick up the dominant tone of the room, a most pleasing note. The blinds are offered at prices that are considerably lower than was the case a few seasons back. Very inexpensive but very attractive are shades made of tiny strips of wood laced together like porch sun shades.

This type, along with the aforesaid Venetian blind, seems to have complete control of the shade situation, which is why curtains and draperies are much simpler this season. Fancy swags and valances are but infrequently seen. The trend is to have a simply hung curtain with the heading tucked into a cornice of painted wood or attractive mirror glass.

Transplanting Roses

Old established roses can be moved to new places in the garden in late September or early October in a bare-rooted condition. Water well and protect over winter. New garden roses from the nursery, however, are just getting over the manufacturing process, and the wood needs every sunshiny day possible to mature. Do not transplant them until the middle of November or early spring. There will be a little root growth during the warm days of winter, which makes the November moving better than the spring. Mound soil over them and mulch heavily during the winter after transplanting.

Peony Plants

September is the best month of the year to set out peony plants. It takes two years at least to achieve the first bloom, but fall planting will knock six months off of this schedule. The root growth gotten this fall will go far toward developing large and well-rounded plants next year that will certainly blossom the following spring. Plant 18 inches to two feet apart to give them plenty of room for growth.

DELICATE TONES in New WALLPAPERS

The Tendency Appears to Be to "Gray" the Colors for a Sophisticated, Elegant Effect.

IF you're starting your fall decorating with a completely bewildered feeling about what color scheme to use, take a look at the new wallpapers. Unquestionably, you will be inspired, for most of the new papers have such charming color effects that it is possible to develop an entire room around them.

Delicate, subtle tones seem to lead the field at the moment, although the deep tones that were so popular last season are still being widely shown. In both the light and dark colors there seems to be a tendency to gray the tones to give a more sophisticated, elegant effect to the room. Thus, in the former, gray is apparently replacing white; the clear yellows of last year have taken on a much deeper, more mustardly tone and both blue and pinks, very popular at the moment, are shown in that grayed effect so aptly termed "dusty."

In the deeper colors, too, the clear, bright effects have been toned down, the browns being of the cocoa shade rather than chocolate; there is a new olive green to take the place of the bright emerald used last season and both the red and plum colors have been dulled in value.

This last-named color—plum—and its derivatives of violet, lilac and purple are back in the decorating picture again after many years of absence. This may be due to the fact that there seems to be a revival of Victorian modes or it may be that these colors are decidedly of the dressy type and there is a definite swing toward more elegant effects. However, these tones must be handled with extreme care to be smart.

—o-o—

AS to color combinations, there are two decided trends. Very new and effective are the papers in two colors only, such as dusty pink and gray, cocoa and yellow, and turquoise and peach; or papers in two tones of one color such as pink and magenta, beige on brown, or violet and plum. The other type of papers go in for a riot of colors but are beautifully blended in tone. Thus, one paper with a light gray background has the design worked out in a deeper gray, white, chartreuse and yellow while another with a soft blue ground color is patterned in tones of pink, peach, white, and yellow.

Designs, too, fall into two categories—those with large, widely-spaced patterns drawn in a highly stylized manner, and those with a finely drawn, delicate tracery effect over the entire paper. Flowers are by all odds the most popular patterns, largely replacing the classic designs of last year. Toile designs seem to be coming back but in much more distinct effects than those used in former years. There are some strictly modern designs which would prove effective if used with the correct furnishings and accessories and there is a sprinkling of stripes and plaids. Birds are a new note in decoration and there are several new papers which utilize this motif attractively.

There are two entirely new types of papers which should prove an inspiration to those with expensive tastes and limited budgets. One effectively reproduces the appearance of the old tea-box papers which were laboriously and expensively applied in small squares to the wall. These papers, naturally, are in either silver or gold and have the indistinct, self-toned designs which distinguished the old tea-box papers. The other type are the papers which simulate wood panelling, but done by a new process which makes them amazingly true in effect. They are produced by the photo-mural process, recently perfected, where actual wood panelling is photographed and the photos then projected on paper.

The method of using some of the new papers is very interesting, also. Many of the striped papers are used horizontally in a room, either to give a modern effect to the room, or to make a high ceiling appear lower. Then, in the very modern designs, a patterned paper is used on two walls with the other two walls papered in a solid color which matches one tone of the figured paper. A very effective treatment of this type would be to use one of the new papers with a huge brown diamond on a white ground on two walls and a plain brown paper on the other.

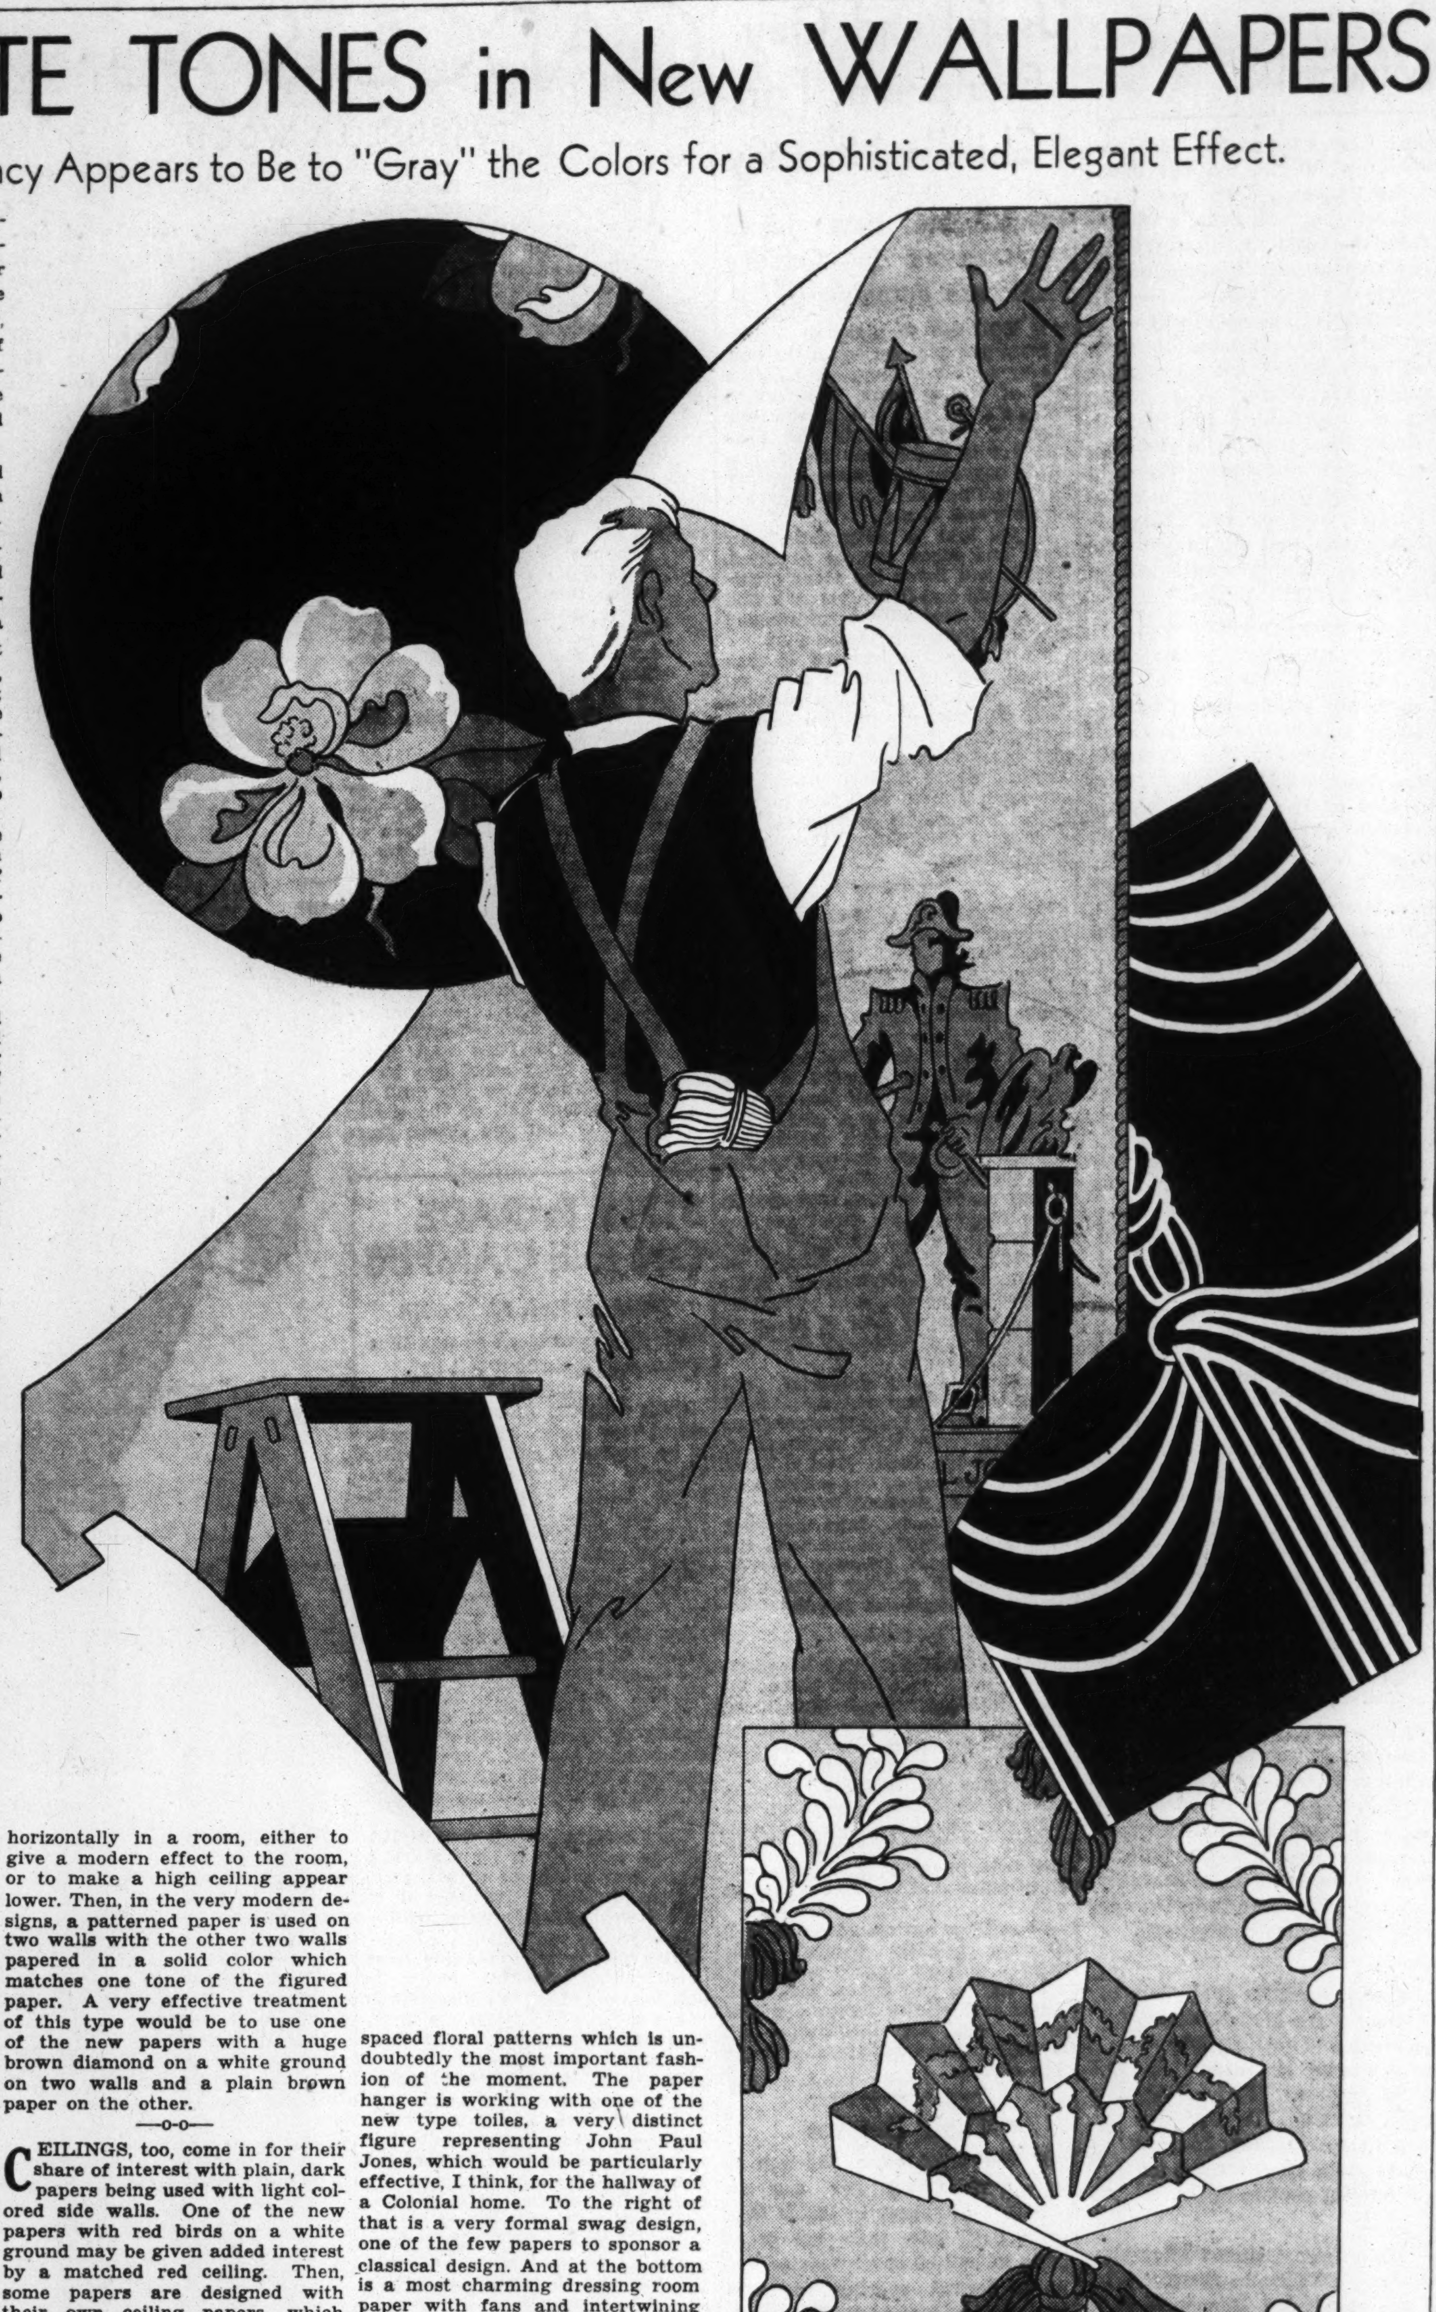
CEILINGS, too, come in for their share of interest with plain, dark papers being used with light colored side walls. One of the new papers with red birds on a white ground may be given added interest by a matched red ceiling. Then, some papers are designed with their own ceiling papers, which usually repeat one of the motifs featured. Thus, a paper which has a figure design and the background spotted with stars will have a ceiling paper which repeats the star motif.

Illustrated are four of the new papers which show the various trends mentioned in this article. In the left-hand corner is shown one of the highly stylized, widely spaced floral patterns which is undoubtedly the most important fashion of the moment. The paper hanger is working with one of the new type toiles, a very distinct figure representing John Paul Jones, which would be particularly effective, I think, for the hallway of a Colonial home. To the right of that is a very formal swag design, one of the few papers to sponsor a classical design. And at the bottom is a most charming dressing room paper with fans and intertwining ribbon effects. All of these papers come in a wide range of color effects.



The grand thing, aside from color and design, in these new papers, is the fact that there seems to be an appropriate paper for every type of room. There are some papers that you could not picture being used any place other than a breakfast room and some that fairly cry aloud to decorate a country house living room. Today, there is no excuse for not having a paper that not only suits your color scheme but the mood and tempo of your room as well.

as a result her exciting way of life has become incorporated in her proper self. There is nothing bogus about it. Romantic paragraphers last season were bracketing her name with that of Jock Whitney, but at the moment there have been no public evidences of such an attachment.

A MAJOR MANHATTAN mystery has always been how Sherman Billingsley contrives to make money out of the Stork Club. To be sure, the place is usually three deep in customers, and it was reported a week or two since that the hatcheck concession alone was let for $25,000 for the next year. But he gives away so many drinks on the house (remember when they were known as "house wolves"?) that every one wonders how he comes out ahead.

Billingsley has always prided himself on his kitchen and the extra dash of swank he incorporates into the service of various dishes. The olives and celery arrive geometrically patterned in huge bowls of ice and the frozen desserts are packed in ice enough to skate on.

Now the Stork has made some sort of arrangement with a flying-machine company to run a special daily plane filled with Florida foodstuffs, so that they may be served for dinner the same day they leave the Southland. Fresh green turtle, red snapper, guavas and stone crabs are on the list and more exotic elegances are to come. The stone crabs are the featured article, being specially sought out by one of Billingsley's agents known along the River as Old Captain Mack, and are cooked, chilled and expressed northward in feverish daily haste.

SPIES BRING BACK reports that the oldtime Viennese Salon, in all its glory of music, whipped cream and Biedermeier aristocracy, was revived in Salzburg this summer, when eminent figures from the government, music world and Viennese nobility met in a little peasant town. Certainly the equivalent of the oldtime salons was achieved at Mme. Lotte Lehmann's Sunday afternoon Jause.

On one day alone there were Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg (who had a geranium-balconied villa right next door to Mme. Lehmann's); Maestro Arturo Toscanini, his daughter, Mme. Wanda Horowitz (wife of the pianist); Minister of Education Hans Pernter, our own Edward Johnson, Marcia Davenport, Maud Weyerhauser of St. Paul, and more musicians than you could shake a baton at—all guzzling an afternoon Jause. The fashion for afternoon coffee with whipped cream, flanked by a succulent kugelhupf, rivals the tea and the cocktail habit here.

A NEW HIGH in conservatism seems to have been reached by the directors of the Ritz Carlton, who don't recognize the Old Fashioned as a firmly established cocktail. Some promotion copy was recently submitted to the directors by their advertising experts in which mention was made of some cocktails, and a solemn conclave of Ritz overlords decreed that, for them, Old Fashioneds must be printed in quotes. A very parvenu cocktail!

Greenery

Hanging wire baskets of greenery are still seen here and there, and seem perfect in back yard summer houses. The baskets can be purchased at hardware stores or seed stores, and are usually filled with peatmoss in which geraniums, myrtle and what you will are planted. If you have had to thin your rock garden of sedum—particularly the sarmentosum variety—use sods of this as a base. You will find it will hold water like peatmoss and will be a greener and more beautiful contrast for the flowers planted in it.

A paste made of olive oil and salt will remove the marks on a dining-room table caused by hot plates. And olive oil is splendid for keeping patent leather shoes from cracking.

From the Ground Up

by

Amy Lu Schmitz

ONE of the most delightful experiences is to have worked with nature and successfully brought about the production of new plants. Have you wondered why busy men and women will spent every spare moment they have in a garden? Try it yourself and you will discover that it is a fascinating game full of risks and high rewards.

Take the simple matter of the sansevieria (mother-in-laws tongues) which is so effective when the stalks are the right height and have that nice outward curve from the center. It is a thrifty plant that will grow out of bounds in six months and need replacing. Cut the tips off the tall stalks, stand them upright in moist sand, and in a few weeks there will be a new plant with strong shoots to take the place of the old lanky one. When plants root quickly and renew themselves so generously why not let them do this, and have the fun of watching the fascinating process?

Most of us have planted seeds and gotten results, but so often our garden plants are hybrids whose seed will not come true, and in order to reproduce the original plants we must use other methods. These other methods have the added advantage of supplying a short cut to obtain flowering plants the next season.

—o-o—

ONE OF THESE methods is division. So often old clumps of perennials no longer bloom in the center because the roots are crowded, and as practically all plants can be increased by division, this will be the surest way to cure the trouble. The roots can either be gently pulled apart and separated, or if necessary, can be cut with a sharp-edged knife or spade to divide them.

Then replant the divisions in good soil, shade and water well. All the spring and summer blooming plants can be divided from August until the ground freezes in fall.

The late blooming plants such as helenium, chrysanthemums, or boltonia should be left until spring for division. Do not cut the parent plant into too many small pieces and expect flowers from all of them the following year. Two, three or four parts will be satisfactory, or even six if the plant is quite large.

—o-o—

ANOTHER METHOD is by cuttings. If there is one plant of an unusual color in the garden that you would like to reproduce without disturbing it, the stem or leaf cutting system is the one to use. There are many types of cuttings such as soft wood, hard wood, root cuttings, but the most common form is the soft wood cutting or "slip" of our grandmother's day. They are easy to make, quick to root and provide a rapid method of creating plants that will come true to variety and bloom the following year.

A few of the perennials that can be increased by slips are hollyhocks, pinks, iberis, heuchera, phlox, delphinium, clematis, dahlias, cerastiums. Cut off a four-inch stalk or stalk tip, preferably without flower buds, strip off all except the top leaves, and plunge in a box of damp sand. Recent experiments show that the slip will root faster if the sand has a slightly acid reaction. This can be done by adding a drop or two of vinegar to the water, moistening the sand. Just do this once, however, and use only clear water thereafter.

The slip stalks should be packed firmly in the moist sand, kept well watered and shaded. When the cuttings have rooted, which varies in plants from a few days to a few weeks, transplant the seedlings in pots or boxes filled with rich earth. Keep them watered well and let them have some sun, and you will be the proud possessor of some new plants.

STILL ANOTHER method used in reproduction is layering. This is a method of developing roots on a branch without detaching it from the parent plant. Many plants propagate themselves this way, such as forsythia suspensa, climbing rose, raspberry, grapes, and most creeping plants.

We make our process more exact by notching or bruising a branch tip, bending it over, pegging it down firmly and covering with soil. The bruised patch will root quickly because there is still a continuous flow of sap from the parent plant. Try this with your garden pinks; make a slit from one node to another near the tip of a stalk, peg down and water regularly. When the tip has rooted, cut away from the parent plant, and let life go as usual for the new one.

Stale bread sprinkled with French chalk is excellent for removing dirty patches from wall paper; rub very gently and change the bread as it gets soiled.

SAUCE for the GOOSE

by Irma S. Rombauer

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26.

THE inhabitants of Los Angeles pick figs and avocados from trees in their back yards; consequently these fruits appear frequently on their menus.

It is useless to give you recipes for figs because they pack badly; we see few of them and they are too expensive to preserve. The avocado, however, is shipped to St. Louis in large quantities and that is another story.

Try the following hors d'ouevre in order to get away from the usual cream cheese.

Celery Stuffed with Avocado

Clean, then chill until crisp; dwarf celery.

Peel and slice; avocado pear.

Crush the pulp to a paste with a fork. Season it with salt, lemon, catsup or Worcestershire sauce (optional).

Fill the celery ribs.

Sprinkle the filling with paprika.

Serve the celery well chilled.

Avocado Crackers

Prepare the filling given in the preceding rule.

Spread it on crisp hot crackers.

Garnish them with a sprinkling of paprika, a slice of stuffed olives.

Avocado Toast

Prepare avocado by the rule given for celery stuffed with avocado.

Flavor it with lemon juice.

Serve it for tea.

Flavor it with catsup or Worcestershire sauce.

Serve it as hors d'ouevre.

Avocado and Bacon

(Breakfast dish.)

Peel and slice avocado pear.

Crush it to a pulp with a fork.

Season it with salt, lemon juice.

Shape it into small mounds.

Garnish them with paprika.

Serve it with crisp bacon.

Avocado, Bacon and Tomato Sandwich

(Luncheon Dish).

Individual service.

Toast: Three slices of bread.

Arrange between the layers: Sliced tomatoes, sliced avocado, crisp bacon, lettuce, mayonnaise.

Serve the sandwich at once with: Orange Sherbet.

Grapes also grow in back yards here, sometimes on neighbor's vines, but reaching forward sufficiently on one's property to be considered a legitimate harvest. This is what we did with ours.

Seedless White Grape and Orange Marmalade

Cut into very thin slices (removing seeds) one small orange.

Soak it for three hours in three-fourths cup water. Add two cups seedless grapes.

Soak them for 30 minutes.

Bring the fruit slowly to the boiling point. Boil it quickly for five minutes.

Add one and one-half cups sugar, one tablespoon lemon juice.

Boil the marmalade five minutes longer.

The "dessert party" is popular here (also in the East), but I don't hear of them in St. Louis. Guests are bidden, not for luncheon or dinner, but for the sweet course. This is usually followed by card games and is given both after luncheon and after dinner.

Hostesses vie with each other in finding something attractive and tempting to serve. The following cream was a great success. Everybody present wanted the recipe and here it is.

Persimmon Ice Cream

Four servings.

Put through a ricer two Japanese persimmons.

Add to the pulp one tablespoon sugar, 3 tablespoons or more lemon juice.

Whip until stiff one cup heavy cream.

Fold the pulp lightly into the cream.

Freeze the mixture in a refrigerator tray.

Chocolate Nut Crisps

Cream three tablespoons butter.

Add slowly one cup sugar.

When these ingredients are creamy, beat in one egg, one-fourth teaspoon salt, three tablespoons grated chocolate, one teaspoon vanilla.

Sift two cups bread flour. Resift with one-half teaspoon soda, two teaspoons baking powder.

Add the dry ingredients to the butter mixture alternately with two-thirds cup sour cream.

Fold in one cup chopped pecans.

Drop the batter on a greased sheet.

Bake it in a moderate oven 350 degrees for about 20 minutes.

Empire Influence

At this season when the thoughts of St. Louis women and their daughters turn definitely to evening clothes, recognition must be taken of the Empire influence which has motivated designers. There are the raised waistline, the lower neckline, and the sleeved types which are characteristic of Empire design in formal clothes.

Princesse lines are to be found in all the showings, not alone in evening clothes, but in daytime clothes as well. One princesse gown in striped lame, built on svelte lines, has six jeweled buttons to indicate the waistline at the front.

New Recipes For Desserts With Caramel

Rules Offered Include Two for Caramel Sponge and Pecan Pie.

By Alice Lynn Barry

CARAMEL desserts are always welcomed with acclaim, and so we feel sure that you will soon try out the new and delicious caramel recipes offered here.

As both the carmel sponge and the caramel pecan pie owe their all to caramelized sweetened condensed milk, we will lead off with the basic recipe. To caramelize the milk, place one or more unopened cans in a kettle of boiling water and boil for three hours. Be sure to keep the cans well covered with water.

Several cans may be caramelized at the same time and kept unopened on the pantry shelf, until needed. The caramel may then be served with whipped cream or stewed or fresh fruit for a delicious dessert. It should be chilled for an hour or so before opening.

Now for the caramel sponge, which calls for one tablespoon granulated gelatin soaked in one-quarter cup cold water for five minutes. Then dissolve in one cup boiling water. Chill. When cold and slightly thickened, beat with rotary egg beater until light and fluffy. Add caramelized sweetened condensed milk, using one cup. Also add one-half teaspoon vanilla. Blend well. Pour into sherbet glasses. Place in refrigerator to chill. Garnish with whipped cream.

—o-o—

FOR THE PIE blend one can caramelized, sweetened condensed milk with one-quarter cup hot coffee until smooth. Cool. Pour into baked pie shell. Cover with one cup finely-chopped pecans. Spread with whipped cream. Chill before serving.

Right here is surely as good a place as any to repeat the receipe for caramel custard, and to give a nice variation on that sweet theme. For the custard, caramelize two-thirds cup of sugar by placing it in a heavy shallow pan. Melt over moderate heat, stirring constantly until melted to a light brown syrup. Add gradually to four cups scalded milk. Be careful that milk doesn't boil up and bubble over.

As soon as sugar is melted in milk, add mixture to five eggs, slightly beaten, and one-quarter cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt and one teaspoon vanilla. Strain into a buttered mold. Bake like baked custard.

If desired, replace one-quartar cup milk by same quantity fresh, hot coffee. When chilled serve with caramel sauce made by caramelizing one cup sugar and adding slowly one cup boiling water. Boil six minutes. Cool. One-quarter cup clear coffee may replace part of water.

The Importance Of Good Dessert

THE last dish eaten is longest remembered, so the wise hostess will always strive to serve a successful and different dessert. Thus she will erase the memory of any dish that wasn't quite as good as she expected it to be. Her guests will overlook the soup that is a failure, the roast that is a flop, the salad that is a shambles in the crowning glory of a really perfect dessert such as peach frost. Of course, we don't for one second mean that first, second or third courses should be ignored because there is to be a wonderful dessert. But let's get on with that recipe.

Mash one cup sliced, riped peaches and let stand with one-third cup sugar, three tablespoons white corn syrup and one-quarter teaspoon salt. Add one teaspoon gelatin to one-quarter cup water to soften; dissolve over hot water, add one tablespoon lemon juice and combine with sliced peaches. Pour into freezing trays of automatic refrigerator. Freeze to a mush, then stir mixture from sides and bottom of tray. Fold in one cup whipping cream, beaten stiff, and freeze.

For rice mold with caramel custard, steam three-quarters cup rice with two cups milk and one teaspoon salt, in double boiler for about 45 minutes or until rice is tender. Put in custard cups to mold; chill and turn into individual dishes. Surround with sliced ripe bananas and soft caramel custard. To make the latter, caramelize one-half cup sugar by stirring over low fire until melted. Add to two cups scalded milk, stir until dissolved, then add to two tablespoons flour mixed with two beaten egg yolks. Cook in double boiler about 10 minutes, stirring constantly until firm and thick. Add one-half teaspoon vanilla.

For a parfait that is really parfait, we recommend a date-pineapple dish, a perfect end to any dinner. Mix one crushed pineapple with one cup quartered marshmallows, one cup macaroon crumbs and one cup chopped dates. Place in refrigerator for two hours to chill, then fold in one cup whipping cream and chill again for one hour. Serve in sherbet or parfait glasses and top with a maraschino cherry or nut meats for a delicious dessert.

REFRESHING FRUIT in FALL

THERE is no season of the year more lavish than early autumn in its array of fresh fruit. Colorful, appealing and abundant, it offers a natural and worthwhile variety in refreshment when appetites need tempting.

No course in the menu omits a service for fruit. Deliciously tempting appetizers may blend several fruit flavors. Garnishes or flavorful accompaniments to meat or fish courses find a natural source among the various fruits. Fruit salads may be the mainstay of a luncheon or supper or occupy an accessory place in a more substantial meal. And we find in the dessert course an almost universal regard for fruit in countless combinations.

It is the season, too, when market counters laden with fruit tempt the homemaker to save some of its luscious goodness in the way of preserves for winter meals.

Desserts head the list of ways in which fresh fruit is served. There are puddings of many kinds, cakes, pies, ice creams, gelatin desserts and fritters. Salads and fruit appetizers are close seconds, with truly delicious combinations in fruit-jams and jellies promising many and varied treats for later cold weather menus. Meat accompaniments of fruit fritters, baked or broiled fruit and relishes offer new flavor for the meat course.

In many of the recipes—those which you will want to serve over again—it is possible to substitute the fruit in its canned form with slight variation. The frosted fruits; to those who are not familiar with them—are a real find for the busy and alert homemaker. They retain all of the lovely color and form and it is difficult indeed to visualize them as anything but strictly fresh. Use them also in these recipes, exactly as you would fresh fruits.

And now for some recipes.

Pineapple Pear Eclairs

One cup water.

One-half cup butter.

One cup sifted flour.

Four eggs, unbeaten.

Place water and butter in a large, heavy saucepan and heat to boiling point. When vigorously boiling, add flour all at once and beat hard. A smooth ball of dough will be formed which leaves the sides of the pan. Turn into mixing bowl and add eggs one at a time, mixing thoroughly after each addition. Continue beating until mixture is thick and shiny. Place mixture in pastry bag and make strips of the dough (one inch wide by four and one-half inches long) on an ungreased cooky sheet. Leave at least two inches between each eclair. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 10 minutes, then reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees F.) for 20 minutes. Yield: approximately 12 eclairs.

Filling

Two and one-quarter cups pineapple juice.

Three-quarters cup sugar.

Three-eighths teaspoon salt.

Four and one-half tablespoons cornstarch.

Three egg yolks, beaten.

One and one-half cups chopped fresh pears.

Heat pineapple juice to boiling. Add combined sugar, salt and cornstarch and cook until thick and smooth, about 10 minutes. Stir constantly. Stir mixture into egg yolks and cook two or three minutes longer. Add pears and cool. Yield: three and one-half cups filling.

Meringue

Two egg whites.

One-quarter cup powdered sugar.

One teaspoon lemon juice.

Beat egg whites and sugar together until mixture stands in peaks. Add lemon juice. Fill eclair shells with pineapple pear filling, top with meringue and place in hot oven (400 degrees F.) for five minutes. Yield: 12 eclairs.

Recipes for Vegetable Dishes

DESPITE the wide variety of vegetables on display at most markets, many menu-makers still stick to the old favorites. Of course, spinach and cabbage and brussels sprouts are good, and good for us. But they will be better if served in different ways and alternated with vegetables that are less popular. Eggplant, okra, broccoli and leeks all can be prepared in many novel ways to lend interest to even the simplest menu.

Scalloped leeks make an exceptionally tasty dish for lunch, dinner or supper. Wash 18 leeks thoroughly and cut off nearly all of the green stems, leaving only about four inches of the vegetable in all. Let stand some 40 minutes; drain, and cook in boiling water until tender. Melt two tablespoons butter in a large frying pan; add the thoroughly drained leeks and simmer gently for five minutes. Add one-half cup soup stock and cook until nearly all liquor has evaporated. Lay leeks in flat baking dish, cover with what liquor is left, sprinkle with bread crumbs, moisten with one tablespoon butter, melted, and brown in hot oven.

We ought to emulate our Italian friends and eat more zucchini. There's a recipe for zucchini that we hope will serve to introduce many of you to this vegetable. Cut two cups zucchini in three-quarter-inch dice, and fry in two tablespoons butter for a few moments until partially browned. Add one stalk celery, sliced very thin, one small tomato, peeled and sliced; three tablespoons beef broth and seasoning. Cover closely, reduce heat and simmer until tender. If desired, the pan may be wiped with garlic before melting the butter.

Okra is delicious and is a favorite with those addicted to Creole cookery. Okra with tomatoes makes a most delicious vegetable and is so easy to prepare. Wash thoroughly and cut off stems of one pound of okra. Cook until tender in small amount of water so that all water will be absorbed. Add two cups tomatoes and simmer for 10 minutes. Add one tablespoon butter, salt and pepper.

NOW WE'LL GET down to cases and offer a good recipe for those who have trouble making the youngsters stow away the favorite food of Pop-Eye the Sailor-Man. Take four cups cooked spinach, chop, add three beaten eggs, one-half cup finely-rolled bread crumbs, three slices bacon, cut into small pieces and fried brown, and one eight-ounce can mushrooms, sliced. Season with one and one-half teaspoons salt and one-quarter teaspoon pepper.

Turn into a greased seven and one-half-inch round casserole or round ring mold. Into a covered utensil pour one and one-half cups water, place a trivet in bottom and place the spinach mold on this cover. Cook over high flame until steam escapes, then simmer for 45 minutes. Turn out on hot serving plate and garnish with hot shredded beets, hard-boiled eggs and parsley.

Always warm the pot before making coffee, then sprinkle a little salt on the coffee before adding the boiling water. This will improve the flavor.

Breast of Veal As the Basis Of Good Meal

This Menu Includes Mushroom Dumplings and String Beans.

Hard Boiled Egg Soup

TO four cups of chicken stock, made from the left-over chicken bones or using canned chicken broth, add three tablespoons of lemon juice. Thicken with one rounded tablespoon of cornstarch which has been dissolved in a little of the cold stock. Cook three eggs hard. Carefully remove the yolks and press through a ricer into the hot soup. Season to taste. Garnish each, serving with rings of the whites of eggs sliced thin and a little minced parsley.

Breast of Veal

Have a breast of veal cut in two-inch pieces. Salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Brown in butter on one side. Cover with a thin layer of onions which have been chopped fine. Turn and brown on the other side, being careful not to let the onions burn. Add water to cover. Cover pan tightly and let simmer for one and a half hours. Drop the mushroom dumplings by spoonfuls on top of the meat and cover tightly and let steam 15 to 20 minutes.

Mushroom Dumplings

1½ cups of flour.
3 teaspoons of baking powder.
1 teaspoon salt.
4 tablespoons water.
1 cup of finely chopped mushrooms.

Saute the mushrooms in a little butter for five minutes. Add a scant teaspoon of flour and a half cup of milk. Let cook until slightly thickened. Cool and add to the flour, sifted with the salt and baking powder, and teaspoon of minced parsley, then the water to form a soft dough. Mix well.

String Beans au Gratin

Cut string beans diagonally in thin slivers and cook in boiling, salted water with a teaspoon of sugar. Drain. Place a layer in a glass baking dish, then a layer of rich, well-seasoned cream sauce, then another layer of the beans and sauce. Cover with fine buttered crumbs mixed with grated cheese. Place in oven to thoroughly heat and brown.

Thousand Island Dressing

2 tablespoons of green peppers, cut fine.

2 tablespoons of pimentos, cut fine.

1 teaspoon of scraped onion or tiny pearl onions.

1 tablespoon catsup.

2 teaspoons of chile sauce.

¾ cup of whipped cream.

1 cup of mayonnaise.

Mix the chopped ingredients, add salt and paprika, catsup, chile and one teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce. Blend thoroughly with the mayonnaise and fold in the whipped cream.

Orange Delight

To two cups of strained orange juice add the juice of two lemons, the grated rind of one large orange and one cup of sugar. Bring to a boil, remove from fire and add two tablespoons of gelatin, previously softened in one-half cup of cold water. Chill mixture over a pan of ice, beating with a rotary beater. When beginning to thicken, fold in one and a fourth cups of cream, beaten stiff, and a pinch of salt. Lightly butter a mold and press against sides and bottom skinned sections of orange. Pour in mixture and place in refrigerator to become firm. Garnish with green leaves.

Evening Fashions

Have you noticed how many of the luxurious and very formal evening frocks are accompanied by matching jackets? This is attributed not only to the insistence of many women upon matching ensembles, but upon the vogue of greater coverage in evening attire. If a frock hasn't its own sleeves, then the jacket supplies them.

Metallic fabrics are elegant exponents of this mode of evening suits. The formal gowns are cut low of neckline and have gracefully sweeping skirts. Jackets usually are hip length and fitted at the waistline. Revers of fur enhance the beauty of these wraps and fox is the most impressive of the furs. Two animals often are used, the heads meeting at the back of the neckline and the tails falling below the hemline of the coat.

OFF the LEASH

by H. F. Owen

THIS is the most beautiful time of the year to take long rides in the country. Many of you take your dog with you to enjoy the ride and have a romp in the open. Many others would like to take their dogs on trips into the country but the dog is so unruly that they do not take him after the first trip.

Most dogs like to ride in a car and it is a pleasure to take them with you if they ride properly, so we will teach him how to conduct himself when in the car.

It is easier to teach the dog in the front seat unless you have someone else to do the driving, which is perhaps the easiest way, as you may then sit in the back seat with the dog and give all of your attention to the lesson. Whether you are alone or have someone else driving, always sit in the same seat with the dog when teaching him how to ride.

If you know that your dog will try to jump out as soon as you open the door or that he jumps from one seat to another, tie a rope around his body as you did in the "come here" lesson, taught previously. Hold the loose end or fasten it to something in the car so that when he pumps to the other seat or out of the door when you open it he will be stopped just as he leaps. Drive to some little used street or road. Have your dog sit at your side. If he gets up, say "no, sit," and make him sit in place again.

—o-o—

● IF HE PUTS his nose against the glass, nudge him with your elbow each time he does so. Make him sit properly. If the window is open do not let him hang with his front feet on the sill and his head out of the window. His nails mar the finish on the sill, for one thing. To discourage or break a dog of this bad habit, each time he puts his head out the window or puts his feet on the window sill tweek the end of his tail and say "no." This annoys him and he will soon connect his misbehavior with this annoyance and stop it.

When you get to a street where there is no traffic, drive up to the curb and stop the car. Reach over and open the door in a natural way. If the dog jumps out he will be stopped by the rope before he reaches the ground and will be so surprised that he will hurry back into the seat where the rope does not bother him. A few lessons like this and he will not attempt to get out when you open the door.

Now you get out on your side of the car and if he tries to follow you, the rope will stop him again. Say "No, stay there!" and make him sit properly. Then pretend to go away and if he tries to jump into the other seat the rope is ready to correct him. It will not take him long to learn what is expected of him and you will have a dog that it will be a pleasure to take with you in the car.

● CONTRARY TO popular opinion the Schipperke originated in the Flemish provinces of Belgium. Although several hundred years old, the breed was called by several different names until 1888, when the name Schipperke was adopted permanently.

Many of these grand little watch dogs were used on canal boats between Brussels and Antwerp and were highly praised for their work as guard dogs, although since the war there are not as many seen on these boats. Bred small, they take up very little room. They are hardy and able watch dogs. They have a very keen nose and have also been used for hunting 'coon and 'possum. But until the Schipperke was admired by a former queen, the breed was not thought of very highly as a pet.

Although a good ratter, the Schipperke is not a fighter. However, he will hold his own at any time and is by no means a coward for he will protect his home against any intruder, no matter what the size.

—o-o—

THE NAME Schipperke in Flemish means Little Captain and he is truly rightly named for he is always alert, suspicious of strangers, always looking for something to do and loves to be with horses.

His head is moderately wide, shaped like a fox and his nose is small and black. His eyes are dark brown in color and oval shaped with a keen expression of inquisitiveness. He has small ears that are set high on his head, a short neck, a deep chest, and his body is very short and chubby looking. His coat should be very abundant and short on the body with a ruff on longer hair on his neck which makes him look much higher at the shoulders than at the rump. His color is always black. He should weigh about 18 pounds.

Fur Borders

Fur borders are back again as part of the general luxury look that marks the new mode. Fitted coats invariably have contrasting skirts that flare or have a swing to them. And the swing generally means a rippling border and the rippling border generally demands fur—and gets it. But to get back to our sheep, or rather, our fur-bearing animals. Fox, lynx and Persian lamb appear in border treatments on all types of coats, from sports to dress models. Suits have jackets with pert peplums also bordered with fur.

An Old Slant On Question Of Longevity

Outlined in "The Right Way to Long Life," Published in 1650.

By Logan Clendening, M D.

THERE has just come to me from London an old book on a subject that will always be new and fresh: how to live to be old. For, in spite of the disadvantages and infirmities of age, we all want to attain it.

The book is Tobias Venner's "Via Recta Ad Vitam Longam"—The Right Way to Long Life, dated 1650. For all practical purposes, as Dr. Raymond Pearl has pointed out in his essay on Venner and the Via Recta, "The latest treatise on personal hygiene of today contains little of any importance that is not in the Via Recta in one form or another, or, little advice that differs from Dr. Venner's."

We need not be surprised then to find that Dr. Venner lays a good deal of stress on diet.

—o-o—

AND WITHOUT knowing anything about them (lucky fellow, perhaps) he advocates the foods with vitamins and protective quality. For instance, on the subject of lettuce he says:

"Whether it be eaten raw or boyled as the constitution of the body shall require, this is certaine that there cannot be found any simple medicinable meat, wherewith sleep may be procured, and the unquietness of the spirits, and heat of choler appeased, as with it. It cannot be spoken with how great efficacy it doth, being eaten with vineger, extinguish the burning heat of the stomach."

Of milk he says:

"Milk is of easy digestion, of much and good nourishment: it impinguateth and causeth the body to wax grosse, and for amending of a dry constitution, and for them that are extenuated by long sicknesse, or are in a consumption, it is by reason of the excellent moistening, cooling and nourishing faculty of it, of singular efficacy."

Of roughage (in the form of bran) he says:

Bread made only of the branny part of the meal "doth sooner descend and move the belly—wherefore for those are are healthy and yet subject to costiveness, and also for such as would not wax grosse, it is most profitable."

—o-o—

IN OTHER things he advises moderation, as is proper for a hygienist—in drink, in changing diets to rapidly, in not getting too fat, in late hours, in exercise, in getting enough sleep.

With the precepts to moderation, no hygienist, in fact no human being, can differ. Undoubtedly they make for a happier, more comfortable, more wholesome life. But whether they prolong life, I doubt, if even those who want to live long the most entirely believe them. And if they really believe in these precepts they would practice them.

The real facts about long life are those we are suggesting in another article. If you gathered a thousand people 90 years old together, you would find that they were about equally divided between vegetarians and meat-eaters, teetotalers and alcohol-users, smokers and abstainers, sleepers and insomniacs, tea hounds, coffee hounds and let-alones, pedestrians and sit-by-the-fires. The only thing they would all agree on would be long-lived ancestors.

WITHOUT REGRETS - My Life Story

Success in New York and a Return to the Films in Hollywood

By Gladys George

GLADYS GEORGE . . . SHE SCRUBBED FLOORS.

CHAPTER TWO.

IN San Francisco one day I saw a friend's name listed in the cast of the stock company at the Alcazar Theater and called there to see her. She wasn't in—but Victor Mole, the box office man, was. He took one look at me and suddenly became all excited.

"Lady," he said. "You're an actress, aren't you? Tell me you're an actress!"

"Sure, I'm an actress—and a darn good one," I said.

"Then, lady, listen. You've got a job. I guarantee you. Wait here. Wait'll I get the manager." And he disappeared down the middle aisle of the empty house toward the stage.

P. S.—I got the job!

The company had been looking for a successor to Belle Bennett, the leading woman, who had just left; and as an actress I looked enough like her to be given a chance. And besides, they told me afterwards, they liked my eyes.

As it turned out my engagement at that grand old theater was vastly important to me—not only as an actress but as a woman. For it was there that I fell in love for the first time in my life.

Ben Erway was the company's leading man. We opened opposite each other in Cosmo Hamilton's "The Blindness of Virtue" and continued week after week as the protagonists in various other stage romances. And one day we were married.

We were very happy at first—but it didn't last.

Ben and I organized our own stock company, toured the West Coast, played long engagements in Denver, Salt Lake and Kansas City, and for a while did pretty well. Then we separated.

The next time we met it was under rather embarrassing circumstances. I signed with a company going on tour to Honolulu and one of the first people I met on the boat was Ben. He was a member of the same company.

—o-o—

BY this time I was "tops" as a stock actress but had never been very provident and in Honolulu blithely frittered away nearly all the money I had. We played over there for some months and when it was all over and I stepped off the gangplank at San Francisco I had exactly $7 to my name.

I have mentioned before that whenever things looked blackest for me there always seemed to be a "good fairy" waiting to sweep away the clouds. This time it was Clarence Kiernan, dean of the stage hands at the Alcazar.

He had been a kind of father confessor to me during my engagement there with Ben several years before. I had been still in the frightened stage then and used to show up hours before rehearsal and go through the whole play, doing everybody's part, and moving the chairs and things around, so I'd be fully prepared at regular rehearsal time. The others didn't know this, of course, and used to call me the "girl wonder" because, young as I was, I seldom made a mistake or forgot my lines. But Clarence knew. And he kept the secret.

He was the first person I thought of now. But was he still at the Alcazar? He was! As steady and gentle and friendly as ever.

We sat back stage on a couple of packing cases while I told him what I had been doing and how I needed a job again.

"New York's the place for you," he told me.

I made a face. "New York!" I said. "But I can't get there on $7."

"Never mind," he said, "I'll lend you the fare—and plenty of money besides till you get going again."

And he did. Plenty of money! It came to $800, most of it in weekly checks, before I finally regained my independence. But even then I was a long way from New York City.

"Some day I'll be a star!"

I had said that to myself ever since I was a child playing the tank time.

I had said it working behind a candy counter, modeling hats, washing floors, playing stock, riding wagons at night with the Johnson Brothers' Medicine Show, and choking back the tears when they laughed at me on Broadway.

But now I seemed scarcely an inch nearer the pot of gold than when I set out to find it.

—o-o—

I WAS back in New York again—on borrowed money—and New York was even colder than it had been before. I walked the streets day after day without even getting a hearing. And Clarence Kiernan's checks kept coming in—$35 a week, of which I sent $15 to my father and mother in California.

So I left New York. I went to St. Louis and landed a job in stock. And at the end of the week I got my notice. I wired Buzz Bainbridge in Minneapolis (he's the Mayor now) and he sent me the fare to come on. I went to work "on percentage," with a guarantee of $15 a week.

We did three plays, I sent the $15 to my parents regularly every week, but no percentage was forthcoming. Every day I drew $1.50 a day for meals, and that was all. Stock was on its last legs. After the third week the company folded up its tents like the Arabs and I as silently stole away to Springfield, Mass., and landed with the Thatcher Players at $100 per!

But it was no go. That company folded too. Stock was finished.

In Springfied I met the man who was to be my second husband—Edward H. Fowler, a wealthy manufacturer. He proposed, and I put him off. I wasn't sure.

I went to Boston and landed a job in stock for six weeks. And coming out of the theater after the opening night I slipped and broke my nose.

My face was a sight. I played the week out with a nose that looked like it was trying to whisper into my left ear, and just before the opening of the next play I resigned.

But I wasn't ready to quit yet. I went to a plastic surgeon and luckily he was able to give me a better nose than I had before. And then I accepted Edward Fowler's ring.

That marriage took no better than the first. In a few weeks we were separated, and in a few months more divorced. I went back to the stage—and to Broadway at that!

It was in "Queer People," with Hal Skelly. It wasn't much of a success, but it got me into "The Milky Way" afterwards, and that brought me notice once more from Hollywood. I went into M-G-M's "Straight Is the Way," opposite Franchot Tone.

At last it looked like I was getting the breaks, but I wasn't. Not yet. The picture flopped and I found myself idle. And then came a message from Brock Pemberton—the message that made all my dreams come true. He wanted me for the lead in "Personal Appearance" in New York!

—o-o—

I OBTAINED a release and went. The play was a smash hit. And practically overnight I found myself famous! A real Broadway star!

"Personal Appearance" ran 85 weeks, 62 of them in New York and the rest on the road. And once more it brought me a Hollywood offer.

We were playing it in San Francisco one night when Wesley Ruggles, the Paramount producer, came backstage to see me. He wanted me for "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie." And I was to be the star!

That's how it all happened to Gladys George. From the tall grass circuits to the bright lights of Broadway and a star's dressing-room in Hollywood. And now where?

I don't know, except that I want to go on and on. It's all been worth it—even the candy counter and the wholesale clothing store, the floors I scrubbed, and the pain of being laughed at by the other girls because I wore cotton stockings to my first Broadway rehearsal.

This is what I want. It's what I've always wanted.

I'm married again—to Leonard Penn, who was my leading man in Springfield, and I'm happier, I think, than I've ever been.

And for that I can thank a lot of people—dad, the plumed warrior, with his bad business sense and unquenchable optimism; mother, loving him not wisely, but too well; staunch-hearted Leonard; that landlady in the Texas hotel; the amazing Mr. Johnson of the medicine show, and dear, friendly Clarence Kiernan.

THE END.

Patterns Now Fashionable in Men's Clothing

However, They Are Not Extremely Bold, Says Esquire.

By Esquire

FASHION steps out this season with a noticeable partiality to fabrics that feature definite patterns, although they are by no means extremely bold. Suitings for daily business wear may be of Saxony, cheviot and clear-cut or unfinished worsted. Saxony fabrics are patterned in various Glen Urquhart designs; cheviots are smart in the traditional herringbone effects; clear-cut worsteds are to be found in sharkskins with stripes and oversquares; unfinished worsteds are particularly important in dark grounds with simple stripes or the newer polychromatic stripings. Shirt patterns are favored in the new grouped or alternate colored stripings on moderately colored grounds, while the two most important neckwear groups are divided between stripings on reps or charvets, and the always-effective all-over geometric figure designs.

Random notes on men's fall clothing:

Saxony type suitings are most popular in Glen Urquhart or variations of this design.

Unfinished worsteds are smart in dark grounds with simple stripes, group stripes, or subtle multi-colored stripes.

Cheviots rise to new favor in the typical herringbone weaves found in this fabric.

Clear-cut worsteds in sharkskins, broken herringbone and variations of these designs are excellent for business suitings.

A new note in shirtings is alternate colored stripes on moderately colored grounds.

The all-over geometric design for neckwear is appropriately worn with the currently smart suits and shirts.

Striped neckwear retains its favored position and is designed on deep grounds with varying size stripes in contrasting and harmonizing colors.

Adding Sauces To Your Dishes

THE SIMPLEST dish is turned into a work of culinary art by the addition of tasty, well-made sauces. The good cook commands a repertoire of all types of sauces, sweet, sour and savory. So if you want to be a re-sauce-ful cook, to perpetrate a dreadful pun, take heed of these sauces.

In the New England country, housewives make a grand nutmeg sauce to lend zest to apple dumplings or berry puddings that have been made with a biscuit dough. To make this sauce, mix well one cup sugar, one tablespoon flour and a pinch of salt. Add two cups boiling water gradually, stirring all the while. Then add one tablespoon butter and cook for five minutes. Remove from fire and stir in one teaspoon nutmeg, grated. Serve hot.

—o-o—

FROM VERMONT comes this rich maple syrup pudding sauce. Boil three-quarters cup maple syrup and one-quarter cup water until it will spin a thread. Pour it slowly into the stiffly-beaten whites of two eggs, mixed with one-half cup cream and one teaspoon lemon juice, beating constantly with an egg beater.

White sauce is always a good stand-by. To vary it and make a delicious cheese sauce, add one-half cup grated American cheese, one-half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce and paprika to white sauce. Serve hot.

A tasty horseradish sauce is always liked. Here is an easy recipe, as well as a more involved way of preparing this sauce. For the latter, melt one teaspoon butter and add same amount flour. When blended add one-half cup cream.

Heat to boiling point and stir in yolks of two eggs beaten up with a little of the cream. Take off stove and when cool, add one-half cup grated horseradish, one and one-half teaspoons each vinegar and sugar.

For the easier and more economical variation, mix four tablespoons prepared horseradish with one-half cup thick cream and one-half teaspoon salt. Beat mixture until the cream is stiff.

into Mae Murray—still slim and blonde and shapely, her lips still bee-stung, and her mind full of great projects. Still the same buoyant Mae of "The Merry Widow" and her other film hits.

Every day I meet one or more of these lovely and very animated wraiths—looking across a dining room I see one of the Talmadge girls, or peachy Dorothy Mackaill (what slim hips!). Stumbling down Madison avenue I note Estelle Taylor peering intently at a flock of gowns. More rarely I catch a glimpse of Phyllis Haver, or Julia Sanderson, or Florence Vidor (now, of course, THE Mrs. Heifetz). And like everyone else, I always get a bit of a turn at seeing these Dream Girls of another day looking so young and so pretty. Drat us—we'll never learn to remember that they began so very young, in the public eye, and that they pass out of the picture, often, in the full glory of womanhood!

—o-o—

DORIS WESTER, first of the sweet girl graduates of Maj. Bowes' air show to be hired for the Rainbow Room, has been signed for movies. She doesn't sing—she talks her songs. And so pretty she is! . . . One of the early fall sights that panic me is watching the young blades-about-town with darling little feathers and ducky little flowers in their grey felt hats. Bless their hearts—if they could only yodel! . . . Local columnist Jack Chapman gives me my big laugh of the week by telling about the "Follies" queen who was asked to fill out a questionnaire when she joined the show recently. After "Education?" she wrote, briefly, "Private Tudor."

—o-o—

MAYOR LA GUARDIA'S anti-noise campaign thunders on. The other day 31 citizens were hauled before the bar of justice for unnecessary blatting of motor horns. Magistrate Aurelio said, as he clapped a two-dollar fine on one and all, "These horns have made jumping-jacks out of the city's people." A Daniel come to judgment!

—o-o—

BEFORE I forget it, I want to point out that Mabel Search has joined the editorial staff of Pictorial Review, and that is the second best name in the world for a script-seeking editor. The perfect one, obviously, would be Florence Find. . . . With autumn upon us, it is now accepted all over town that THE glamor girl of 1936-37 will be peachy Eleanor Young, who was recently threatened with the snatch by a mean old student-kidnaper. She is completely surrounded by most of the town's beaux, and has also been singled out by the attractive Arturo Ramos, once the spouse of Millicent Rogers Salm, etc. So insist that she be pointed out to you when you drop in on us. If you can see her for the lads, of course! . . .

Handbag Pockets

A HANDBAG has become a luxury rather than a necessity now that the coat designers are giving us handbag pockets. Some of them zip shut after the manner of a tailored pocketbook and others have huge flaps which button or snap in place. Even the handles of the swanky pouch bags are suggested by strips of contrasting fabric circled above the pockets. Incidentally, the pockets are sufficiently roomy to hold any number of gadgets.

Ladders, new and old, should be subjected to a periodical test. After laying the ladder flat on the ground place a wood block or similar support (say eight inches or nine inches high) underneath each end. If sound, the ladder should bear the weight of a man standing midway—that is to say, near the middle rung.

THE STAMP REVIEW x ˣ x By John Chamberlin

THE Postmaster-General of New Zealand has announced a special issue of stamps in honor of the annual conference of the Federation of Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire in Wellington next month. The issue will be five in number, the designs already having been approved. The halfpenny will be green and will represent the wool industry, while the one-penny red will represent the dairy industry by showing the interior of a butter factory. According to the international postal regulations, the two pence halfpenny will be in blue, and its design will show sheep flocks. The four-penny mauve will be allegorical of fruit growing, and the six-penny stamp will show a wharf scene, along with an allegorical figure of commerce suggesting imports. All the stamps will be of the same size as the Jubilee issue. They will be placed on sale on Oct. 1, and will be withdrawn from issue not later than Oct. 31.

IN THE Memphis Appeal of Oct. 19, 1861, there appeared an advertisement of one Tony Costa, offering to carry mail to Mexico, Cuba, and Europe at 50 cents, 75 cents and $1, respectively.

Blockade runners during the Civil War period, of course, carried letters to foreign countries, particularly to Great Britain and France—they are known to all who have read about the Civil War. None of these letters carried any Confederate stamps, but they might have possibly carried a cancelation to speed them on their way.

● COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH flew the mail again, but in Germany, not the United States. On July 22 he visited the German Olympic games. The Colonel and his wife went from London to Berlin, stopping first in Cologne. They then flew to Staaken, where they were officially welcomed by the Trans-Atlantic flyers, Wolfgang von Gronau, and several other officials.

They then hopped off to Berlin. Ninety covers were carried from Cologne to Berlin by Col. Lindbergh. All covers were first postmarked at Staaken 22.7.36, and later in the same day at the Berlin Central Airport P. O., Col. Lindbergh autographed some of these covers.

These covers were not official; in fact, they were against the law; but if anyone should find one in his collection, and should not decide to collect that particular cover, he may, by selling the cover, add to his collection for one year without cost to himself.

—o-o—

THE FRONT-COVER design of the magazine of the American Manganese Steel Co. bears a picture, in the August issue, of the 10-peso stamp of Chile of the recent commemorative issue. The illustration on this stamp shows a steam shovel at work. A company official, Mr. Kreicker, has some proofs in black available. He will be glad to send any collector interested one of these copies upon receipt of a 3-cent stamp at his office in Chicago.

—o-o—

THE Philippine Bureau of Posts has issued three locally overprinted stamps to commemorate the flight of two aviators, Antonio Arnaiz and Juan Calvo, from Manila to Spain. The stamps are overprinted "MANILA - MADRID, 1936, ARNACAL," the last word being a contraction of the two flyers' names. There is also a surcharge altering the values of the stamps. The issue is as follows: 2c on 4c carmine (McKinley), 2,000,000; 6c on 12c orange (Lincoln), 500,000; 16c on 26c green (Carriedo), 300,000; all these stamps being of the old 1917-25 series. The Government voted the flyers 30,000 pesos in addition to the special stamps in their honor. The first day of issue of the stamps was Sept. 5, in Manila.

MANY JUNIOR collectors send for approvals without having much money to spend for stamps. After keeping the stamps for several days they return them without a purchase being made.

If your allowance for stamps is limited, save until you can make a purchase of at least half a dollar. Do not ever ask a dealer for a selection of a certain country unless you are prepared to spend several dollars. The average dealer will send stamps on approval on the most modest of references, but he does expect the stamps back in 10 days in order that he can send them to another customer.

—o-o—

STRONG OBJECTION has been put forth against the proposal to put the portrait of President Quezon of the Philippine Islands on the stamps commemorating the first anniversary of the commonwealth, because it is the rule in the United States that no stamp is to picture a living person.

—o-o—

A LOT OF the old United States "army franks" have appeared in Europe. These stamps were a private venture and they followed the design of the 1869 30 cent value, in blue or red or brown. Ten thousand of them turned up the other day in Europe. A dealer in India got most of them in exchange for used Jubilees.

FASHION steps out this season with a noticeable partiality to fabrics that feature definite patterns, although they are by no means extremely bold. Suitings for daily business wear may be of Saxony, cheviot and clear-cut or unfinished worsted. Saxony fabrics are patterned in various Glen Urquhart designs; cheviots are smart in the traditional herringbone effects; clear-cut worsteds are to be found in sharkskins with stripes and oversquares; unfinished worsteds are particularly important in dark grounds with simple stripes or the newer polychromatic stripings. Shirt patterns are favored in the new grouped or alternate colored stripings on moderately colored grounds, while the two most important neckwear groups are divided between stripings on reps or charvets, and the always-effective all-over geometric figure designs.

Random notes on men's fall clothing:

Saxony type suitings are most popular in Glen Urquhart or variations of this design.

Unfinished worsteds are smart in dark grounds with simple stripes, group stripes, or subtle multicolored stripes.

Cheviots rise to new favor in the typical herringbone weaves found in this fabric.

Clear-cut worsteds in sharkskins, broken herringbone and variations of these designs are excellent for business suitings.

A new note in shirtings is alternate colored stripes on moderately colored grounds.

The all-over geometric design for neckwear is appropriately worn with the currently smart suits and shirts.

Striped neckwear retains its favored position and is designed on deep grounds with varying size stripes in contrasting and harmonizing colors.

Adding Sauces To Your Dishes

THE SIMPLEST dish is turned into a work of culinary art by the addition of tasty, well-made sauces. The good cook commands a repertoire of all types of sauces, sweet, sour and savory. So if you want to be a re-sauce-ful cook, to perpetrate a dreadful pun, take heed of these sauces.

In the New England country, housewives make a grand nutmeg sauce to lend zest to apple dumplings or berry puddings that have been made with a biscuit dough. To make this sauce, mix well one cup sugar, one tablespoon flour and a pinch of salt. Add two cups boiling water gradually, stirring all the while. Then add one tablespoon butter and cook for five minutes. Remove from fire and stir in one teaspoon nutmeg, grated. Serve hot.

—o-o—

FROM VERMONT comes this rich maple syrup pudding sauce. Boil three-quarters cup maple syrup and one-quarter cup water until it will spin a thread. Pour it slowly into the stiffly-beaten whites of two eggs, mixed with one-half cup cream and one teaspoon lemon juice, beating constantly with an egg beater.

White sauce is always a good stand-by. To vary it and make a delicious cheese sauce, add one-half cup grated American cheese, one-half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce and paprika to white sauce. Serve hot.

A tasty horseradish sauce is always liked. Here is an easy recipe, as well as a more involved way of preparing this sauce. For the latter, melt one teaspoon butter and add same amount flour. When blended add one-half cup cream.

Heat to boiling point and stir in yolks of two eggs beaten up with a little of the cream. Take off stove and when cool, add one-half cup grated horseradish, one and one-half teaspoons each vinegar and sugar.

For the easier and more economical variation, mix four tablespoons prepared horseradish with one-half cup thick cream and one-half teaspoon salt. Beat mixture until the cream is stiff.

When to Double

By Ely Culbertson

ANY double which is not meant for a take-out is a penalty double.

You should double for penalties only when you expect to defeat the opponents by two tricks or more, for otherwise there is danger that a freak distribution might permit the opponents to avoid the loss of some expected trick and make their contract.

When you are confident that, if you were to continue bidding, you could make your contract, you should double only when the expected set is worth at least as much as the value of the trick score you could make. Remember that a game is worth about 500 points; a part-score about 160 points.

Against your opponents' trump contracts, you can expect to win tricks only with defensive honor tricks and with trump tricks in the opponents' suit.

You count your own honor tricks and your expected winners in trumps. You add to these the honor tricks which your partner has guaranteed by his bidding. If the total of these tricks is two more than you need to defeat the opponents, you should double.

The king of a suit bid by your right hand opponent should be counted as one trick, not a half; the A Q of a suit bid by your right hand opponent as two tricks, not 1½.

—o-o—

● THE IMPORTANCE of leading from one hand instead of the other is not always appreciated by average players, unless it is a clear case of finessing. There are, however, many other sound reasons for maneuvering the lead to the desired hand. A typical situation is described in today's hand.

West, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 heart	Double	Pass	1 spade
3 hearts	3 spades	Pass	4 spades
Pass	Pass	Pass

West's jump bid at his second opportunity was a belated and futile effort to keep the opponents from getting together. He should have thought of this at his first bidding opportunity, for his hand was ideal for an opening three bid. Admittedly, on this hand North could not have been shut out of the bidding, since he had available to him such an excellent take-out double.

—o-o—

● IT SHOULD BE noted that South responded properly with his major suit, even though it was only four long and very anemic, rather than with his five-card minor suit.

West opened the heart king and followed with the ace, then shifted to the ten of clubs. Dummy won with the king, and declarer now made a careless play. He laid down the queen of spades. West won with the ace and led another club. Dummy won and the jack of spades now disclosed the disappointing news that another spade trick had to be lost to East. Thus, the contract was defeated one trick.

This is one of the most common types of errors. From West's bidding, declarer could have been fairly certain that he held the spade ace. While it was unlikely that it was blank, there was no reason not to guard against such a possibility. Declarer should have entered his hand with a diamond, and led a low spade up to dummy, this being the standard way to discover distributions of the type actually existing. The ace in this case would have felled nothing but the deuce from declarer's hand and the three from dummy, instead of slaughtering one of the vital honors, and thus only three tricks in all would have been lost.

QUESTION: Is a one no trump response to partner's opening suit bid a negative response in the Culbertson system?

Answer: Yes.

Cigarette Cases

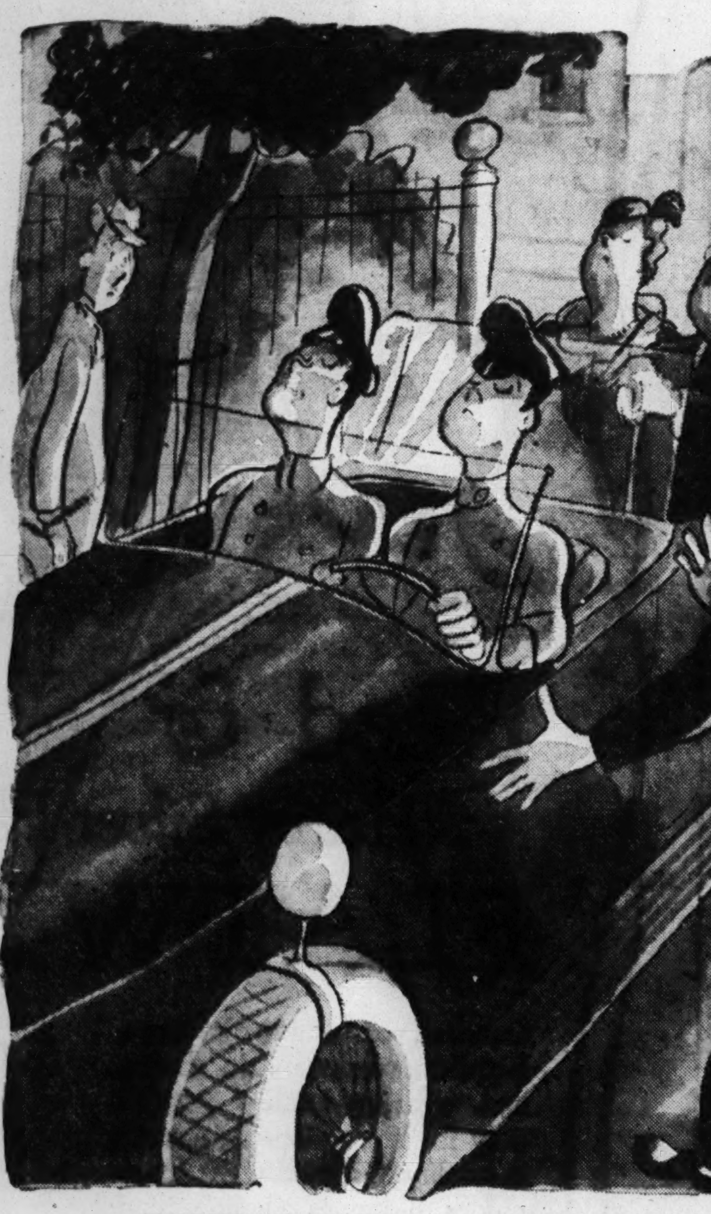
The swankiest place to carry your timepiece this season is on your cigarette case. Tiny square watches which actually run are the chief decoration on a new collection of smoking gadgets on display in St. Louis. The cases are of gold or silver unless a bright enamel finish is preferred.

Other cigarette cases with an eye to style consist of combination compacts and holders for your favorite brand of smokes. A tricky spring opens the way to each of the sections. Colors to blend with evening frocks or daytime costumes may be obtained.

Elegance is the word for autumn. Deep-pile new woolens with a velvety feel under your hand, soft yet glistening metal-shot woolens, silks brocaded in gold and silver, and velvets in a symphony of new color tones produce the mood of the new season.

IN THE BIG VILLAGE

By Roland Coe



"SOMEBODY SAY SOMETHING . . . ARGUE WITH ME . . . OR I'LL GO NUTS."

Blending of Grapes and Spices

AUTUMN IS beginning to rival the springtime as the season for weddings. An unusual wedding that interests the home maker is that union between two of the world's sweethearts—grapes and spices. From the legendary past until today the fruit of the vine has been pictured as a table delicacy, giving its rich coloring and bouquet as a fruit and as a beverage for the delight of man. And now our modern world has added to the grape's sphere of usefulness by many uses unknown to earlier days.

—o-o—

JAMS, JELLIES, conserves, relishes and chutney, developed through a union of the purple grape and brown spices, create gastronomic delights with a world of flavor, aroma and health-giving qualities. They garnish a meal, they decorate cakes and puddings and they are delicious with plain bread and butter as a snack for the youngsters.

So what about a batch of sweet grape pickle? Wash, stem and drain 10 pounds large, ripe grapes. Place in jams. Boil six pounds sugar, one tablespoon ground cloves, one quart vinegar and one tablespoon ground cinnamon. Pour over grapes while boiling hot and seal at once.

For spiced grape butter, wash 10 cups of grapes, remove stems, separate the pulp from the skins and let stand over night. Heat pulp to boiling point and strain through a colander. Add skins to pulp. Then add eight cups brown sugar, two tablespoons each of ground cloves and ground cinnamon. Boil for one hour then add one cup cider vinegar. Cook until thick, strring constantly. Seal in hot jars.

For grape chutney, add to each two quarts of grapes, two quarts chopped apples, one pound seeded and chopped raisins, seven cups brown sugar, one cup lemon juice. Mix in a preserving kettle and add a bag containing one tablespoon allspice, one-half teaspoon ginger, one tablespoon cloves and one stick of cinnamon. Simmer slowly until mixture is about the consistency of thick sauce, then season with a tablespoon of salt and a little paprika. Seal in hot jars.

Chamois leather gloves will not dry stiff if, after washing, they are rinsed in warm water to which a teaspoon of pure olive oil has been added.

Gloves of Many Colors This Fall

WHEN you take a lady's hand this autumn you'll think she has dipped in into a bucket of bright colored paint. It may be blue, green, red, purple, violet or one of a dozen other shades, thanks to the new vogue of gay little gloves.

Glove counters are the bright spots of the shops these days. It doesn't matter whether you pay a low price or a high one, you can get any color you want. Spicy tones, coronation shades, jewel tints and many another series is represented in the collections.

Pigskins are as brilliant as glace kid and suede, although missing the glossy surface, makes up for this in the vivid hues. Fabrics likewise have joined the colors and are so attractively styled you won't recognize some old favorites.

When a jelly will not set, add a few drops of lemon juice and the difficulty will be overcome.

The Benefits Of Praising a Child's Work

It Brings Feeling of Success and Thus Stimulates Further Effort.

By Angelo Patri

"HERE'S my writing, mother. Isn't it fine?"

"Well, I see you tried. That's something."

"The teacher said it was fine."

"Yes, but look at this 'a.' You left it open at the top."

"O, that was just a little slip. I closed that one."

"And here's a 't' that doesn't touch the line, and look how you crossed it. Why did you slant the line like that? It ought to be traight across, like the lines on the paper. Be more careful next time. You can be a good writer if you try."

"I don't like to write. Can I have a sandwich? Bobbie didn't get a star on his writing paper, and I did."

"Yes, I see. I'm glad you got one. But next time be a little more careful. Do your best to be perfect. I don't like to see mistakes on your paper."

It was a long time before that little boy took another paper to show his mother. She hadn't liked this one. Even the star on the top had failed to win any praise. Bobbie's mother would have shouted her joy in the market place, the whole neighborhood would have known that her Bobbie had a star. Well he wouldn't try for another star as long as they were no good.

—o-o—

LITTLE CHILDREN have to try hard to get a penmanship paper that is good enough to have a star stamped on it. Forming letters is difficult; and getting them to hang together, and stay the right distance from each other, that is hard, too. Their tongues are tired when that paper is handed to the teacher, and their hands feel stiff and sore. But all the fatigue vanishes when the teacher smiles and stamps that star on the top. "Fine. Show that to your mother and see what she says." And all she says is, "Be perfect next time."

The older children have the same problem. They are beginners, and much of their work must show the marks of untrained minds and hands. That is as it should be. Any school child's work should bear the marks of his apprenticeship, not the finish of the master. Work that is the expression of a child's full power should be marked high and praised as worthy.

Any violation of this rule is likely to make trouble. The child who feels his work will not be approved even though it is the best he can do is discouraged and stops trying. Sometimes he is driven to cheating to win the coveted approval. The loss is all the greater for him. Judge a child according to his power and he will increase that power.

"Evil Carries Seed of Own Destruction"

"Love Alone Is Creative, and in End Will Triumph Over Hatred."

By the Rev. J. F. Newton

"ONE question bothers me," writes a young man. "Why is it that hate is more powerful than love in human life? Try it yourself, if you doubt it. Go into any company and state some fact, or present some cause which asks for love and good-will and you will get some sort of response, in a lazy kind of way. But tell them that some one has said a vile thing about their race or religion, and you will see how quickly and solidly a flash of hate will cement them.

"Or take a look at the world today. Twenty years ago if anyone had asked who is Lenin? What is Hitler? Who is Mussolini? no one could have answered. They were unheard of. Yet today they rule a large part of our world by the power of hate. They have done more, one must honestly admit, than a Plato, a St. Francis, or a Darwin. It is the most amazing thing in history, the like of which has not been seen before.

"Christianity has been in the world for 20 centuries, and it has done no end of good. But these men have captured whole nations, and millions of people, not in 20 centuries, but in 20 years! Each has inspired devotion and self-sacrifice which, if we saw it in the church, would fill us with delighted wonder. Each has enthroned himself in the life and thought of a great people, in politics and economics, and even in literature and art. It is perfectly astonishing.

"How was it done, and in so short a time? The answer is that each had thought out a definite view of life and the world. Each was convinced in his own mind that he was right in the principles on which society was meant to live. Each persuaded a few others, and in each case a minority, by the power of hate and so won the way to power.

"Right? Of course not; they are wrong with a terrible and tragic wrongness. That is not the question. My point is that if they had been right, they could not have been more effective. They knew what they wanted, and they did not stop till they got it. They were and are apostles of hate, ruthless and without scruple, but they triumphed!"

—o-o—

ALONGSIDE this forthright letter let me put another from a young English friend—not so young, either, for he served in the World War. He was sent out against the German submarines, was taken prisoner, carried to Germany and was treated well. He and the German commander became friends, and have visited each other since the war. Today he spends most of his time going about England telling people that war is stupid, if not wicked. He is not what one would call a religious man, but he feels deeply about peace—yet he is also bothered.

"I know that war is stupid," he writes, "yet, somehow, I cannot bring myself to take the extreme pacifist attitude—tempted as I often am to do so. I am unable to bring myself to say that I would not fight again, much as I loathe it, under any circumstances whatever. Is it right for a man to refuse to lay down his life for a good cause? Are there not things of more value than life? Do we value life too highly? And yet, am I justified in taking the life of another? These questions trouble me deeply, and so far I have found no satisfactory answer."

They are hard questions, and since my friend has found no answer for himself, very wisely he does not attempt to answer them for anyone else. Nor do I, and for the same reason—especially as regards the last question in the list. But these two letters, each remarkable in its way, do show how the situation today perplexes the best thought and baffles the finest minds among us. For that reason we must be patient and cultivate an understanding and tolerant mind.

—o-o—

THE FIRST letter raises the old, old mystery of the temporary victory of evil and wrong in the world. The writers of the Bible thought about it until it made their heads ache—that is, until they went into the temple, and looked at in the light of the eternal years, judging the days by the ages. Then they said that the triumph of wrong can only be temporary, and that in the end it will be defeated and fall, since it carries in its bosom the seeds of its own destruction.

Yes, hatred is powerful; it works quickly, and seems to be stronger than love at times. But that is only temporary. Love alone is creative, and it has within it unknown powers of resistance and adventure. At the very center of Christian faith stands the Cross, symbol of sorrow and of suffering, but also the promise and potency of a strange power which men call weakness, which, because it can bear all things is undefeatable.

PRESENTING RUBY KEELER -o- -o-

By Margaret Post Niemeyer

as well as screen hits, is of medium height, slender, with reddish brown hair and hazel eyes, and possesses a charming friendliness that completely captivates one.

As I entered she looked up and said with a smile, "I am so glad that you took up that invitation of mine to come to breakfast. Sit right down there." She motioned to a chair placed opposite to her, and went on, "I'll have something fixed for you right away. You won't mind my not getting up, will you? You can see I am pretty well anchored here by this young man, who weighs quite a bit." And she gave Junior a playful shake which delighted him no end.

I told her I had just finished my own breakfast at home but that I had dropped in at the early hour, as she herself had suggested, so that I might be certain of catching her at home, for I did want to go on a personally conducted tour of the estate and to learn something, too, about her own fall wardrobe.

"Oh, I'll be delighted to show you around," said Ruby. "We have been in it such a short time that it is all still pretty thrilling even to Al and me. If you'll just give me a minute or two to finish my breakfast we'll go the rounds."

—o-o—

SO while Miss Keeler was finishing her tea and toast I seated myself on a nearby chair and began to make overtures to Sonny Boy, who is just 18 months old, has some splendid white teeth which he was trying out on a crust of toast, brown wavy hair, and a roguish laugh that he finally bestowed upon me after seriously studying me for some moments. But as his mother and I embarked on the subject of wall paper, color schemes, upholstery materials and so forth, young Mr. Jolson grew restive and his nurse came and led him away to play in the garden. As he toddled forth he looked back, and whether it was intentional or not I really can't say, but he really did give me a decided wink. He is a darling baby!

While Ruby finished her interrupted tea, I had a chance to observe this charming room more closely. It was some 40 feet long by about 18 wide and faced the garden at the south of the house. Windows formed the entire outer wall and they were hung with venetian blinds which were tinted a soft French blue, making a pleasing contrast to the pale yellow walls. The furniture was upholstered in these same two shades, and the floor was mottled marble, in tones of brown, in irregular shapes.

I couldn't possibly imagine a more pleasant place in which to start a day right.

"And now," asked Miss Keeler as she rose from the table, "wouldn't you like to look at our real dining room which, as you can see, adjoins this room" and she led me through an archway into an attractive room having a mulberry colored rug on the floor and at its window draperies of the same shade of yellow as those used in the sunroom. The furniture was of French provincial design in walnut and the wallpaper and wainscoting were French gray, the wallpaper itself being hand decorated with fascinating pastoral and fishing scenes in the French style and in them there again appeared touches of the blue.

We stepped from the dining room out into the entrance hall with its blue-carpeted winding stairway and white ballustrade, and glancing about I observed on a table a bowl of exquisite flowers. Miss Keeler told me that the day before had been her eighth wedding anniversary and that the flowers had been sent by one of her friends. And by one who evidently gave a great deal of thought to their selection, I observed, for they fitted in so perfectly with the color scheme of the house, being white gladioli, blue delphinium and delicate pink carnations.

ACROSS from the dining room was the living room, which looks as though one could and did live in it. The room itself was very large and was carpeted in palest blue, while the walls were covered with cloth and tinted a sort of beige-peach. The upholstery on several of the comfortable looking chairs, although not of the same color, toned in with it perfectly. There was a large open fireplace and over the mantle was a rare piece of tapestry which again picked up the note of French blue which was found also in the border of the window draperies, the center being hand-blocked in pastel floral designs.

"I do want you to see the combination den and bar," Miss Keeler said. "But it is being cleaned up just at present for Al and I had a little party last night at the Trocadero by way of celebrating our anniversary. It was just a little family affair and we went so early that there was not a soul in the place when we arrived, and for a time we had it all to ourselves. It seemed very funny, but soon of course it began to fill up. But we didn't stay late. Came back here for a nightcap, which accounts for the bar having to be straightened up now. Let's sit down here for a moment until it is ready."

This was just the opportunity I had been waiting for, as I had such a lot of things to ask about her clothes and recreations. So I launched right in by asking what sort of things she preferred for daytime wear. "Personally, I don't think there is anything better than sports clothes, especially here in California," said Miss Keeler, "and I am very partial to skirts and sweaters, tweed suits and sports ensembles.

"I have just bought one outfit that is really very nice, I think. There is a green flannel skirt, sort of a forest green in color, and the knitted blouse of the same shade which goes with it has the trickiest new idea in the way of a collar. Normally the collar turns down and it is finished with long, exaggerated pointed ends. The trick comes when you turn the collar up about your throat and gather the two long ends together and tie them ascot fashion, forming a scarf. And to complete this costume there is a tweed jacket, a mixture of grays and greens with green predominating.

"Then for a little dressier sports wear I selected a plain tailored dress of slate blue which has a wide brown suede belt to set it off. This belt is narrow in the back but grows wider towards the front, ending in sort of a diamond at the center, like this," and she placed her finger tips and thumbs together to demonstrate the design.

"This costume, too, has its own coat," Ruby went on, "and it is of the same slate blue material and has a very full back and a small beaver collar. I usually wear a brown felt hat with it."

I knew that my time for questioning Miss Keeler further about her clothes was growing very short, for she had an appointment at her studio.

Looking over the really beautiful home had been so interesting and absorbing that time had simply flown and I'd not asked a single question about Ruby's evening clothes, and they are something for which she is famous for they are always in such good taste. So I asked about them now.

"Suppose we go right up to my room this minute and I can at least show you one or two of my newest ones," she said, and then added with a smile, "I'll just run up ahead and see that things are all right, for it is really pretty early to expect everything to be in apple-pie order." A moment later I heard her say "I'll just close this door, dear," and she called to me to come on up. At the head of the stairway I found a large sunny sitting room and as I entered it she explained that Mr. Jolson had undergone a minor operation a week or so ago and that after his effort of going out to their anniversary dinner the night before he was resting up a little this morning. With a quick glance about this most restful room with its many sofas and deep, luxuriously cushioned chairs we went through a dressing room furnished with every conceivable contrivance to make the ritual of beauty a positive joy. And between this room and Miss Keeler's bed room was her luxuriously equipped bath.

—o-o—

BUT we had come upstairs primarily to see some of Miss Keeler's evening clothes, so instead of fixing further details of her boudoir in my mind I had to focus it on fashions. This did not prove hard to do when Ruby returned from her dressing room with a smart black velvet evening dress, made along Princess lines and trimmed in white kid. "This is one of my most recent purchases," she said as she held it up for my observation. "I like the little upstanding collar of kid, and also the new length sleeves which come just to the bend of the elbow. You see they are quite full but are caught in at the bottom with a band of the leather. It's such a simple frock and yet I think it has quite an air, don't you?"

Indeed I did.

Miss Keeler brought out another dress for me to see. It was a decidedly Frenchy affair of pale blue taffeta with a very full skirt on which velvet flowers of a darker blue were appliqued about half way up the skirt. The bodice, which also had a touch of the deep blue, was cut with an almost square neckline in the front, but was made with a low "V" decolletage in back. With this frock Miss Keeler said she wears either a cape of the deep blue velvet or an ermine wrap.

A knock at the door and the announcement that it was almost time for Miss Keeler to go to the studio brought me to the realization that I must take my leave immediately. But as I rose to go Miss Keeler said, "Oh, but I do want you to have at least a glimpse of the addition which was put on the minute we knew that we were going to adopt 'Sonny Boy.' He has his own nursery, a room for his nurse and a kitchen where all his meals are specially prepared for him. It's his own little kingdom, but he is a very benevolent monarch," she added, happily.

We went down the stairs and as I started from the house Miss Keeler accompanied me as far as the recreation house and the large swimming pool on which it faces. As we passed the wing belonging to her son he spied her out a window. And like any other little boy who sees his mother starting off some place without him, set up a wail of protest.

As I said goodby, I concluded that if one were to see all the interesting things on the estate of the mayor of Encino, he, or she, would not only have to come to breakfast, but stay to a late dinner as well.

Silver Fox

Silver fox remains the darling of fashion, despite the emphasis on other pelts. Shops report that almost every woman wants to try on a silver fox cape, even if she can't afford to buy even a fox scarf. This year more capes have been sold than ever before. Just now the trend is to mount the skins vertically on fabric such as tulle or velvet, and to allow the mounting to show between the pelts, thus giving greater dimensions to the cape. But topping the cape, however luxurious it may be, is the boxy coat that is made entirely of silver fox skins, intended for late afternoon and formal or informal evening wear.

Perfume Balls

The little golden ball which dangles from a bracelet, watch fob or handbag clasp may be more than an ornament. It may be one of those clever trinkets designed to hold perfume. A screw arrangement is provided so that the top can be removed and a bit of one's favorite perfume poured into the tiny container.

Winter Coat

A magician must have had a hand in the fashioning of one winter coat on display in St. Louis. This has a detachable fur-trimmed cape which may be worn as a tunic. The idea may seem impractical when you first hear of it but when you slip into the coat and adjust the detachable part you see how well it works. A two-tone color scheme is provided by the selection of fur in a shade which contrasts with the cloth of the coat.

The Record of A Day in Life of Wanderer

"Highbrow Vagabond" Takes Journey From London to Paris.

By Bruno Lessing.

PARIS, Sept. 26.

RECORD of a day. Just before leaving our London hotel this morning, Bernard M. Baruch rushed in and, after 10 minutes, rushed out again. We have been friends since schooldays, but rarely see each other. I have never reached the stratospheric ether of his success in finance or economics. And he hasn't the faintest idea of the fun I have had out of life. But we both remember that we played leap-frog in the old college in New York. Isn't it strange how the ties of youth strengthen with the years, even without personal contact?

We told each other how well we were looking. (Bernie is about 6 feet 4 inches tall and I'm about 5 feet 9. He always sets my shrimp complex working.) He quickly epitomized his judgment of what's happening in the world today — I know no better judgment — and didn't even take the trouble to ask me not to publish it, because he knew I wouldn't. I'm just writing this to get my editors sore. I have met and known many men in this world. My outstanding impression of Bernie Baruch will always be: Fine character.

WHEN ALL our baggage had left the apartment (of course, it's "luggage" in London) we went downstairs to join it. And we tumbled into a pandemonium. The sidewalk outside the hotel was jammed with people and baggage. It happened to be a day when big steamers were leaving, not only for U. S., but for Australia, South Africa and South America. Mrs. fell into a trance studying the labels on trunks and suitcases that littered the sidewalk. You learn more about geography in London than you do in any city in U. S. I wouldn't even look at a label. My trip to Paris, Venice, Yugoslavia and Greece is a mere week-end jaunt compared to the journeys which, I knew, those labels foreshadowed. And my Wanderlust is bad enough without getting excited.

Anyway, we got two taxis—one for us and one for the junk that we carried—and reached Victoria Station. There, a porter told us we couldn't take all that mess on the train with us. We would have to "check" some of it. Which meant excess baggage because I had already sent a trunk for Mrs. on our tickets. The stationmaster told us the same thing. So I said, haughtily, "Send for Mr. Elliott." He's the big shot in the railroad company. I never met him, but I once had a letter of introduction to him. It worked like magic. They would not have dared to bother Mr. Elliot about such a trivial matter, but the mere fact that I claimed to know him made them gasp.

Of course, I felt like a fraud. And I've got to call up Mr. Elliot some day and explain and apologize. But, dammit, the greatest part of this junk that we were carrying were typewriters and books and stationery necessary for these articles. And I've always said a nice word for England.

THE RIDE from London to Dover is sheer delight. Through some of England's loveliest countryside. The hop fields of Kent were in full bloom. A portent of frabjous joy. Flowers everywhere and lots of sheep in training to become good chops and roasts.

At Dover we had to stand in the passport line to check out of England. Two American girls were ahead of us and the inspector asked them, "What's your London address?" "We haven't got any," said one of the girls. "We're Americans." But that inspector had to have some address to fill out his report. "Where were you last night?" he asked. Being in a merry mood I butted in and said, "Say, old man, that's an awful question to ask a young lady." He was a nice young chap and he blushed, but he laughed and the girls laughed and Mrs. laughed and he said, "Give me the name of any hotel." And then I had to laugh and the others seemed to become embarrassed. Mrs. said to me, "Fresh!"

SPENT MOST of the time from Dover to Calais in the little bar. Fred Connors, the chief steward, is an old friend. He "pointed with pride" to a bunch of silver cups which the crew of his ship had won in athletic contests. Told me about each event—time, respective finish of the contestants, etc., but always omitted to tell what it was all about. When, out of politeness, I asked, "Cricket?" he said, "No, rowing." When I asked, "Rowing?" he said, "No, Tug-of-war." In the line of sports I'm a flop. I can't understand why a man wants to run faster than a horse or jump higher than a kangaroo.

In Calais had to pay porters $1.75 to carry our suitcases and bundles from the boat to the train. But they were not allowed to put them on the train. That's the job of another man, who cost me 60 cents more. This second man, however, did not travel with the train. In Paris, a trainman got 50 cents for putting the baggage on the platform and the station porters who carried it to a taxi got one dollar more. A great system. Maybe, some day, I'll tell them to keep the baggage.

FACING the FACTS

By Helen Jameson

MUSCLES like to work and play. They weren't made to rest against soft cushions. Give them daily exercise and they telephone cheerful greetings to the whole physical outfit. They tell the digestive organs to function normally. They have the blood streams on the jump, and jumping blood streams mean more to the complexion than anything else. They make the lungs laugh. They chase away grouches and the blue devils. Yet there are women to whom the word "exercise" causes gooseflesh. Lazy louts!

When a woman who is in normal health finds that she has lost her appetite, doesn't sleep well, has fallen into a ditch of depression or the whining habit, there is a quick cure for her. She should get out a pail, fill it with water and wash the windows. Or get down on her knees and scrub the kitchen floor. These are not dainty forms of exercise, to be sure, but they do do something. They produce perspiration. Some women need to perspire for the good of their bodies and their complexions.

—o-o—

MANY WOMEN who live in hotels and apartments and do nothing grow old quickly. No exercise. They get fat and bored, lots of them. They kill time, which is a tough job. The modern home, equipped with mechanical contrivances, doesn't offer enough hard vigorous work to keep a woman in condition. The business girl is sadly lacking in an understanding of the need of a daily muscle workout. Come on now, pretty loafers, and get active.

You don't have to chop wood or thump a punching bag. There are simple means of keeping in form. One of the best is the jumping rope. We wouldn't suggest it to the decrepit or middle-aged because it chugs up a rapid heart action. But for anyone under 45 it's an elegant way of making oneself nimble and resilient of fibers.

It's fun, too. Do your jumps casualy at first. Stop as soon as you feel tired. After a time speed up. Jump with one foot on the floor. That's more difficult. Fling the rope backward instead of forward. That's a change. Lots of different ways of skipping.

—o-o—

NO PART of the body is inactive. Arms and legs are in movement, but the greatest benefits come from the pull at the mid-section. Those interlacing muscles between the ribs and the hip bones have a mean way of going slack after the thirtieth birthday. Shameful of them, but what can you expect when they are allowed to soldier on the job?

Every time you pick up anything from the floor watch how you do it. Bend at the hips. That pulls in the tummy muscles.

Take the button box, throw the contents on the floor. Pick up the buttons one by one. Bend at the hips, keep the legs rigid. Maybe you won't be able to get the buttons that way. You can know then that you are in need of figure molding. The woman whose muscles haven't gone flabby should be able to bend, keep her legs rigid, place her palms almost flat on the floor. Try it. You'll let out ouch, I'll bet. The hurt will be at the back of your knees. But keep trying. It will be good for you.

Muff Arrangement

A plastron of fur on the front of a coat cleverly ends with a muff arrangement. The fur is mink, its brown surface contrasting with the black haircloth of the wrap. The muff idea is provided by looping up the fur below the waistline so that it makes a concealed pocket. When you aren't using this novel arrangement to keep your hands warm it flattens into a vestee effect.

When boiling ham, add a teaspoon of vinegar and some brown sugar to the water. This will improve the flavor of the meat and make it more tender.

Bolero Suits

THERE may not be much warmth in those new bolero costume suits but who cares about warmth in comparison to style? The short jackets hit you at the waistline at the front and are slightly longer at the back. They usually are made of fur and lined with the wool of which the skirt and perhaps the entire frock is made.

A stunning suit with this bolero wrap combines mole, dark green wool and matching satin. The top part of the frock is of the satin while lower blouse section and gored skirt are of the wool material. Another interesting combination is of coronation blue wool and gray Persian lamb, the style similar to the one described except that the entire tailored frock is of the blue wool fabric.

Germany's Economic Conquest Of Balkans Follows Storm Stirred Up by Sanctions Against Italy

Dr. Schacht's Scheme Provides for Developing Raw Materials and Paying for Goods With Armaments.

By a Special Correspondent of the Manchester Guardian.
BELGRADE, Yugoslavia.

WHILE Italy was attempting to demonstrate her naval and aerial strength during the inglorious chapter of the Abyssinian conflict, Germany, more subtle, took advantage of the preoccupation of the Powers in the Mediterranean in order to push forward a clever scheme of economic conquest in the Balkans. It is an ill wind that blows no good to someone, and Germany was determined to profit by the storm which was aroused by sanctions against Italy.

Germany's ambitions in the Balkans are by no means new. If cautious Prince Bismarck declared that he was not ready to sacrifice the life of a single Pomeranian grenadier for a Balkan country, this warning was not heeded by his successors. The Germany of the second Wilhelm era took an active interest in the affairs of the Near East and also of the Balkans. Almost from the beginning of the accession of Wilhelm II to the throne Germany began to prepare a southward route, and to attain this aim she maintained a policy friendly to the Turkish sultan.

Berlin-Bagdad Railway.

The Berlin-Bagdad railway and the "Mitteleuropa" plan of Prof. Naumann were all in pursuit of this policy. The defeat in the Great War brought a sad end to these ambitions, but, despite a stagnation in its practical application, the idea did not fade in the minds of those who ruled Germany. Having learned from past experience, however, she adapted the means and methods of gaining influence in those parts to modern conditions.

During its early days National Socialist Germany concentrated primarily on gaining the friendship of Yugoslavia and Greece. The journey to Dalmatia by the then leader of the Nazi Storm Troops, Capt. Ernst Roehm, was for this purpose; and this journey was followed by the more important and successful trip of Gen. Goering to Dalmatia and to Belgrade. At this time Yugoslavia's northern neighbor, Austria, had already come under Italian tutelage. Germany coveted this German-speaking country, but Italian opposition to the absorption of Austria by Germany had brought Germany and Italy into a somewhat strained situation, and, inasmuch as Yugoslavia regarded Italy as her arch-enemy, a German-Yugoslav friendship was by no means unwelcome in Belgrade, despite the existing French alliance and the friendship with the Little Entente countries. Herr Franz von Papen nurtured this nicely budding friendship, even to the extent, it is said (though confirmation is lacking), of promising to Yugoslavia the Slovenian parts of Carinthia should an Anschluss (union) be effected between Germany and Austria.

German Influence in Greece.

Almost parallel with the ascent to power of National Socialists in Germany went a change of regime in Greece, where the long and successful rule of the Liberal Premier Venizelos had been replaced by the regime of Tsaldaris, the Royalist leader of the Populist party. Venizelos was a friend of the old entente; Tsaldaris was pro-German to the backbone. He proudly told me once that he was educated in Leipzig and that he highly appreciated and esteemed German culture. This pro-German mentality of the Greek Premier greatly helped the progress of German influence in Athens.

But despite the strong pro-German sympathies in political and army quarters in both Yugoslavia and Greece, the friendship with Germany for some time made comparatively slow progress. And as soon as the first elan of National Socialist Germany had spent itself the rulers of Berlin began to listen to the more cautious Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, President of the Reichsbank, whose theory was that economic penetration must precede the political conquest. The lack of foreign exchange in Germany, however, compelled that power to draft an entirely new economic policy.

Managed Economics.

At the beginning of 1935 Germany was already engaged in completing her rearmament at the highest speed. To provide means for the purchase of the most necessary raw materials for her industries a scheme of carfeully calculated Planwirtschaft (managed economics) was evolved. This planned economy included a scheme for the acquisition of the necessary raw materials from abroad. The lack of foreign exchange made it difficult to acquire raw materials from the United States or from Great Britain as well as from the French possessions. Germany's foreign trade, which amounted to about 500,000,000 marks a month, supplied in the past about 20 per cent of the requirements of the State, while the rest was devoted to private industry; today it is the reverse; 80 per cent of the foreign trade is in the service of rearmament. But as the countries whose trade systems required payment by the aid of foreign exchange were gradually closed to her Germany realized that the Balkans might become a potential source for her raw material supply.

Dr. Schacht's Plan.

In the Balkans there was no need to pay with the scarce and rare Devisen (bill of exchange) and Valuten (foreign exchange). The calculations of Dr. Schacht were subtle and clever. Ever since 1928 the Balkan countries have suffered from a severe economic depression, especially because of the fall of agricultural prices. Moreover, Dr. Schacht knew that these countries possessed still unexploited resources which might benefit German industries both in peace and war.

In his schemes Dr. Schacht was helped by two factors. First, by the fact that the political friend of the Balkan countries, France, is an almost self-sufficing country as far as agricultural products are concerned, and, second, by the slow effects of the recommendations of the Stresa conference of September, 1932. So long as France was able and willing to open her cash-boxes to her allies and provide them with large armament loans, her influence over these countries prevailed. But when the crisis of 1931 made the French banks more cautious and the loans to these countries were cut, her strongest hold ceased to be of any practical value. The crisis of 1931 and its subsequent consequences taught the world that it is not the creditor but the debtor who is the master of the situation — and France was a creditor nation. She was unable to buy agricultural produce from these countries, and her influence rapidly waned. As the sanctions which arose out of the Italian-Abyssinian conflict had ruined Italy as a potential customer in the Balkans, especially in Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey, the road was open to Dr. Schacht.

How Germany Benefited.

The Stresa recommendations have also come to his aid. While in 1932 these recommendations were made with a special view to choke Germany's ambitions in these parts, now Dr. Schacht knew how to benefit by them. The preferential tariffs recommended for the agricultural goods benefited Germany as thge largest pur-

Scientists Declare Change in Economic Trends Essential

AGRARIAN SOUTH MUST BE REBUILT

Otherwise It Will Become Exhausted 'Colony' of the Nation

Increase in Number of Tenant Farmers and Rise of Demagogues Among Poor and Ignorant Source of Danger, Prof. Howard Odum Thinks.

Much to Indicate Natural Resources of Southern States Capable of Greater Development if Economic Waste Is Eliminated.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.

A GROUP of Southern economists has weighed the South in the balance and while in general the economists have not declared it wanting, their conclusion, based on an inventory of its natural resources, its people, its culture and its economic equipment, is that unless present economic and social trends are changed, the Southeastern region will become an exhausted "colony" of the rest of the nation costing more than it is worth.

The findings of these forward-looking Southerners who sought to learn without prejudice the best and the worst of their own region have been incorporated in a 650-page definitive volume titled "Southern Regions," by Prof. Howard W. Odum of the University of North Carolina for the Southern Regional Committee of the Social Science Research Council.

Deplorable Poverty in Midst Of Possible Abundance.

For the South the Odum book is what the Brookings Institution's studies on national wealth and income are for the whole country. In exhibition a realistic and comprehensive picture of Southern conditions, it presents deplorable poverty in the midst of possible abundance, and citing the rapid rise of Southern demagogues it warns the rest of the nation that unless the present sufferings of the 5,000,000 tenant farmers and their millions of unskilled labor are cared for, the political and economic life of the entire nation will be degraded and perhaps imperiled.

Odum's monumental study is a technical work of charts, graphs and complex data, offered primarily to the social scientist. It has been summarized in a pamphlet by Prof. Rupert B. Vance, also of the University of North Carolina, for popular distribution by the Public Affairs Committee, a non-profit making group of public spirited men, whose activities are financed by the Falk Foundation of Pittsburgh. This foundation also provided the funds for the Brookings study of the capacity of Americans to produce and to consume. The title of Vance's summary is "The South's Place in the Nation."

How Demagogues Can Make Honest Ignorance a Menace.

Commenting on the political future of the Southeastern region, in which Odum includes Louisiana and Arkansas as more Southeastern than Southwestern, Vance says:

"The region appears equally capable of making the best or the worst of all possible contributions to the national life in the coming generation. Honest, God-fearing folk, ignorant and poor can be dangerous. The Southeast has 600 counties without library facilities of any kind. Here is fertile soil for the ignorant and the loud-mouthed demagogue. The late Huey Long gave warning that economic issues are open to an agitation every whit as effective as that of white supremacy. He also showed that a Southern state may be organized into as tight a little dictatorship as any South American republic, while business goes on as usual."

Odum gives other demagogic senatorial examples, including Jeff Davis of Arkansas, James K. Vardaman of Mississippi, Cole Blease of South Carolina, Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi, Tom Watson of Georgia and Tom Heflin of Alabama. Odum might have mentioned that Long's imitator, Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, aspired to the Senate this year, but his local dictatorship was not as efficient as Huey's at vote-getting, and he was defeated by Senator R. B. Russell Jr., who comes from a family of political office-holders.

Huey Long's Harangue Making Virtue of Ignorance.

Odum quotes a priceless excerpt from one of Long's harangues in the Senate to show how the Southern demagogue plays on the ignorance of the voter by praising ignorance as a virtue. Long had one of the quickest minds in public life, and whatever else he might have been he was not ignorant. Yet here is what he shouted on the Senate floor:

"I am an ignorant man. I have had no college education. I have not even had a high school education. But the thing that takes me far in politics is that I do not have to color what comes into my mind and into my heart. I say it unvarnished. I have not the learning to do otherwise, and therefore my ignorance is not often detected. I know the hearts of the people because I have not colored my own. I know when I am right in my own conscience. I do not talk one way back there in the hills of Louisiana and another way here in the Senate. I have one language. Ignorant as it is, it is the universal language within the sphere in which I operate. Its simplicity gains pardon for my lack of letters and education."

Social Scientists' Solutions for Farm Problems

THE scientists offer their own plan for agriculture, which would include the following steps:

(1) Some readjustment of the present tenant system.

(2) Provisions for an adequate credit system.

(3) Readjustment and redistribution of the present crop land uses, with some new crops and a very large increase in ratio of food and feed crops.

(4) Methods for raising the standard of consumption of commodities by the Southern people, both in the rural areas and in the cities.

(5) Arrangements whereby interregional exchange and trade may be promoted.

(6) An economy which will enable the farmer to spend his cash money for needed goods rather than for commercial fertilizer and food and feed supplies.

(7) Some way to increase the technical facilities whereby the production and processing of commodities may be more effective.

(8) Some practical means for adding to the technical comforts and conveniences of farm and home.

(9) Some method for the redistribution of submarginal lands and people within present sub-regional areas rather than wholesale retirement of lands and shifting of people.

(10) New arrangements for increasing agricultural exports.

Talmadge of Georgia tried to imitate Huey's platform technique but he does not have Huey's mind. He was able, however, to reach the governorship by such tactics and he did wangle contributions from the du Ponts and other Eastern capitalists.

Two-Crop System and Tenant Farming Drawbacks.

Odum finds that the basic troubles with the Southeast are its dependence on cotton or tobacco as the cash crop, and the feudal tenant-farmer system. Five years ago the late Alexander Legge, then head of the International Harvester Co., told the writer that if the truth could be learned about the cotton production of the Soviet Union, actual and potential, it would be the most important story for the United States to come out of Russia.

"If the Russians actually produce the amount of cotton they are talking about," Legge said, "they will change the entire economy of our Southern states. Our South will have to turn to other crops. Now if there are two good cash cotton crops, not even tomatoes or potatoes will be planted the third year."

The Soviet Union has not yet produced the cotton then predicted, but Texas, Oklahoma, Argentina and China have become disrupting factors. The Southeast, however, has refused to change its economy to meet changed conditions.

'Landscape of Dilemmas' in Agrarian South.

"The picture of the cotton-tobacco agrarian South," Odum says, "may almost be described as a landscape of dilemmas. The tenant type bordering on poverty and hopelessness is only one. The instability that comes from great mobility and lack of purpose on the part of millions of citizens is another problem. Disgracefully low standards of housing follow a logical shiftlessness and irresponsibility. Instability of prices and income, speculation and tragedy of lost fortunes, lack of capital for efficient farm management and machinery, the low standard of wages due partly to the Negro, the debtor character of the Southern economy—these and others cry out for a more adequate analysis and long-time planning.

Decline of Exports Raises Serious Problem.

The region's dilemmas are increased by the falling off of exports and the trend toward economic nationalism. Sixty per cent of the cotton and perhaps a fourth of the tobacco grown are normally exported. This falling off of exports itself offers multiple dilemmas. It may deprive the South of its place in the world markets. It will certainly throw the South back into intolerable deficiency of income, throwing 1,500,000 farm families tragically out of gear and forfeiting millions of dollars in equipment and good will. On the other hand, if there should be maximization of exports and domestic demand, the South will resort to new highs in production and consequent drain of land and people, slaves to the one-crop system.

There is, moreover, the dilemma of ineffective competition with Southwestern cotton culture, or inventions which may make cotton less exclusively necessary for world markets. Still other dilemmas envisage a better machine cultivation and harvesting which will throw millions out of employment and the spectacle of an already over-populated rural cotton South unable to absorb any of the stranded folk set free from city and industry. To these are added the great agrarian discontent, partly due to the cumulative plight of the depression years with the cotton farmers few dollars worth about 42 cents each, and none left to pay taxes, debts and interest, or to recoup his depreciated tools and buildings.

South Has One-Third of Country's Farm Families.

Odum points to the 2,000,000 cotton-farm families in the Southeast, and observes that they constitute nearly a third of all the farm families in the nation.

"Over half of these farm families in the Southeast," he says, "are tenants and their number and ratio are increasing. White tenancy is increasing faster than Negro. In some of the sub-regions of the Southeast the proportion of tenants is much larger than the average of about 50 per cent. Thus, in the Delta it is 90 per cent; in the Red River bottoms it is 80 per cent; in the Bluffs it is 75 per cent; in the Black Belt, 73 per cent; in the Cotton Piedmont, 64 per cent; in the Interior Plain, 61 per cent, and in the Southern Cotton and Tobacco sub-region, 60 per cent. In at least 10 of the sub-regions white tenancy averages more than 50 per cent."

What is happening in the Southeast has happened in a lesser degree throughout the nation. Until about 1880 tenant farming was held down by the availability of good public lands for homesteading. In 1880 only about 25 per cent of all farms were operated by tenants. By 1900 this had increased to 35 per cent, by 1920 to 38 per cent and by 1930 to 42.4 per cent.

Increase of Share-Croppers Rouses Interest of Congress.

This alarming increase in farm tenancy, particularly among share-croppers, was responsible for the Bankhead Farm-Tenant bill which passed the Senate last session and died in the House Committee on Agriculture. It is also responsible for the recent letter of President Roosevelt to Senator Bankhead of Alabama and Representative Jones of Texas leaders of the Democratic farm blocs in Congress, urging them to be prepared to discuss a new farm tenant bill with him next December. It was also responsible for Gov. Landon's declaration in Des Moines that he favored long time Government financing for "family-type" farms. Politics, as usual, is following economics, and the deplorable conditions in the South are now forcing their attention on Congress and the rest of the country.

Odum and Vance see no great hope that the Southeast can balance its agricultural economy with industry and unlike Gov. White of Mississippi they do not see salva-

Victory for Fascists in Spain Likely to Realign Europe and Put England and France in Tight Spot

Rebel Successes Looked on as Possible Torch Which Would Fire Continent With War in All Four Corners.

By ALBIN E. JOHNSON,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.

IF the Spanish rebels win, and their chances seem bright at this moment, it may be well that Spain, not Germany or Italy, will be the torch that sets Europe ablaze in the next war. Germany, of course, would be involved, and so would Italy—and England, France, Russia and other countries—and battle fronts would be found in all four corners of Europe. The struggle, however, would be between political doctrines and economic forces rather than a clash of national interests and racial animosities.

The most dangerous international element in the Spanish civil war is the fact that Generals Francisco Franco and Emilio Mola could not possibly win without outside help. It has already been proved that Italian, German and Portuguese munitions, airplanes and war materials, to say nothing of the services of foreign pilots, bolstered the insurgent cause, while African Moors and Foreign Legionnaires are the backbone of the rebel army.

Having won over what comprises perhaps 85 per cent of the civilian population of the country, it will be difficult for the rebels to rule without continued aid from outside. The common people of Spain will not soon forget that Moslem mercenaries and foreign professional fighters, armed by Italian Fascist and German Nazi funds, subjugated them. After the use of Foreign Legionnaires and Moors against the Asturian miners two years ago a revulsion swept Spain which brought about the overwhelming victory of the Common Front at the polls. The Rebel government, if it wins, will have a hostile population to govern.

Rebel's Obligations.

That will mean further commitments to Italy and Germany, and perhaps Portugal, for which the Spaniards will have to pay dearly, and whatever Spain pays to Germany or Italy in ceded colonies or territory, or political assistance, will be of considerable concern to England and France. That Rome and Berlin will demand diplomatic support from Madrid in their claims for re-distribution of colonies and raw materials, is a foregone conclusion. It is widely reported that the Italians have been promised the Balearic Islands which have great naval strategic value in relation to Gibraltar. Apparently authentic information discloses that Mussolini has sent military officials to Majorca and Minorca to size up the situation. The Germans make no secret of their aspirations to territory in Spanish Morocco, which dominates the African shore of the straits of Gibraltar. As an airplane base, both for commercial trans-Atlantic flying and for military purposes, the region around Cueta is invaluable.

An extra-European development which may be expected if a German-Italian-Spanish Fascist bloc is formed, may be the joint recognition by this group of Japan's claims in the Far East, the independence of Manchoukuo and Tokio's special interests in Northern China. Being anti-Russian as well as anti-Communist, the dictatorial group is anxious to have the friendship and support of an anti-Russian and militaristic Japan. There is good reason for thinking that both Rome and Berlin already have "understandings" with Tokio. One of Japan's most astute statesmen, former Foreign Minister Yoshizawa, is now on his way to Europe on what may be an important political mission.

France and Great Britain, bulwarks of European democracy, are viewing developments with steadily increasing concern. There are indications that England has about reached the limit of its concessions to Italy. France is still playing its proverbial role, trying to match both ends against the center. In the Ethiopian crisis the Italian Fascists had the British Foreign Office at their mercy because Mussolini was willing to risk all, even war, rather than back down. He had no alternative. Also Il Duce knew that England would not take a chance on a battle in the Mediterranean against Italy's submarines, torpedo boats and airplanes. He knew that England could not afford "to lose half her fleet," which is what might have happened.

British Learned Lesson.

The British learned a lesson when they went into the World War half prepared. After they have spent the two billion dollars appropriated for defense they may look at matters differently than they did last autumn. At that time both the Foreign Office and Admiralty held that discretion was the better part of valor and swallowed their pride in the face of a reckless, boasting Mussolini. The result is that today most of Ethiopia is Italian and Mussolini is master of the Mediterranean, temporarily. Thus Italians cut clean across the vital interests of both France and England. Neither country can afford to give up control of the inland sea; Britain because of Empire communications and France because of the necessity of having free access to her North African colonies.

If Spain goes Fascist there will be an entirely new alignment in the Mediterranean, and also on the continent, and it will not be to either France's or England's advantage. Italy and Germany will stand to gain—and Spain will hold the sack.

All of which partly explains several significant political developments of the last few days: Sir Samuel Hoare has made a blunt statement on naval policy, Foreign Minister Anthony Eden is active at Geneva and King Edward visited the Balkans and Turkey. In an official statement after his inspection of Mediterranean naval bases, Sir Samuel, now First Lord of the Admiralty, and probably Britain's next Premier, said:

"Far from there being any question of our abdicating our position in the Mediterranean, or scuttling Malta (which has been made a Crown colony) we intend to face the new and difficult problems which are arising and to make our position quite secure in the future. . . ."

At Geneva, after a half-hearted effort to persuade the Ethiopians to give up their seat in the League Assembly, Foreign Minister Eden made it clear that Britain didn't care whether Mussolini's prestige was preserved or not, nor whether Italy remained away from the Council or League Assembly.

The government-controlled Italian press is still fuming over King Edward's supposed slight, both to Italy and Germany. King Edward drank cocktails up and down the Adriatic, visited Austria, Jugoslavia and Greece and took tea with Kemal Ataturk. But he never once set foot on Italian soil. His invitation to the Turkish president to visit England especially angered the Italians who accuse Britain of trying to form an anti-Italian bloc of the states bordering on the Mediterranean. The Italians have not forgiven London for making it possible for the Turks, without denunciation of a treaty, to fortify the Dardanelles and their island possessions in the Aegean Sea.

One other development, soft-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Wine Makers of Hermann.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE picturesque town of Hermann, Mo., with its unmistakable imprint of the Rhine of old Germany, in celebrating its centennial lately, called attention to its wine industry of bygone days, but little was said to reveal with what fine inspiration its grape growers and wine makers worked. After all, it was the quality and not the quantity that made its wines equal to the finest in Europe, eagerly sought by the New York wine trade.

Nowhere in this country was the fine art of blending to bring wines to the highest state of smell and taste developed as at Hermann. And when existing varieties of grapes failed to meet the exacting demands of those astute pioneers, they tackled plant breeding to create the grapes of their dreams. Now plant breeding is so intricate, so uncertain of exact measurement, that today it is rarely undertaken by individuals.

Yet Hermann and the outlying grape district had men equal to the occasion. Nicholas Grein created his famous Missouri Riesling varieties and Jacob Rommell brought from his hybrids Elvira, a wine grape that reached the pinnacle of popularity in due time. George Husmann, who later became chief viticulturist for the United States Department of Agriculture, and his neighbors, put the then untried Virginia seedling through rigid tests and found it supreme for making a rich, red wine.

Incidentally, Husmann was the first man in America officially to measure the per acre yield of any crop by the gallon. In the first annual report of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture back in 1865, Husmann reported that the Concord grape that year yielded 1200 gallons an acre, Catawba 250 gallons, Virginia seedling 700 gallons, Clinton 1000 gallons and Herbemont 1000 gallons.

Our leading experiment stations, with unlimited means for investigational work, have never improved on some of the vineyard practices of those amazing German pioneers of Gasconade County. The technique of grafting new varieties on old vines that is today in use at the New York experiment station is the identical method used at Hermann years ago.

Were not those pioneers worthy of the name? GUY TRAIL.

Uncle Goes on a Spree.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

JOHN Q. MERCHANT sat in his store checking up on his day's business, when in walked a tall, stately man. "Good evening, Uncle," said John. "Good evening," said Uncle. "By the way, John, I feel an urge to spend some money, so I will just take $100 out of your cash register and put my I O U in its place."

Uncle had sold a bond, precisely as he sold them to bankers in 1935 and 1936. Each year Uncle took $3 out of John's pocket and put it in John's cash register to pay interest.

A few years pass and John Jr. now runs the store. As he sits counting his day's receipts, the old Uncle comes in. "Good evening, Junior," said he. "I am glad to see you have some money there, for I have a note to take up; it is for $100. As I have the power to tax you, I will take $100 from that pile of bills, put it in your cash register and tear up my I O U. Thank goodness, that part of my budget is balanced."

Junior: "Gosh, what about my own budget? Dad told me that Uncle went on a spree, but I never imagined that I would have to pay for it years afterward."

Appreciation of an Editorial.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THROUGH extracts from other papers, reprinted in our own, we are enabled to learn the viewpoint of various publications. Quite often we see something from your paper. I want to express my appreciation of one of these: your tribute to Senator Norris, entitled "Grand Old Man," which appeared on the editorial page of the Dayton Daily News of Sept. 20. F. M. Taxing Publicly Owned Utilities.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I HAVE been surprised that no editorial comment has been made by the Post-Dispatch on the fact, revealed in the story of the meeting of the Third World Power Conference held in Washington recently, that in Great Britain publicly owned utilities pay state and local taxes exactly as though they were privately owned.

In your full and well-written report of the proceedings of the conference, attention is directed to this remarkable attitude toward taxation by the speech of H. C. Lamb, chief engineer and manager of the city of Manchester's Electricity Department.

Don't you think that we shall in this country have to adopt the same sort of bookkeeping before we can take over the utilities and operate them successfully? Of course, it is all a matter of bookkeeping, taking money out of one pocket and putting it in another, but don't you think it the proper way to deal with the public? Wouldn't the present moment be a good opportunity to take up and discuss this angle of taxation and its relation to publicly owned utilities?

JAMES C. MOFFET.

For President, Not Mr. Roosevelt

In the simplest possible terms, the overshadowing issue in the coming national election is whether or not we shall set up in America, in defiance of the American tradition and in defiance of the plain intent of the Constitution as it now stands, a government with vast and centralized authority over the economic life of the nation.

On that issue, the Post-Dispatch, believing as it does in an economy of free enterprise, under the political forms of our federal system of government, cannot support Mr. Roosevelt for re-election to the presidency.

All the other issues of the campaign are subordinate to or embraced in this great issue. In its pre-eminence and its high importance to the country it resembles the silver issue that divided the Democratic party in the heyday of Bryanism. But it strikes infinitely deeper than that issue. It goes to the roots of the system of checks and balances, of judicial review to protect the rights of the citizen, of the constitutional division of powers between the states and the Federal Government—to the roots, in short, of the system of government created by the Constitution.

That Constitution is open to amendment in the way that it provides. It must not be amended by subterfuge and indirection. The Roosevelt administration has attempted so to amend it. In this it has done an intolerable thing, for which it should be rebuked at the polls, as it has already been repeatedly rebuked by the Supreme Court.

The question, to repeat, is whether we shall continue under the present constitutional system—a system of which free competition is an integral and necessary part—or whether we shall substitute for it a Federal bureaucracy with the unrestrained power to impose its fiats upon the daily affairs of the citizen. Such a bureaucracy not only destroys economic freedom, but must in the end, if it is to succeed, destroy political freedom.

While opposing the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt, we give him full credit for the courage he displayed in the dark days of March, 1933; full credit for high-minded and patriotic endeavor to improve the lot of the common man. We have approved and continue to approve a substantial part of his program. We believe that social gains have been made that should be consolidated and carried on—that will, we are convinced, be carried on, such is the compelling force of events, by whatever administration may be voted into power next November. We do not subscribe to the vituperative criticism which has been heaped upon the President, though we believe that much of this is the result of his own too frequent imputing of unworthy motives to his opponents.

But the evils inherent in the central philosophy which guides the Roosevelt administration outweigh its good achievements. These evils are expressed specifically in the waste and extravagance of the administration; in the hasty improvisation of measures to meet a real or fancied emergency and the subsequent attempts to make them permanent; in the building up at Washington of a government not of laws but of men, men working often at cross-purposes, to the unsettlement of the whole national economy and the confusion of the public mind; in administrative inefficiency, so that even worthy measures are in danger of being discredited; in the growth of the spoils system and its use in a manner not justified by any prior conception of the practical needs of political parties; in the mounting national debt and the lightness with which it is regarded; in the cavalier attitude of the administration toward the restraints imposed by the Constitution; in the weak-kneed surrender of Congress to the demands of the Executive.

All these things are being exploited, and properly so, as issues in the campaign; but the dominant, the all-embracing issue, as we have said, is created by the steady "march of Federal empire" away from the economic and political system on which the country has been built. The march is toward a bureaucracy of centralized powers undreamed of not alone by the founders of the nation but even by the makers of the Democratic platform of 1932, to which the President subscribed "100 per cent." The party whose livery the President wears is not the Democratic party as it existed down to the present administration. That fact in itself does not necessarily damn the new doctrines, but it gives a hollow ring to the call for support of Mr. Roosevelt on the ground of old party loyalties. Mr. Roosevelt cannot be sincerely supported save as the exponent of a philosophy of government at war with the basic concepts of the Democratic party.

The party today, under Mr. Roosevelt, burns its incense before strange gods.

The rights of the states? Away with them! They belong to the horse-and-buggy era.

The Constitution? It is something to be got around, so that we may have the more abundant life.

The Supreme Court? "Nine old men" barring the onward march to Utopia.

Economy in government? An outmoded idea.

Checks and balances in government? Forget them. Mr. Roosevelt knows what is good for the country. In the words of Mr. Roosevelt to Congress in January of this year: "We have built up new instruments of public power. In the hands of a people's government, this power is wholesome and proper." Mr. Roosevelt asks the country to write him, as the head of this "people's government" with its "new instruments of public power," a blank check for the future. That was the central theme of his eloquent address in accepting the nomination at Philadelphia.

We base our opposition to Mr. Roosevelt not so much on the errors of his administration as on the direction, or drift, of the philosophy that controls it. We believe that the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt would be construed by him as a mandate to go forward on the road he has chosen; that even if it were not so construed, he would be driven forward on that road by certain powerful forces that are supporting him for re-election.

We can only judge the future by the past. What does the record show? NRA, with its control over commerce and industry ramifying down to the New Jersey pants presser, was put through Congress as an emergency measure. Its life was limited by the Recovery Act to two years. Yet at the time the Supreme Court killed it—after it had been condemned in the court of public opinion—the administration was pressing for its continuance. The President has never accepted as final the decision of the Supreme Court in the NRA case, notwithstanding it was rendered by unanimous vote, the so-called liberals of the court concurring fully with the so-called conservatives. The death of NRA was deplored by the President in the famous "horse and buggy" interview. Again his attitude was made clear in his support of the Guffey-Snyder Act—later also to be killed by the court—which proposed to create, in effect, a little NRA for the coal industry. So devoted was he to the Guffey Act that he wrote to a congressional committee expressing the hope that it would "not permit doubts as to constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation." The President has repeatedly given evidence that he would like a new interpretation of the commerce clause to permit the Federal Government to set up controls over industry which are now forbidden.

What would it mean to the country if the NRA philosophy should be made effective? The Supreme Court answered in the NRA decision:

> If the commerce clause were construed to reach all enterprises and transactions which could be said to have an indirect effect upon interstate commerce, the Federal authority would embrace practically all the activities of the people and the authority of the State over its domestic concerns would exist only by sufferance of the Federal Government.

The court further said:

> It is not the province of the court to consider the economic advantages or disadvantages of such a centralized system. It is sufficient to say that the Federal Constitution does not provide for it. (Italics ours.)

There has been no confession of error with respect to NRA. The Baltimore speech of the President in April showed continued adherence to the NRA philosophy, and the acceptance speech breathed a spirit of continued opposition to the present restraints. Yet the President has never defined in plain language the direction in which he would take the country. Evasion marks the attitude both of the Democratic platform and of Mr. Roosevelt toward the great issue of the campaign. Mr. Roosevelt would take us forward. He would lead us into green pastures and beside the still waters. He would bring the more abundant life. These are fine phrases, but what do they mean?

Plainly the President chafes under constitutional restraints. But he has proposed no amendment to the Constitution, though the decision in the NRA case showed that the central philosophy of the New Deal is repugnant to the Constitution and cannot be validated in an orderly way within the Constitution as now written. Candor on the part of the President would have caused the party to propose an amendment. He has chosen instead the way of political expediency. He has sought to hide his evasion of the issue behind a screen of vague and delusive promises.

But the drift or direction of the Roosevelt policies is clear. The direction is toward a Washington bureaucracy with control over industry and agriculture; toward continuation of governmental interference in the disputes between employer and employe, interference that must in the end cripple the right of the employe to use his full economic power against the employer; toward continuation of wasteful methods of relief; toward continued efforts to get around the Constitution; toward continuation or enlargement of the present army of 824,000 Federal employes.

The drift is toward high and higher spending. It cannot be otherwise under policies which spawn subsidized groups with insatiable demands upon the Treasury and the will to enforce their demands by political action.

In advocating the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt, the Post-Dispatch does not shut its eyes to the evils of the Old Guardism repudiated by the voters in 1932. There must be no return to the conditions that produced such evils as the Teapot Dome scandal, the unconscionable Hawley-Smoot tariff, the speculative excesses of the Coolidge "New Era," the wholesale defrauding of investors, the control and abuse of the national credit by Wall Street. The people, we are certain, will tolerate no such return. The people gave a clear mandate against Old Guardism in government, and we credit the administration with large accomplishment in carrying out their will.

We shall be accused, no doubt, of advocating a return to the old order. If it is meant by this that we want government to go back to decent habits of thrift, back to a firm regard for sworn obligations to abide by the Constitution, back to encouragement of the states to reassume their old rights and privileges and cease to be mendicants at Washington, back to an economy of free competition, strictly regulated under constitutional forms but not controlled—if this is what the impeachment means, we plead guilty. We speak for the right of labor to use its full economic power to better its status; for constant emphasis on the rights, duties and privileges of local self-government; for all the civil liberties of the Bill of Rights.

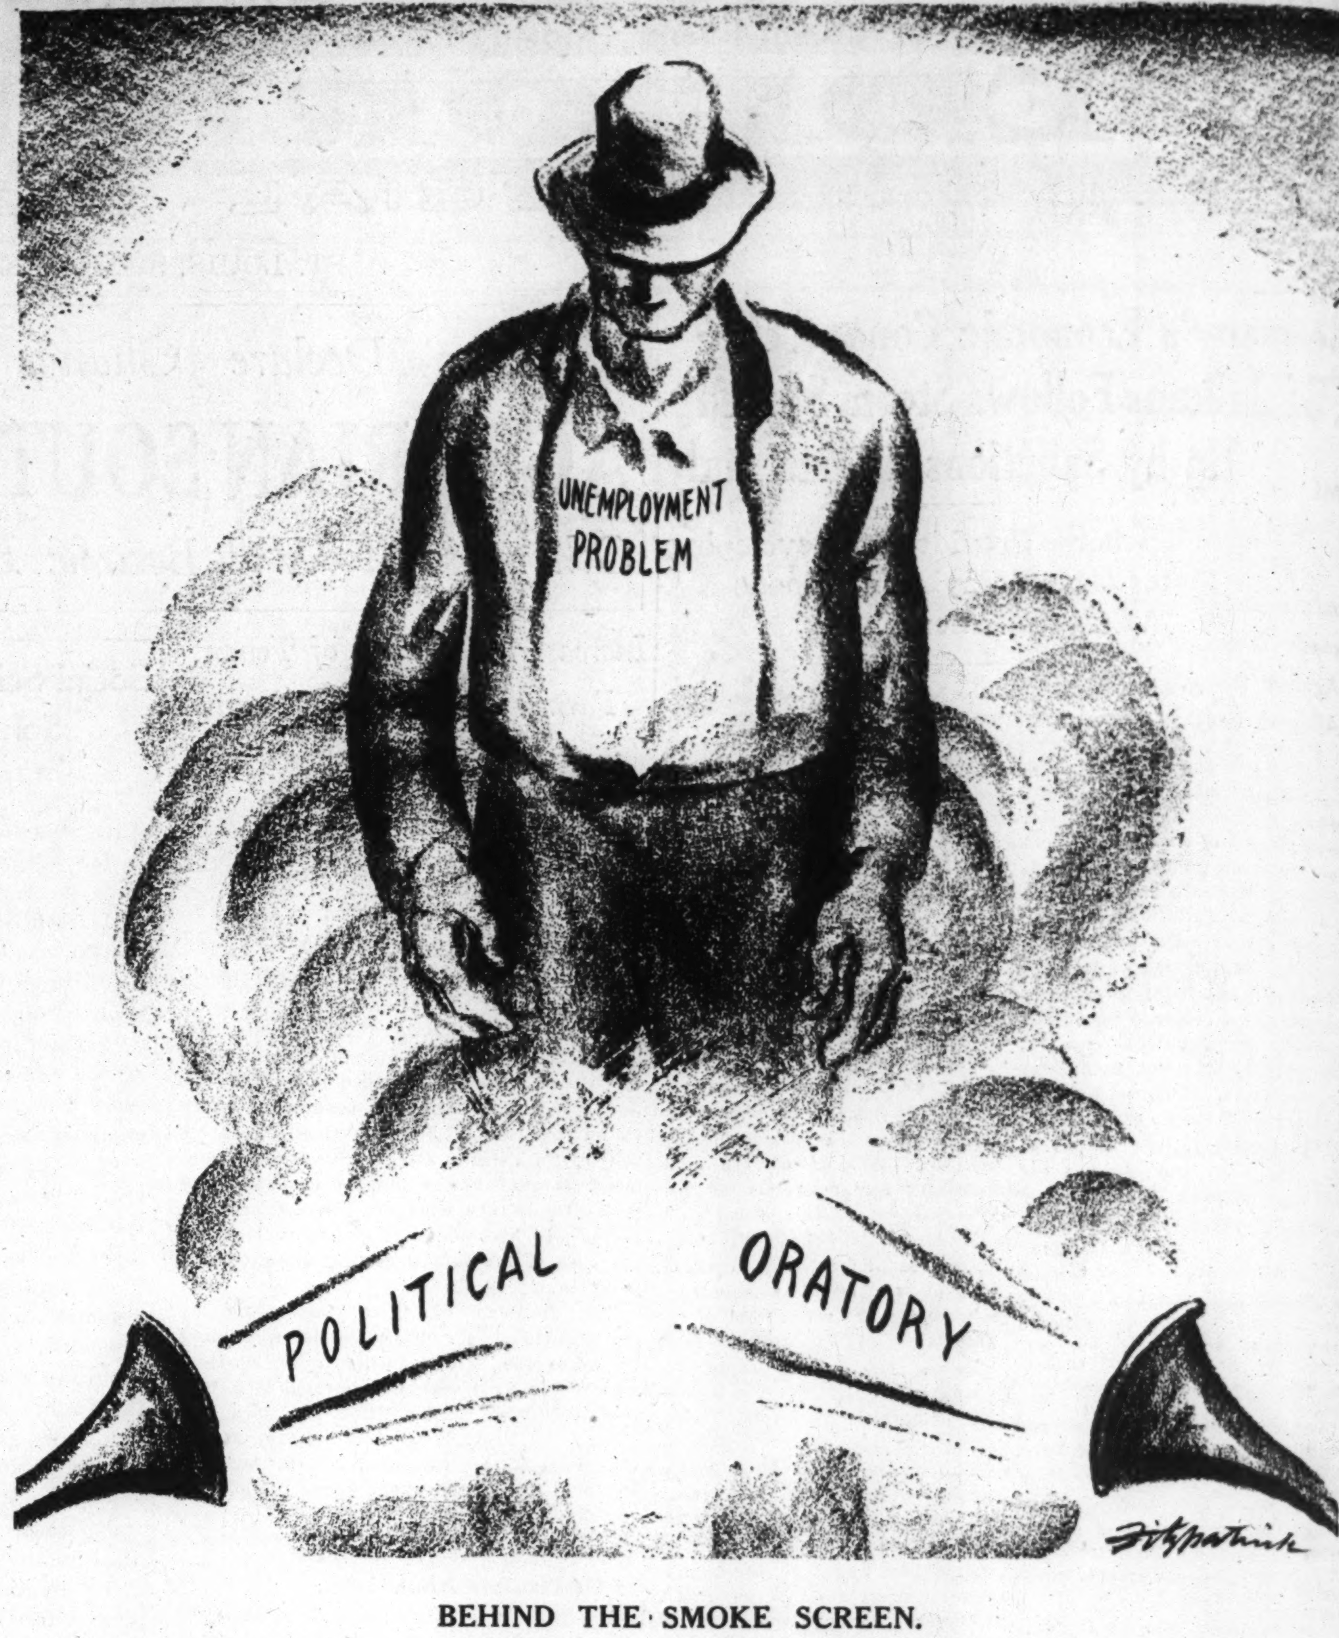
Idealistically conceived though it is, we believe that the New Deal, through its methods and its trend toward the centralization of power, menaces the well-being of the great mass of the people.

What of Gov. Landon? We are aware of the apprehension that his election would mean the political enthronement of special privilege. We recall on the other hand the progressive support that brought about his nomination and the commitment of his Portland speech to the preservation of the free-enterprise system, subject to strict regulation to prevent abuses. On that fundamental issue he has spoken in terms that command respect.

As an independent newspaper, committed to neither the Democratic nor the Republican party, the Post-Dispatch holds itself free to criticise the views and acts of Gov. Landon, both as candidate and as President, if he should be elected. It will continue to advocate measures that it believes to be for the best interests of the country, and to oppose measures that it believes to be hurtful.

We believe that the welfare of the country, under any circumstances, demands the election of Congressmen who can be depended upon to examine every proposed measure with the most scrupulous care; to support no measure, however well-intentioned or plausibly urged, at the mere behest of the Executive; to resist all efforts by the Executive to invade the rights of Congress or the people. Mr. Roosevelt's reaching out for "new instruments of public power," together with the unquestionably large chance that he will succeed himself, makes it supremely important that Congressmen of that type should be chosen this November.

We believe profoundly that the welfare of the country would be best served by the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt. Manifestly, the most useful weapon for all who so believe is a vote for his leading opponent, Gov. Landon.



BEHIND THE SMOKE SCREEN.

The Dragon's Teeth

Comparing European situation today with that of 1913, on eve of World War, writer finds great armament program in progress; though nations are far poorer, armies are larger; measures once debated in parliaments now are ordered by dictators; only hope lies in world's knowledge of what followed previous era of militarism.

From the New York Herald Tribune.

"THE military feature of the year was the increased effort made by the Powers of the world in preparation for war. . . . Smaller countries as well set their houses in order for a struggle that all appeared to regard as imminent. . . . That war was inevitable was regarded as a commonplace in France."

One might suppose those words to be a summary of 1936; actually, they are taken from an annual published at the end of 1913. And some six months after they were written, the inevitable had arrived; the struggle thus foreshadowed was devastating Western civilization.

Today, as the German two-year service decree is duly answered by a billion-dollar French program of rearmament, as the British strain themselves again—just as they did with Mr. Churchill's budgets in 1912 and 1913—to provide fresh naval and air fleets, the parallel with the earlier year is too grisly to be escaped.

It was in March, 1913, just as Mr. Wilson was riding triumphantly to his first inauguration, and while the shock of the Balkan wars was reverberating, as with Ethiopia and Spain today, through the chancelleries, that there came the great French and German army increases. The German army had been increased the year before; with the 1913 law, it was brought up further to a peace strength of some 830,000 men.

France simultaneously increased her term of service from two to three years, to give a peace strength of some 670,000. Belgium tightened her belt and increased her force of effectives; Holland reorganized her army; Russia and Austria pushed armament plans already undertaken and the British were preparing to send new dreadnoughts down the ways at the rate of one "every 45 days."

The 1913 laws were to put a total of more than 4,000,000 men under arms in Europe; and commentators wondered how much longer the Continent could stagger under so vast an economic burden. Today, despite all the costly "labor-saving" machinery since introduced into the production of slaughter, Europe will soon have more than 5,000,000 armed men in barracks, exclusive of the reserve armies, and though the grim face of bankruptcy is nearer to all the great Powers by far than in 1913, nobody minds.

There are other differences. The military laws of 1913 were passed through talkative and often critical parliaments, and in France met a strenuous Socialist opposition. Now, everywhere save in France and England, the dictator merely scribbles his signature, and may or may not decide to tell his propaganda ministry about it afterward.

On the other hand, nobody now bothers to hazard a guess that a war may be "imminent" or "inevitable"—such ideas have become the merest commonplace of the daily newspaper—and that is, perhaps, the strongest reason of all for hoping that it will not come. In 1913, there were only a few to foresee the end or confess their "uneasiness"; there were none to imagine how appalling that end would be. Now we know.

The world may have learned little; but even dictators, justifying their army increases, at least know with what ravaging and uncontrollable fires they are playing.

Ultimate Consumer Pays

From the Detroit News.

"THE United States Treasury is becoming chiefly a device for manufacturing debt, while Santa Claus writes checks and Pollyanna pays for them."

That neatly turned sentence is out of a speech delivered by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg at the opening of the Connecticut State campaign. The theme of the speech was the failure of Congress to safeguard the pocketbooks of the people against a too liberal and visionary administration.

"On one amazing occasion," said the Senator, "the President, asking for three billion dollars, had the temerity to say, 'I suggest that you appropriate it to me,' and Congress did!"

It may be answered in justification of this conduct of Congress during the early depression period that a sort of desperation obsessed the nation and such measures were tolerated as a means of meeting an emergency. Opinions will differ as to this.

But no one would contend that such an emergency now exists. Senator Vandenberg is right in demanding that Congress regain responsible control of the public purse. The debt-making machine must be throttled down.

And the Senator's figure of speech, "Pollyanna pays," is all wrong. Mr. Average Citizen pays. He dips into his weekly pay envelope and hands out a big percentage of it to meet just the interest on those Santa Claus checks. He is going to keep on paying for a long time before the principal of those debts is paid up.

Mr. Ultimate Consumer pays. He may think he is such a little fellow that the tax collector overlooks him. But he pays. He takes the punishment for the Santa Claus spending in the advanced prices for everything he buys.

And when all these taxpayers get straight in their minds what is being done to them, they aren't going to take it in the spirit of Pollyanna.

MOUND CITY MISBEHAVIOR.

From Time.

LAST July, while St. Louisans were perspiring through their hottest recorded summer, the resourceful Post-Dispatch startled them out of their discomfort by beginning a series of sensational registration fraud exposures. Day by day, the newspaper printed pictures of many a vacant lot, unoccupied building, bawdy house, saloon and cheap hotel listed on the Election Board's "revised and corrected" election rolls as domiciles of phantom voters.

Soon private citizens, civic organizations, hungry Republicans turned out of office four years ago in the New Deal landslide, set up a loud clamor, began to ask why 1338 official canvassers, hired by the Election Board and paid $16,000, did not find these apparent irregularities which were uncovered by a handful of newshawks. It now became clear why the number of registered voters in the Mound City in June had swelled to 394,774, an all-time record.

At once, the grand jury swung into action on this gross case of electoral misbehavior. In a fortnight, 32 minor Election Board officials were under indictment for fraud, willful neglect of duty. Censured but not indicted were the four members of the bi-partisan Election Board, composed of two Democrats and two Republicans picked by Democratic Governor Guy Brasfield Park.

Last week, with the Post-Dispatch still doling out its apparently inexhaustible store of election fraud evidence, Gov. Park felt it would be unwise to withhold official action longer, called in Jefferson City correspondents, announced he had removed his St. Louis Election Board for the "betterment of the public service," appointed a new board.

17 MORE TO FACE TRIAL IN RUSSIA FOR CONSPIRACY

Three Former Generals, an Ex-Ambassador to London, a Bank Official and a Woman Accused.

TIME OF HEARING WAITS ON INQUIRY

Confessions of Men Already Shot to Be Used Against Second Group in Alleged Trotzky Plot.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Sept. 26.—The testimony and confessions of men shot to death by Bolshevik firing squads will furnish the evidence by which the Soviet Government will seek to convict the second group of defendants in the alleged Trotzky-inspired conspiracy to seize power through assassination and terror.

Seventeen persons, including at least three former Generals, one former Ambassador, one bank official and others who once stood high in official life, are included in the second group.

The date of their trial has not been announced, the Government saying that the investigation is still incomplete.

Inasmuch as it is known that there have been other wholesale arrests, these defendants may go to trial separately or in conjunction with many others, similarly charged.

Doubt still prevails whether the trial will be open and prolonged as in the case of the Zinoviev-Kamenev conspirators, or in secret under the terrorist law rushed through after the assassination in Leningrad, Dec. 1, 1934, of Sergi Kirov, whose death started the greatest man-hunt in modern-day Russia.

On List of Accused.

Heading the list of accused is Gregory Sokolnikov, former Soviet Ambassador to Great Britain and later assistant commissar of foreign affairs. While abroad he is alleged to have maintained contact with Leon Trotzky, and used the Soviet Embassy in Kensington Gardens, London, as headquarters for a plot to kill Joseph Stalin and other Soviet leaders. Involved with him is Gen. Putna, Soviet military attache in London for the last several years.

Sokolnikov was involved in testimony of Isaac Reingold, executed following the Zinoviev-Kamenev trial, while Putna was named in testimony of Ephim Dreizer, likewise shot with the 16 already put to death since discovery of the alleged new conspiracy.

Similarly involved in Reingold's testimony were Vice-Director Arkus of the Soviet State Bank, who allegedly was to transfer about $25,000 abroad to facilitate the getaway of Zinoviev and Kemenev in case they had to flee, and Serebryakov, former departmental head in the Commissariat of Transport.

Two Army Commanders.

All these men are under arrest, together with many others. They may go to trial with defendants named in the Zinoviev indictment, which group includes two army commanders. This group includes Commander Dmitri Schmidt, Commander Kusmichev, Paul Olberg, N. M. Matorin, N. A. Karev, A. N. Safonova, J. Gaven and Esterman, Faivilovich, Radin, Constant, Greenberg and Gertik.

Commander Schmidt, according to testimony of Dreizer, was an undercover, unsuspected Red Army officer chosen to kill Marshal Klim Voroshilov "either while reporting to him on service matters or during maneuvers." He was a Brigade Commander.

Commander Kusmichev, chief of staff of a military unit, was likewise allegedly recruited by Dreizer personally to execute Voroshilov.

Matorin was formerly Zinoviev's private secretary, who gave damaging testimony against his old chief and who in return may die because of testimony and confessions the deceased left behind them. He was supposed to have been the go-between in speeding up the murder of Kirov, who once was taken to task because the assassination hadn't been committed.

"Zinoviev reproached me for not displaying sufficient determination and energy," Matorin said in his confession.

Woman Involved in Case.

Safonova, only woman so far known to be involved, was the former wife of Ivan Smirnov, one of the principals in the first trial, whose direct testimony from the stand helped to condemn him. She was an active member of the Moscow terrorist center by her own confession, and frequently participated in conversations or plans for disposing of Governmental leaders.

Paul Olberg, brother of Valentine Olberg, already assassinated, is alleged to have been connected with the German Gestapo through being an agent of a German secret police agent named Tukalewsky in Prague. His brother's testimony to that effect and his own admissions appear to have sealed his fate.

Karev, formerly connected with the Academy of Science, and Gertik, former chairman of the Technical Publishing House, were by testimony and their own confessions actively engaged in plotting the Kirov crime.

Constant was identified by Nathan Lurye as the head of a terrorist group in Germany, later transferring its activities to Moscow.

Esterman is named as another of those who planned to kill Voroshilov.

The part Greenberg, Radin and Faivilovich were playing in the conspiracies is yet to be announced. J. Gayen was named by Smirnov as the messenger between him and Leon Trotzky, carrying instructions relative to the plotting and carrying out of the terroristic plans.

Procedure Not Certain.

If procedure of the first trial follows in succeeding ones these defendants will be brought to the stand one by one to repeat their own confessions with amplifications which may spread the encircling net ever wider and wider.

It is not thought they will be granted a public trial, which would be something of an anti-climax after the sensations and drama of the first affair, which developed into an oratorical contest between the defendants anxious, for some unfathomable reason, to convince the Court of the severity of their crimes and depth of their guilt.

German Economic Conquest Of Balkans Follows Storm

chaser of Balkan's agrarian produce. The Rome agreements between Italy, Austria and Hungary, which were made on the basis of the Stresa recommendations, helped to raise the agricultural prices in Hungary.

Germany countered this Italian move, first, by paying the same price in Hungary and Yugoslavia, and then by paying a price 30 per cent above the world market price. The secret of her ability to do this is the exploitation of labor in Germany. The German worker works not for 40 and 48 hours a week, but for 60 hours, and this at low wages. Clever propaganda and many apparent alleviations, such as holidays for workers and their families and journeys by the "Kraft durch Freude" or inization, make the naive German worker forget his low wages and small diet, and he believes, thanks to the abilities of Dr. Goebbels that the state looks after him as well as possible under difficult circumstances. This surplus work of the German worker pays for the 30 per cent which the Balkan peasant obtains for his agricultural produce.

Germany Conquers.

A 30 per cent higher price than he would get on the world market was such a temptation for the Balkan farmer that no Government could have refused it without risking serious internal trouble at home. So Germany came and conquered. Meanwhile the frozen assets of the various Balkan countries had been accumulating rapidly in the Reichsbank. In midsummer the approximate frozen assets of the Balkan countries in Berlin were as follows:

		Reichsmarks
Greece — — —	about	32,400,000
Yugoslavia— —	"	21,000,000
Rumania — —	"	18,000,000
Bulgaria — —	"	10,000,000

Turkey was a purchaser of German goods (especially factory installations) to such an extent that she did not accumulate frozen assets in Berlin.

When the verious Balkan States began to worry about their frozen assets in Germany, Dr. Schacht visited them with the personal message: "I am sorry, but the foreign currency situation of my country does not permit me to pay in gold or foreign currency. Therefore, you must accept German goods in payment."

Armanent Payments.

His journey in June to the Balkan capitals purposed to liquidate these frozen Balkan assets by increasing the German exports to those countries. But what could they buy? There is a limit to factory equipment, to tools, to agricultural machinery, to photo cameras and optical glasses, to aspirin and medical stuffs. The poor Yugoslav peasant or the Greek farmer cannot absorb more of these goods. There remained one thing which countries always need: armaments or the establishment of armament works.

Of Greece's 32,000,000 in frozen assets, 22,000,000 will be paid with armament orders; in Yugoslavia the Kragujewatz Arsenal will be reconstructed and the Zenitza Ironworks in Bosnia will be converted into an up-to-date iron and steel plant which can supply the raw material to a future armament industry. Bulgaria's 10,000,000 Reichsmarks' worth of frozen assets will be paid for the greater part by armament supplies; while even in Turkey ordnance works, submarines, and guns are ordered to pay the purchases of Germany.

Getting Foreign Currency.

The German purchases in those countries often appear superfluous. Thus for the last two years Germany bought up the hazel-nut and fig crops of Turkey. Raisins were purchased in Greece. These delicacies cannot reach the German dinner table, as even commodities like butter are vetoed there by Gen. Goering. They were bought 30 per cent above the market price; they were sold at or below the market price in Rotterdam and London, and thus converted into currency with which raw materials could be bought in countries which have no clearing system with Germany, Turkey and Greece are paid through a clearing (that is, in kind); United States copper or Brazilian rubber, however, must be paid in gold. The 30-35 per cent which thus is being paid for the procuring of these currencies have to be gained by the surplus labor of the German worker.

Developing Raw Materials.

Another feature of the Schacht scheme is the development of raw material deposits in those countries. Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, for example, have undeveloped copper and zinc deposits. Why not exploit them and obtain copper against clearing, instead of dear currencies? And the German system works! As a high authority in Bulgaria finance pointed out, it is essential to respect a customer who pays such a high price. It is true that the industrial products sold by Germany are also 10 to 12 per cent above the market price, but this can be tolerated in the interest of a safe market. On public contracts in these countries Germany is willing to underbid anybody, as this difference is being paid from a national export subsidy fund.

At the same time, all Balkan countries, even Bulgaria and Greece, where pro-German sentiment is strongest at present, realize that this is only a makeshift arrangement for the crisis years. They feel and even know that ultimately it is not a system that can work permanently. They are anxious, therefore, not to lose old customers. Nevertheless, the German penetration in the Balkans is a serious appearance to which much attention should be paid in Great Britain as well as in other countries still used to safer and old-established methods of trading.

Fascist Victory Might Realign All of Europe

pedaled in diplomatic circles, was the British Foreign Office's advice to France not to give up her alliance with Soviet Russia. For the first time the British officially gave their blessing to the French-Russian pact which enraged Germany and threatened to split the Little Entente. Berlin and Rome have sought to detach Rumania and Yugoslavia, and with some success, from their colleague Czechoslovakia, which has gone over to the French-Russian bloc. Both Belgrade and Bucharest heartily dislike the Communists and are wondering whether or not it will be wise to join Germany and Italy. If Spain and possibly Portugal come under the sway of the Fascist-Nazi combination, the decision will be a hard one for the Balkan states to make. Greece has already thrown in its lot with Germany, it appears, although it looks with distrust on Italy. Turkey is openly sympathetic to the French-Russian combination.

The possibility of a Fascist Spain is also making it difficult for some of the smaller and so-called neutral countries to maintain their even political keel these days. The sympathies of Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Holland and Belgium naturally lie with the Spanish loyalists. They are basically democratic and against dictators and they do not fear Communism which so frightens some of their neighbors. They are honestly trying to be neutral.

The Irish Free State, Portugal, Finland and to some extent Poland are inclined to favor the Spanish rebels, Ireland because of its predominantly Catholic population and Finland and Poland because of their hatred of Communism and Russia. Portugal has been under the dictator, Gen. Carmona and his protege Premier Salazar for a decade and naturally dislikes the idea of a Socialist state as a neighbor. The Portuguese have openly aided the rebels and have reason to expect political complications if the insurgents are beaten. Lisbon has been the funnel through which German and Italian supplies have been poured into Spain. For a long time Portugal has been considered as a "British colony" because of London's financial grip on Lisbon, and England is pledged, by treaty, even today to safeguard Portugal's independence. Nevertheless Salazar is following an anti-British policy in the Spanish crisis.

Poland Straddling.

Poland, until recently, has been on the hot spot. The death of Marshal Pilsudski brought about a change in foreign policy. The old general, a rabid anti-Russian, inclined toward rapprochement with Germany. So did Col. Josef Beck, anti-French foreign minister. Beck served in the German army in part of the war and was never well-received in Paris. The new dictator, General Rydz-Smigly, has succeeded in rehabilitating the old French - Polish military alliance which collapsed when Paris made its treaty with Moscow. Nevertheless Poland is still straddling. It fears Germany and hates Russia—and wants to have France's friendship and protection. Warsaw also is a bit puzzled by the Nazi infiltration in the Polish corridor and the recent Nazi coups in Danzig and Memel. It doesn't place much faith in Berlin's promises.

The Finns are in the same position as the Poles. They hate and fear the Russians and they also oppose Fascism and Naziism in any form. To a certain extent they are secure in their northern fastnesses unless the Russians and Germans clash in the Gulf of Finland. The alleged pro-German sentiment in Finland is largely fictitious, but there certainly is no pro-Russian tendency apparent in Helsingfors' foreign policy.

In the final analysis, the outcome of the Spanish civil war will have an important bearing upon European peace in the months ahead.

INTER-AMERICAN PEACE PARLEY AIMS

Neutrality, Arms Limitation and Economic Truce on Buenos Aires Program.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 26.—The Inter-American Peace Conference, which will open here Dec. 1, proposes Pan-American agreement on three plans to prevent war. They are:

1. A program of neutrality in case of an European war or any other conflict.
2. Limitation of armaments.
3. An economic truce.

What Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, will recommend for joint neutrality is awaited with interest by most Latin American foreign offices.

Dr. Carlos Saavedra Lamas, Argentine Foreign Minister, will present a new general peace treaty providing for joint action to bar exportation of war supplies to belligerents and to be altered only in the event of united action declaring an aggressor.

Another Argentine proposal is for a convention declaring ships in inter-Americcan trade "engaged in coastal traffic," regardless of their ownership. Its purpose will be to warn European nations against searches and seizures such as those during the World War.

Permanent Court Proposed.

For prevention of war in the Americas, the conference will consider creation of a permanent Pan-American Court of International Justice.

Under the projected tariff accord, the conference organizers hope to reach a true of several years, during which the nations will not increase customs duties and imports.

All of the 21 American republics have accepted Argentina's invitation to the conference, issued after all had responded favorably to President Roosevelt's suggestion that a special peace conference be held this year in Buenos Aires.

Peace reigns throughout the Americans at the present time. Such territorial quarrels as exist are on their way to settlement and all of the republics are on good terms with their neighbors.

Bolivia and Paraguay will make effective, on the vent of the meeting, their recently concluded peace. The nations will formalize their re-established relations—although they actually have been restored—by ceremoniously exchanging missions.

Time Seems Auspicious.

Latin American statesmen regard the circumstances as the most auspicious ever to attend the opening of a Pan-American meeting.

The 1933 conference at Montevideo, they point out, started with several clouds threatening trouble, although it turned out to be a harmonious and successful parley.

In that year Paraguay and Bolivia were at war, Colombia and Peru were recovering from a war scare and had not settled their Amazon frontier differences, the Cuban political situation after the overthrow of President Gerardo Machado looked ominous and the Salvadorean Government had not been recognized by several American countries. The old frontier dispute between Ecuador and Peru was hanging fire, with Ecuador dissatisfied because it had not been invited to join the Colombian-Peruvian conversations over Amazon border trouble.

Since then, six American republics have effected peace between Bolivia and Paraguay. The conference which ended the warfare in 1935 continues to sit, with the objective of reaching a lasting settlement of the Chaco dispute.

Colombia and Peru returned to amity in 1934 by an agreement reached through the mediation of Dr. Afranio de Mello Franco, former Brazilian Foreign Minister.

The Cuban political situation has become stabilized, for the time being at least. The Salvadorean recognition question is no longer an issue and the dispute between Ecuador and Peru has been submitted for arbitration by President Roosevelt.

GUARDING OF KING EDWARD HARD JOB FOR VIENNA POLICE

During Recent Visit He Spoiled All Plans by Driving in Auto Alone.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Sept. 26.—Vienna police say King Edward VIII of England is the most difficult man in Europe to follow and to protect adequately.

In Vienna he stays at the Hotel Bristol, always occupying a suite facing the imposing State Opera Building and overlooking the famous Ringstrasse. On his latest visit the King indicated he would leave the hotel in the course of an afternoon to visit the British legation. Police made preparations—lines of detectives from the hotel lobby to the curb, plainclothesmen circulating through the crowds, automobiles in readiness to precede and follow the King's car.

But the King quietly summoned a hotel floor clerk and asked questions about the back door. Then he had the clerk guide him past kitchens and service and laundry rooms to the rear entrance. The King rode off alone and unobserved in a car which a legation chauffeur had parked among the delivery trucks.

After dark the King, who was in a holiday mood, went from cafe to cafe, calling for Vienna music and domestic drinks. There was no telling where he would go next. So during the King's stay police had all the likely spots covered.

Agrarian South Must Be Rebuilt, Scientists Say

tion in moving Eastern industrial plants to the South.

"The post-war apostles of the New South," Vance says, "visualized a future in which industrialization would repeat its wonders for the South and their area would resume its economic equality in the nation.

"That hope has almost vanished. Economic competence has gradually moved from East to West until the Pacific Coast has our highest per capita income, but in the moving it passed by the Southeast. Here, for the majority, the struggle to reach an American standard of living lacks any immediate promise of attainment.

Wages and the Unions.

"We note that income and wages in the South fall anywhere from 30 to 50 per cent below the national level. The differences are greatest in agriculture, but they persist in even higher levels of skill and training. In the main they are due to three causes: Lower pay for the same work; lower skill of workers, and the differences between a farm and industrial economy.

"In a nation in which people move around so freely as in ours, industries may move South, and workers may move Northward and Eastward, but sectional differences in wages and income persist. The occupations in the Southeast whose returns approach nearest to national standards are those which have erected the highest barriers of skill and unionizations against the pressure of reinforcements from the farms. The industries which have led the exodus of factories to the South are mainly those in which the simple skills required have permitted the tapping of the region's overflowing reservoir of labor reserves. Very nearly the nation's average wage rate is paid in the South's railroad shops and the higher mechanical building trades, where skill and the union card are required. Wages in the textile industry grow progressively lower the further one penetrates into the deep South. Even the learned and professional classes receive less than similar individuals in the rest of the nation."

"Colonial" Economy.

The Southern sociologists find that the major economic weakness in the Southeast is the lack of invested capital and surplus wealth to develop industry. This conclusion is in line with the study by the Tennessee Valley Administration of the typical county, Grainger, in Tennessee, where the natural resources and the labor were exploited by Northern capital to such an extent that inhabitants were plunged deeper and deeper into the economic morass.

Under the present system, Vance declares, the Southeast has fallen into a "colonial" economy, in that it merely produces raw materials and furnishes the basic resources for investment, fabrication, manufactures and distribution, while the inhabitants have the minimum returns of a peasant economy.

"A colonial economy," says Vance, "is a debtor economy." It begins as an investment by the mother country. It accumulates only small financial reserves, and as new opportunities arise they must be financed from the outside.

"The profits are exported outside the area to business men in command of capital. This has its advantages, for these groups have developed a certain technical skill as purveyors of credit and developers of resources. But it tends to keep the region where it began a colony rather than a regional economy.

Overload of Taxes.

"This can best be seen in the tax situation of the South. The area has men and land and a few native industries that are not controlled by great national corporations. The South's tax dilemma is found in the attempt to make new and immature regional industries shoulder the cost of nursing a sick agriculture. When the attempt fails, as it is bound to, legislators turn to poll taxes and sales taxes that frankly take from the poor out of all proportion of their ability to pay.

"Cumulative poll-tax requirements in several of the Southern states operate to prevent the poor from voting. This creates a vicious circle, for it means that the uneducated are barred from voting for the education of their children. Southerners who approve of this as a device to keep the Negro out of politics should realize that great numbers of whites are also disfranchised. Nowhere has non-voting reached higher proportions than in the white primaries of the Democratic South."

Need for Rebuilding.

Looking to the future, the Southern economists find that the prejudices inherent in Southern culture, which includes politics, will respond best to economic treatment, since they are the products of poverty. Their solution is regional planning co-ordinated with national planning, but as in all national-regional planning proposals, the authors do not answer how it can be done within the Constitution.

"We have compared the region, they say, "with other regions, to the almost uniform discredit of the Southeast. Yet there is much to inicate that the Southern States, with heir natural resources would be capable of much greater development if they could eliminate the economic waste which keeps them drained to poverty levels.

"The agrarian South must be rebuilt, not on the old basis, but upon a new structure consistent with the needs and equipment of today's changing economy. The South needs to reconstruct its place in the nation, and the nation needs to realize that here is a national problem and not a sectional one. The South needs to build upon its own physical and cultural resources, and it needs the aid and understanding of the nation in its task. The South, in short, offers our greatest task in national-regional planning.

"Southern civilization has always been dominated by its political culture. Once its politics demanded respect. Today it is largely futile. The meaning for politics is clear. If regional needs are to be served; if democratic institutions are to function, politics must abandon its futile pattern of partisanship and personalities to concern itself with questions of economic efficiency, regional economy and social legislation."

Those are harsh words about the present officeholding Southern politicians, but the social scientists have only to point to the present plight of the Southeast to make their case.

Advice to the South.

And then, as a fling at their own "backward" states, they observe: "If the Southern regions could devote a fourth of the science and work to their agricultural problems that has been developed in the far Western regions, they would become true garden spots".

What will happen if the Southeast does not pull itself out of its present shiftlessness and disorganization? The social scientists answer:

"If the South, sensing its unbalances between the lower brackets of common men and its upper brackets of resources and cultural institutions, does not will and plan for the better ordering of its heritage and prospect, the South may contribute to the culture of the nation in the future an extraordinary exhibit of social degeneracy, of tragic men and women, broken and depraved in the on-goings of a great nation, whose opportunities may be lost by default as well as by purpose."

What will happen if the present trends are reversed? The scientists hopefully reply:

"We assume that the South can and will contribute to the wealth of the nation through its increased technology, its better trained workers and its utilization of its new resources. And we assume that it will continue to contribute of its abundance of people, as it has in the recent past with its nearly 4,000,000 migrants to the other regions with the financial "worth" of billions of dollars. . . . In the hands of the South may be the final destiny of the common man, symbol of democracy. For there is a testing field for democracy among five to ten million marginal white folk and ten million Negroes. In a graphic picture of what is economically, culturally and morally wrong, the new achievements of scholarship may point to stable ways of attaining equilibrium and the redistribution of real wealth and welfare not only among individuals but regions."

Odum's survey is in sharp contrast with the popular conception created by fiction and idealized pictures of the magnolia blossoms and Southern leisure. His solution of the problem may seem weak and inadequate but there can be no doubt as to the value of his work. He has given to the South and the nation the facts of a serious economic and political problem.

SENATOR LEWIS NOTES NEW POLITICAL TREND

For First Time, Men, Not Party Labels Are Issue, Illinoisan Says.

The view that "the country has at last risen above party labels," and that so far as the presidential campaign is concerned there are no clearly defined parties was expressed by Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois in a statement to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

Senator Lewis, a Democrat, spoke at Belleville Friday night following his return from a tour of the Pacific Coast, where he made numerous speeches urging the re-election of President Roosevelt.

"This political campaign," he said, "is the first I have seen where there is no political party deciding the issues. There are political organizations in behalf of home candidates, but the people have reached the determination to choose the President according to the principles the candidate personally represents. The political leaders are having no influence on the general citizen, who, instead of considering what is best for the country, determintes his attitude on the basis of what is for the benefit of his particular interest, occupation or business.

"Therefore, the final decision is going to rest on the majority opinion as to whether the personal political policy of Gov. Landon or that expressed by President Roosevelt profits or injures the personal welfare of the citizen himself. The country has at last risen above party labels."

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY
JOHN G. NEIHARDT

A Novel Like a Symphony

THE DOOR IN THE GRIMMING. By Paula Grogger. Translated by Caroline Cunningham. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

SOMETIMES a book grows as naturally from the mind of its writer as a wild flower does on a mountainside. It is so harmonious a product of the author's personality that the reader is at once aware of its inevitability. Such a work is "The Door in the Grimming," by Paula Grogger, a native of Oblarn, a little village in a remote part of the Austrian Alps, of which she writes.

She has chosen for the theme of her novel a legend of the early nineteenth century. In the lofty Grimming Mountain, so the story goes, is a great stone door beyond which lie riches untold, but through which no one has ever passed and lived. One night a poor misguided hunter perished in a desperate attempt to gain the treasures of the Grimming. All of the sorrow of the tale began because of the beauty of Constantia Stralz, who would not leave her lawful husband and become the hunter's love. Malicious and untrue gossip whispered that the fair young wife had been false and that her oldest son belonged in reality to the dead man. Years later this rash and hot-tempered boy did indeed end his wild life before the awful door in the mountain, thus fulfilling the hunter's mad threat that he would take Constantia's first-born child.

A slender theme this may appear upon which to build a novel of 500 pages. But the theme may be likened to the central motif of a symphony, for "The Door in the Grimming" is much like that form of music. It is the tale of a whole village with its loves and hates, its festivals and the grim interlude of the invasion by the French during the Napoleonic wars. The descriptions of the forests and fields have a lyric quality. The whole is bound together by the magic of an atmosphere which would have been impossible had not the author felt the spirit of the locality in the very depths of her mind.

One of the most charming things about the book is its blend of romanticism and realism. The people of Oblarn are devoutly religious and almost equally superstitious. However, the reader never questions the reality of their emotions. One understands the terrible urgency that Constantia feels to have her sickly newborn child baptized before he dies. It does not seem unnatural that the French soldiers should think ragged little Regina an apparition of the Virgin. All of the legends woven throughout the fabric of the tale are indispensable parts of its pattern and texture.

The characters are created with a sure touch which makes them live despite the fantastic quality of the plot. Among the many interesting figures are the old priest, deposed when he naively tells his superior that there are no bad people in Oblarn; Constantia, serenely happy in her devotion to her husband, until the gossips bring disaster in her life; and Stralz, kindly and just, but too reserved ever to tell his wife that he loves her.

The imprint of the author's personality is seen throughout the book. Hers is a mind in which many qualities are blended, humor and tenderness, sensitivity and strength, passion and restraint. In these characteristics Paula Grogger much resembles Selma Lagerlof. Also the two women have much the same love of legend, delight in native land and a charming romanticism combined with a shrewd and observant realism.

A word should be added in praise of the translator, Caroline Cunningham, who has maintained to a large degree the simplicity of style, the rhythm and lyric beauty of the original German.

For Those Who Love Strangeness

THE UNDYING MONSTER. By Jessie Douglas Kerruish. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

THIS is less a story than a nightmare. It has throughout the feeling of terror, helplessness, and intangible pressure, characteristic of a bad dream; and it communicates the feeling to its reader. That is a thing requiring of the author an extremely delicate touch, but Miss Kerruish is successful in her aim—she has maintained the illusion. Her terrors never get out of hand, never become ludicrous; nor has she, as too many authors of this class do, spoiled her story by frantic plot-twistings to provide a "natural" explanation. "The Undying Monster," to one who loves strangeness, will be a satisfying book.

It cannot be said that it is primarily a story of the supernatural, though Miss Kerruish knows that part of the mind which vibrates to the weird, and plays upon it with skill. But the book's effect derives not so much from the supernatural as from a distortion of the natural; and its mystery is the mystery of the human mind. Thus it affects the reader more strongly than the fantastic extravagance of a mere ghost story ever could. One feels with the hero the oppression of irresistible forces that gather in the night, as if a pair of hands coming together compressed the air, thickening it into a fog of bestiality and sin.

For sin, an ancient sin, the curse of 3000 years, is the theme of this book. Something old and wicked has breathed upon it, and the odor of its breath clings to the page—an odor suggestive of that eternal counterforce of wickedness coeval with God and opposed to Him. The dreadfulness is not artificially worked up. It is full-bodied and alive, and seems to grow out of the tale's essence naturally. No doubt the mechanism is there, but its operation is so smoothly efficient as to be unnoticeable. Miss Kerruish had, at the start, a fine sinister situation; she has squeezed from it the utmost of terror and dread; and she has introduced nothing extraneous merely for the sake of an enhanced effect. She has, in short, given us an example of the way mystery stories ought to be written.

Some Showings in Fall Fiction

EARTH NEVER TIRES. By Darragh Aldrich. (H. C. Kinsey & CO., New York.)

BEATING WINGS. By Robert W. Chambers. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

MR. TUTT TAKES THE STAND. By Arthur Train. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

STORMALONG GERT. By Martha Banning Thomas. (Lee Furman, Inc., New York.)

THE STOLEN GOD. By Edison Marshall. (H. C. Kinsey & Co., New York.)

SHUDDERING CASTLE. By Wilbur Fawley. (Lee Furman, Inc., New York.)

IN the fall showing of light fiction Dame Fashion decrees no change. Obviously, six years of depression, for the most part, develop no new terminology or new plots for this type of novels.

"Earth Never Tires," by Darragh Aldrich, deals with a young architect and his wife, who was a copy writer for an advertising agency, and their attempt to adjust themselves to the depression by reclaiming a plot in the woods of Minnesota. The adventures of these city people in a harsh climate, unrelieved by modern conveniences, are assisted or, rather, complicated by a handsome forest ranger and a comely, competent neighbor, Ailsie McLeod, who is an old hand at this business of living in the wilderness.

Robert W. Chambers in "Beating Wings" demonstrates that the Cinderella story is still holding its own. His Cinderella, "Ellie Lessing," has no fairy godmother; but a great talent and ambition push her to the heights as a world-renowned sculptor. And does she get her man? Well, depend on Robert W. Chambers!

With pleasure one notices that another old favorite, Mr. Tutt, still has a few tricks left. The ingenuity with which he outwits the town's meanies has not suffered from age, as the reader will see in "Mr. Tutt Takes the Stand." Most of these stories have appeared in "The Saturday Evening Post" the last year or so.

"Stormalong Gert," by Martha Banning Thomas, marks the advent of a female deep-sea fishing skipper, a character which should be good for several more adventures, competing in no way with "Tugboat Annie." The plot creaks a bit at times, but there are moments of genuine humor and tension, aided by robust and colorful dialogue.

There is not much offered here in the way of adventure novels. "The Stolen God," by Edison Marshall, a story of love among Buddhas and Oriental natives, is only fair with few exciting moments. "Shuddering Castle," by Wilbur Fawley, contains a plot so feeble in conception and so full of alarums and excursions that one feels like the villagers in the fable, "Wolf! Wolf!"—too bored even to recognize the climax. The conversation is stiff and inadvertently ludicrous.

Although the lighter novels from 1930 to 1936 do not differ a great deal from those of 1920 to 1930, an assiduous reader might notice a slowing down of pace, a tendency to talk about life with a capital L and the therapeutic effects of a return to the soil.

High Plus Values In Historic Novel

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK. By Walter D. Edmonds. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

EVERY schoolboy knows something of the invasions from Canada during the Revolution, of the advance across Lake Champlain, of Ticonderoga, perhaps of St. Leger, certainly of Burgoyne and Saratoga; but Herkimer and Oriskany, German Flats, Cherry Valley and Canada Creek, within the same period, 1776-1781, are scarcely a footnote in fleeting memory. There were two roads from Canada in 1776 and the Mohawk Valley was one of them. What happened there had force and meaning. To this page of frontier history Walter D. Edmonds addresses himself in "Drums Along the Mohawk," another of his series of early American studies which include "Rome Haul" and "Erie Water."

Edmonds makes a remarkable synthesis. Some historical novelists rewrite the record as they more or less romantically incline, using characters for narrative convenience. Others make the facts a mere backdrop for what would be just as good (or just as poor) a fiction without them; but Edmonds fuses his materials into a sound and scholarly work that delights a general sense of values. He tells his story, but it is not just a story; he writes his history painstakingly, but it is not history alone. The plus values are the feel, the surge and throb, the fears, the courage of the men and women and children of the time and place; the business of living and dying; savagery and murder in the wilderness; love of the soil and independence of spirit. It is all colloquial and actual. It is drama that takes on the nature of an epic in homespun.

As far as the story goes, it is an account of the Tory and Indian raids and massacres in central New York as they affect the fortunes of Gil and his bride, Lana, refugee settlers from the burnt-out hamlet of Deerfield, east of Fort Stanarx; but Gil and Lana are only details of a broad panorama. The record covers whole communities, the entire valley, with its 2500 men able and fit to bear arms in 1776, of whom scarcely 800 survived to 1781.

Is is rich in character and color. The glimpse of old Herkimer—called to command, common sense in the face of strutting insubordination, forced prematurely into battle and shot through the knee (he died of the wound), but calmly sitting his saddle under a tree, puffing his long pipe while directing his men at Oriskany—is unforgettable and pleasantly tingling to the American blood.

This portrait is only one among dozens, each sharply, sympathetically limned, and virtually all authentic. In his introduction Edmonds carefully lists the few for whom he found no real counterpart.

"Drums Along the Mohawk" is a mine of Central New York Americana, impressive in its specific minutiae. Edmonds has drawn on all the available source material. No doubt he could cite authority for every main statement and most of the details.

The book has been a best seller for weeks.

A Shining Thread In Homely Fabric

AMERICAN ACRES. By Louise Redfield Peattie. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

THERE is a kind of wisdom—an understanding of life and growth and change—which comes only from intimacy with the soil. It is this wisdom, running like a shining thread through the ordinary fabric of Mrs. Peattie's story, that raises it above the usual. The author is the descendant of an old family with a tradition in pioneering which dates from 1620. Her love for the land is deep and sincere; and it is American—in the best and most mature sense of the word.

Grand Portage, homesite of the Honeywells since their ancestor, Adoniram Honeywell, cleared it from the wilderness, is in Illinois, and the common things written about are familiar to every Middle Westerner. The story itself is usual enough. Seeking novelty and change, Vincent Honeywell goes to Europe in 1914, where he marries Laure, daughter of an expatriate American, the day before he goes to the French front. He is wounded and later dies, leaving a little daughter, Amie. At 6, Amie reared in Continental hotels and Riviera villas, goes to Grand Portage, and for the first time in her life finds herself at home. She is not permitted to stay, however, and is returned to the artificial life her mother loves.

Ten years later, Amie, who has never forgotten it, returns to her father's home. There, in the land itself, she finds the solution of her tangled love affair with her cousin, Greg, and the meaning of her destiny as a Honeywell.

The solid Mid-Western Honeywells are effectively contrasted with the shallow Laure, the genial, unmoral McAlpin and Greg's wife, Evelyn, a vicious, neurotic heiress. But the most important characterization is that of the girl Amie, who, knowing yet innocent, finds her own way by the inherited voice of integrity within her.

Mrs. Peattie is the wife of Donald Culross Peattie, and the mother of three sons.

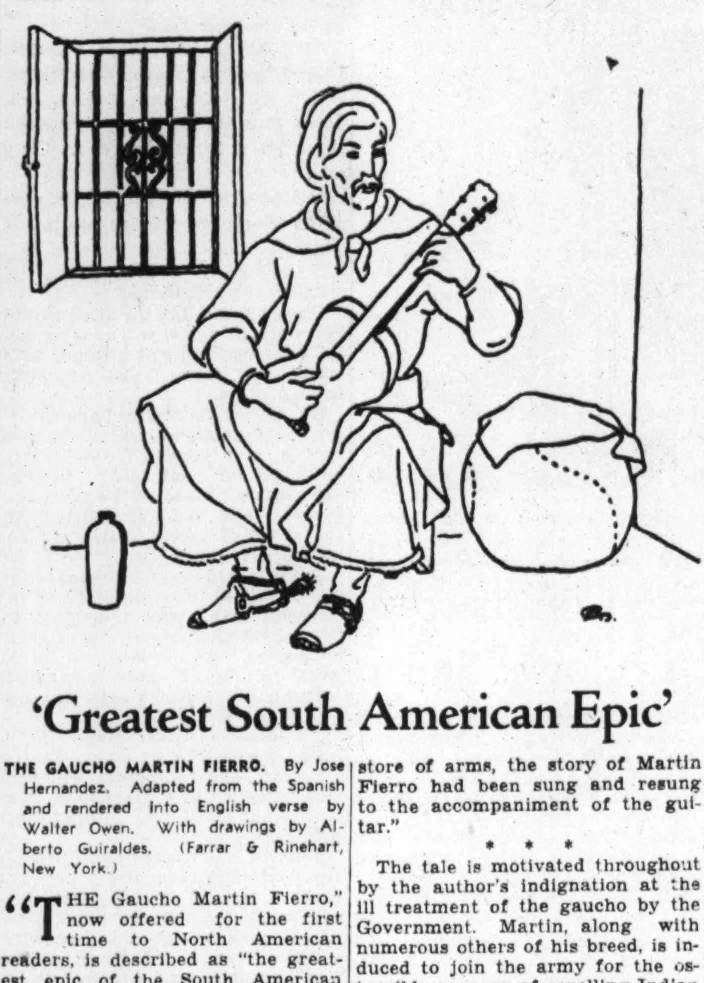
A Ballad Singer of the Pampas. From "The Gaucho Martin Fierro."



'Greatest South American Epic'

THE GAUCHO MARTIN FIERRO. By Jose Hernandez. Adapted from the Spanish and rendered into English verse by Walter Owen. With drawings by Alberto Guiraldes. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York.)

"THE Gaucho Martin Fierro," now offered for the first time to North American readers, is described as "the greatest epic of the South American world." It celebrates in 46 cantos the adventures of an Argentine cowboy (gaucho) on the Pampas. Its author, Jose Hernandez, son of an upper-class ranch-owning family, was born 102 years ago in the Province of Buenos Aires. He spent his life as rancher, journalist, politician and soldier, and at various times he held important posts in the Government. But his heart was with the more than half barbaric riders of the vast back country, and in 1872 he published the first 13 cantos of his gaucho "epic," entitled "The Departure of Martin Fierro."

Clearly, Fernandez was not concerned with the creation of a "literary masterpiece." He wrote in the gaucho vernacular, and the verse forms he employed were those of the gaucho ballads sung to the accompaniment of a guitar about all the camp fires of the prairies. He wrote, in fact, as a gaucho, out of his own cherished experience, but with greater skill and inventiveness than the untutored ballad makers knew.

The first part of the poem achieved immediate success, running through 15 editions in seven years. Its popularity was not confined to the cities. In cheap editions the poem circulated throughout the back country, and Martin Fierro "stepped out of the printed pages to become a living figure. In the rustic pulperia (saloons) where the neighbors foregathered at the day's close; in the gaucho's shack with its mud walls, straw thatch and rawhide door flap; around the lonely camp fire under the prairie stars, or away on the border outposts where every estancia had its watch tower and its store of arms, the story of Martin Fierro had been sung and resung to the accompaniment of the guitar."

The tale is motivated throughout by the author's indignation at the ill treatment of the gaucho by the Government. Martin, along with numerous others of his breed, is induced to join the army for the ostensible purpose of repelling Indian raids on the frontier. But he and his companions are farmed out to the proprietors of remote ranches as virtual slaves. After three years of labor, Martin demands his pay and is tortured for his impudence. Managing to escape, he returns to his home, which he finds in ruins. His wife and children have vanished. Thereupon he becomes a lone wolf with murder in his heart; and the rest is little better than a particularly bloody and often ribald yarn, involving many knife duels, and ending when Martin, fighting desperately with a Sheriff's posse, is aided by Cruz, one of the deputies, who hasn't the stomach to "gang up" on so courageous a fighter. The two win the fight and flee together beyond the frontiers, there to live with the Indians.

The second and longer portion of the poem, entitled "The Return of Martin Fierro," was published in 1879, and its success equaled that of the first part. It is concerned with the adventures of Martin and Cruz in the Indian country.

There can be no question as to the importance of this work in verse, and, crude as it is in certain ways, it certainly reveals extraordinary power in many passages. But epic greatness, in the strict sense of a much-abused word, it cannot be said to have. The hero is hardly to be called noble even at his best, and the lofty mood is lacking—the feeling that the doomed may conquer by being more magnanimous than Fate. The work is to be described not as an epic, but rather as a series of picaresque ballads. Nevertheless, for its unquestionable authenticity it deserves far more attention than it is likely to receive in this country.

Arresting Pageant of Pioneers

OUT OF THE WEST. By Rufus Rockwell Wilson. (Wilson-Erickson, Inc., New York.)

FIRST published in 1933, and reviewed in these columns at that time, this work is one of the most interesting compilations on certain aspects of the history of the West. It concerns some dynamic Americans who swept through the country between the Mississippi River and the Pacific Ocean during the expansive nineteenth century.

Whatever their virtue, the arresting pageant of trappers, traders, hunters, guides, preachers, express riders, coach drivers, settlers, prospectors, cowmen, gamblers, promoters, bad men, peace officers and hangers-on moves rapidly through this absorbing volume. Considerably over half of the text is devoted to prospectors and miners and the fever that consumes them; and there is precious little about the soldiers, Indians, explorers and missionary priests. Thus the work is selective rather than exhaustive.

This edition is offered as being revised and enlarged. The "revision" is negligible, and consists chiefy of a few corrections of the original text. The "enlargement" consists of the addition of a subtitle, a one-page preface, four paragraphs on a certain colorless Colorado officer, and a bibliography that should, by all means, have been included in the original edition.

Other changes noted are the elimination of 79 delightful head, tail and text illustrations and 10 savory full-page scenes, all by Sidney Fletcher, and the substitution therefor of 19 undistinguished portraits by Constance Naar. The decorative front cover has also been exchanged for a plain one.

When Dread Hung Over the Valley

MOUNTAIN PATH. By Harriette Simpson. (Covici-Friede, New York.)

THE mountain path that Louisa Sheridan was called upon to travel led into the Kentucky hills along the upper Cumberland. She went there, spurred by necessity rather than devotion, reluctantly and with misgivings, because she needed a teacher's earnings to enable her to finish her university course. The beginning of her sojourn, therefore, was marked by an inner conflict. As she taught the children of Canebrake School, however, she learned from them and from their mothers in the valley, and even from the men whose hard hates brought sorrow to the hearthstones.

So the conflict that she had brought with her gradually yielded to the compulsions that bore upon her and the appeal that came to her out of the lives of the people among whom she lived, so that at the last it was a different conflict—whether to return to the life that she had left or devote herself to the life that she had found. Before she came to the mountain path she had followed a broad road, never doubting that it led to something. Before she completed her seven months' teaching—and learning—she found herself questioning if the broad road did not lead her away from something.

It would, for one thing, lead her away from the romance that was having its slow way with her. Something of the kind might have been foreseen, with Chris Bledsoe hiding out, staying with his kinsman, Lee Buck, and his wife, Corie, with whom the teacher lived. Not that Chris was minded to improve his opportunities. He was friendly, but aloof. It was not by his wooing, but by his restraint, marked by a sort of dignity, that he won his way into the teacher's regard.

Over the valley hung the dread of the day when the Bucks and Barnetts would meet again and let loose their cherished hate. Men would die then, Bucks or Barnetts or maybe both, as had happened before when Bucks and Barnetts rode in the night and the dead were brought home in the morning.

There came a night when the Bucks went forth and the women, Corie and the teacher, knew that the Barnetts would be lying in wait; but because of a strange constraint, they could speak no warning word, and through the night they waited for the tidings that would come with the dusty light of dawn.

In the night of her waiting there in the Lee Buck cabin, sharing the certainty of Corie that the break of day would bring tidings of tragedy, Louisa Sheridan came to her decision; but it was after all something that she could not decide, for the Bucks and the Barnetts were engaged in desperate matters that took no account of such things as women's decisions.

The night when the men pursued their deadly purposes and the women waited is the peak of the book's drama against a background of mounting menace as the teacher taught—and learned—feeling rather than understanding the tragic undercurrents in the lives of the valley people.

First Full Length View Of Noah Webster

NOAH WEBSTER: SCHOOLMASTER TO AMERICA. By Harry R. Warfel. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

FEW Americans have influenced their times and the times that followed them as did Noah Webster. He was a Revolutionary soldier, a school teacher, a compiler of a grammar and a speller, a lawyer, writer on public affairs, a magazine editor, a newspaper publisher and editor of the historic "American Dictionary of the English Language," truly one of the educational milestones. And yet this is the first attempt to present a full length account of Noah Webster's life and work and to appraise them.

The author, a member of the University of Maryland faculty, set out 10 years ago to produce a history of nationalism in American literature. Before he had gone very far he saw the need for many basic studies, among them a definitive biography of Noah Webster. The more he investigated Webster's nationalism the more he became interested in the rest of the man's ideas and undertakings. The present book is the result. It is brightly written with a wealth of engaging detail, but the author is careful not to let the trees keep the reader from seeing the woods.

There can be no question that Noah Webster is entitled to a rounded study such as this one. As a matter of fact, it is because our historians and biographers have spent a disproportionate share of their time on political figures and political events that the lives of men like Noah Webster have gone unwritten. Thanks to an awakening among these writers of biography and history this deficiency is now being corrected. The Daniel Websters may make more of a stir at a given time; they may be the men of the hour. The Noah Websters have by far the greater influence in the long run.

Martha Gellhorn

THE TROUBLE I'VE SEEN. By Martha Gellhorn. (William Morrow & Co., New York.)

IN THE first of these four short stories, which spring out of Martha Gellhorn's experiences as a field worker for the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, there is a quotation which more or less sets the tone for all of them. A portly, fumbling, well-meaning old woman, who, together with her married son and daughter, is lost in the depth of the depression, is talking:

> The worst thing, Mrs. Maddison decided, would be ever to admit that you didn't have any hope left at all, and that living was too much for you.

No hope left at all! Well, if there's any left in Mrs. Maddison as she returns from the jail into which her son has been thrown for killing his sister's husband in a drunken brawl, it is very little indeed. And similarly, there is none left in Pete, who doesn't get his job back after the strike is ended; or in Jim Barr, who, in a last desperate effort to preserve his pride, steals a suit and a dress so that he and his girl can get married in style; or in the mother whose 11-year-old daughter unreasoningly, almost unknowingly, takes to prostitution to get a pair of roller skates and long-denied bags of candy.

The worst thing has caught up with all of them. Down and out to begin with, they, despite almost incredible courage which makes Miss Gellhorn skirt the edges of sentimentality in describing it, sink lower and lower and get more lost and bewildered. Each story ends with the person or persons walking or riding off to an unknown and not-cared-about destination just after the biggest trouble, the final one that they don't seem to be able to cope with, has been encountered.

Miss Gellhorn has learned a lot about writing since her first book made somewhat of a succes de scandale two years ago. At her best she achieves a sort of pitiless power, and the last story, the one about the young girl, will not easily be forgotten by anyone who reads it. She cracks up on occasion, and slips from fine realism into shoddy romance—even into bathos. It may be so, but it just doesn't seem right, for instance, that a city-bred girl, who has known all the horrors of poverty, should say to a city-bred boy who used to hang around pool rooms: "Will you marry me the next day after we see the first crocus?" Or Maybe Old Mother Nature has a stronger influence on us urbanites than we suspect.

At any rate, there is one feeling, one emotion, that Miss Gellhorn gets across; and that is sympathy for her luckless subjects. She makes one ashamed of owning even a half dozen clean shirts.

The stories, it need hardly be said, although obviously they contain facts, incidents, and partial portraits of people Miss Gellhorn observed while working for the Government, are fiction. Whether they gain or lose thereby it is difficult to say. The people, with the xception of Mrs. Maddison and Ruby, in the last story, would probably seem more lifelike in a case history, but the helpless predicaments in which the characters find themselves are made more poignant by being fiction.

It is all agonizingly true to at least one part of life, and the incredulous need only take a trip to Hooverville or to the tenements. The scene of the last story is laid on the St. Louis riverfront. So there seems to be little reason why St. Louisans shouldn't be interested in this book by a former resident. But don't let the ominous preface by H. G. Wells scare you off!

Portrayals Slight As Silverpoint

MR. AND MRS. NORTH. By Richard Lockridge. (Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.)

MR. AND MRS. NORTH are the figments of a dramatic critic's off moments, created by Richard Lockridge of the New York Sun, and ushered into the world from time to time by the editors of the New Yorker. They are a quiet, agreeable, civilized married couple with that queer blending of metropolitan habits and slightly provincial attitudes characteristic of New Yorkers—or, more specifically, of the sort of people Mr. Lockridge probably meets at cocktail parties and theater lobbies and down in Connecticut of a weekend. Despite Mrs. North's somewhat wraith-like unpredictableness and Mr. North's occasional excursions down a baffled stream of consciousness, both are extremely normal. Their crotchets and predilections, their disputations and mutual affection, are all natural and likable. They are what are commonly referred to as Nice People.

Mr. Lockridge writes them up in a style so perishable in its seeming simplicity that one is likely to make the mistake of imagining that it is no style at all. His portrayals have the economy of line drawings; they are slight as silverpoint, graceful as silverpoint by Ingres. Yet they are neither quaint nor precious. The two characters are genuine beyond question; many will find them lovable. The humor of the situations in which they find themselves so deftly immersed is neither over-subtle nor raucous. Sometimes it is exquisite. Above all, this is intimate family humor, the humor of dinner-at-home, of stories about near relatives.

But those who conclude from this that Mr. Lockridge is a second Clarence Day are greatly mistaken. "Life With Father" is far more robust, more mellow and richer in insight and implication. Perhaps that is because it describes a hardier race and saltier personalities. Mr. and Mrs. North are quiet post-war people who live in apartments and have a cottage in the country. Beside them the Days are titanic.

Whatever a novel is (and there is room for many definitions) this definitely is not one. It is a collection of independent sketches—something between seventeenth-century "characters" and modern short stories. No time element or single narrative thread unites them. The chapters stood up as well alone as they do bound in cloth. Like nearly everything that has been published by the New Yorker, however, they are a more valid and trenchant commentary on the contemporary scene than may be apparent on the surface.

"To Be Famous and to Be Loved"

THAT WAS BALZAC. By George Middleton. (Random House, New York.)

THIS is the play that many a student of Balzac may well have planned to write some day, for no life needs less revision to make it theatrically sound than that of the great novelist. Paris was both his stage and his audience, and he walked always as if treading "the boards." The refusal of Evelina Hanska to marry him until six years after she was free and just before his death two months later furnished a ready-made climax with an intriguing problem. George Middleton's solution is probably the true one.

By way of prologue, two journalists are revealed in Rodin's studio ridiculing his prodigious statue of Balzac. The sculptor in denouncing them cries: "That was Balzac to Rodin! And a Rodin has a right to his vision." It is the Balzac represented by this figure in its proud pose, with Rabelaisian grin and great head reminding us that it was the birthplace of a thousand characters, that Middleton chose for his hero. Motivated by the two-fold desire "to be famous and to be loved," he tosses off novels and mistresses with amazing rapidity. Fame comes, and also Countess Hanska of Poland, to represent for years the fulfillment of his passion to be loved, but to puzzle him, finally, as she has puzzled the world ever since, by delaying her marriage until Balzac is on his deathbed. In a dialogue with Balzac's mother she bitterly explains that she feared to be cut off from her own aristocratic world, to be dragged into Balzac's life with its "complications, debts, evasions and petty bourgeois ideas." She feared also that she was only the "memory of another he still loved and tried to find in her." Her doubts are borne out by Balzac's dying call, "Dilecta! Dilecta!", the name of his first mistress.

Among the minor characters are Beranger, Victor Hugo, Alexandre Dumas, Berlioz, Rossini and George Sand. They and the society portrayed speak wittily and nastily, according to formula, of art and adultery. A scene between Balzac's creditors is too consciously Balzacian, and the hero sometimes grows tiresome in his cadenced bombast. But the play does capture, as its author wished, "the essence of the man," and is "effective theater."

No hope left at all! Well, if there's any left in Mrs. Maddison as she returns from the jail into which her son has been thrown for killing his sister's husband in a drunken brawl, it is very little indeed. And similarly, there is none left in Pete, who doesn't get his job back after the strike is ended; or in Jim Barr, who, in a last desperate effort to preserve his pride, steals a suit and a dress so that he and his girl can get married in style; or in the mother whose 11-year-old daughter unreasoningly, almost unknowingly, takes to prostitution to get a pair of roller skates and long-denied bags of candy.

The worst thing has caught up with all of them. Down and out to begin with, they, despite almost incredible courage which makes Miss Gellhorn skirt the edges of sentimentality in describing it, sink lower and lower and get more lost and bewildered. Each story ends with the person or persons walking or riding off to an unknown and not-cared-about destination just after the biggest trouble, the final one that they don't seem to be able to cope with, has been encountered.

Miss Gellhorn has learned a lot about writing since her first book made somewhat of a succes de scandale two years ago. At her best she achieves a sort of pitiless power, and the last story, the one about the young girl, will not easily be forgotten by anyone who reads it. She cracks up on occasion, and slips from fine realism into shoddy romance—even into bathos. It may be so, but it just doesn't seem right, for instance, that a city-bred girl, who has known all the horrors of poverty, should say to a city-bred boy who used to hang around pool rooms: "Will you marry me the next day after we see the first crocus?" Or Maybe Old Mother Nature has a stronger influence on us urbanites than we suspect.

At any rate, there is one feeling, one emotion, that Miss Gellhorn gets across; and that is sympathy for her luckless subjects. She makes one ashamed of owning even a half dozen clean shirts.

The stories, it need hardly be said, although obviously they contain facts, incidents, and partial portraits of people Miss Gellhorn observed while working for the Government, are fiction. Whether they gain or lose thereby it is difficult to say. The people, with the xception of Mrs. Maddison and Ruby, in the last story, would probably seem more lifelike in a case history, but the helpless predicaments in which the characters find themselves are made more poignant by being fiction.

It is all agonizingly true to at least one part of life, and the incredulous need only take a trip to Hooverville or to the tenements. The scene of the last story is laid on the St. Louis riverfront. So there seems to be little reason why St. Louisans shouldn't be interested in this book by a former resident. But don't let the ominous preface by H. G. Wells scare you off! O. F.

and to Be Loved"

Fame comes, and also Countess Hanska of Poland, to represent for years the fulfillment of his passion to be loved, but to puzzle him, finally, as she has puzzled the world ever since, by delaying her marriage until Balzac is on his deathbed. In a dialogue with Balzac's mother she bitterly explains that she feared to be cut off from her own aristocratic world, to be dragged into Balzac's life with its "complications, debts, evasions and petty bourgeois ideas." She feared also that she was only the "memory of another he still loved and tried to find in her." Her doubts are borne out by Balzac's dying call, "Dilecta! Dilecta!", the name of his first mistress.

* * *

Among the minor characters are Beranger, Victor Hugo, Alexandre Dumas, Berlioz, Rossini and George Sand. They and the society portrayed speak wittily and nastily, according to formula, of art and adultery. A scene between Balzac's creditors is too consciously Balzacian, and the hero sometimes grows tiresome in his cadenced bombast. But the play does capture, as its author wished, "the essence of the man," and is "effective theater."

Monumental Work in the Making

DICTIONARY OF AMERICAN ENGLISH ON HISTORICAL PRINCIPLES. Part I. By Sir William Craigie and James R. Hulbert, Editors. (University of Chicago Press, Chicago.)

AFTER more than a decade of painstaking labor, the foundation of what promises to be a massive and enduring monument has been completed. It is the first of 20 or more sections of a great lexicographical work intended to cover an important but neglected field: the part played by American usages in the development of the English language. Not only invaluable to philologists, the work also possesses great importance for those interested in tracing America's social and historical evolution.

Publication last April of an enlarged and rewritten edition of H. L. Mencken's "The American Language," the standard work on this fascinating subject, in effect prepared the way for issuance of the new reference work, and undoubtedly spread interest in it beyond purely scholarly circles.

In his first edition, Mencken took the view that American English was a dialect of British English, and that the differences between the two would continue to increase. His new edition expresses a conviction exactly opposite: that American forms now are dominant, and in time will make the surviving British usages into a dialect of the younger tongue. There is so much supporting evidence on all sides to question this theory. Hence, it is easy to see the present and increasing value of a dictionary of the President's English, ultimate successor to the King's.

The aim of the new work is to list, define and give the history of words and phrases originating in America, of those having greater currency here than elsewhere and those having a direct connection with the history and development of the country. An enormous amount of labor is obviously required for such an ambitious undertaking. Other authorities must be consulted, and American writings (not only books but also magazines, newspapers, records, letters and diaries, both printed and in manuscript) must be searched to discover the earliest usages and the exact shades of meaning. Since the work covers a virgin field, the problems of what words to include and which to omit must have required many editorial conferences.

To head this stupendous undertaking, the services of Sir William Craigie, an authority who won renown as co-editor of the monumental Oxford English Dictionary, were fortunately obtained. He began his work at the University of Chicago in 1925, aided by a staff of collaborators and also by voluntary contributors over the country. In the latter group, the preface singles out students at the universities of Missouri and Kansas for special credit. The research and publication have been made possible by grants from the General Education Board, the University of Chicago and the American Council of Learned Societies.

It is interesting to run through the first section, 116 pages listing words from A to Baggage, and note the words and phrases added to the language by Americans. Some of them, chosen at random, are abalone, all aboard, admission (fee), run afoul, air line, angel cake, aid society, aplenty, all-fired, amberjack, almighty dollar, Anglophobia, backwoods, back track, baggage car.

Another pastime in paging through the volume is to note how the course of opposition forces in American social and political life have added words, usually ephemeral, to the language. All such terms, much on the popular tongue at various periods, give hints of momentous controversies in our history: anti-federal, anti-assumptionist, anti-bank, anti-abolition, anti-coolie, anti-Bryanite, anti-Mason, anti-machine, anti-monopolist, anti-nullification, anti-prohibition, anti-saloon, anti-trust and so on for five large and closely printed pages. Since each example of usage is identified as to source and date, covering a wide range of writers and of years, a valuable group of source material is compactly compiled.

Mencken, in "The American Language," gives high praise to the project. (The editors, incidentally, have drawn heavily on Mencken's researches.) Another writer has called it "the greatest project now being carried on in the field of the humanities." Certain it is that the work, which will require perhaps a dozen years or longer to complete, will be called thrice blessed by scholars of the future, concerned in tracing the history and variations of our language.

The Life of a Great Saint and Leader

IGNATIUS LOYOLA, A General in the Church Militant. By Robert Harvey. (The Bruce Pub. Co., Milwaukee.)

THIS is no ordinary life of one of the greatest of Catholic saints. One of the volumes of the Science and Culture Series, written by a non-Catholic biographer, its preface by Rev. Husslein, S. J., of St. Louis University, should commend it to readers of this city and diocese. This reviewer, also a non-Catholic, finds that the eulogy in Dr. Husslein's preface is in no degree exaggerated.

The author, Rev. Robert Harvey, is minister of the Fort Garry United Church at Winnipeg. That one so trained should so enthusiastically and whole-heartedly add his volume of laudation to the other similar works by non-Catholics is a hopeful sign for toleration in religion.

This volume gives the reader a graphic picture of the period, four hundred years ago, when the birth of new ideas, embodied in the Reformation, drawing whole nations from their allegiance to the papacy and resulting in wars that devastated many lands, appeared to need some leader, militant truly, but devoted to the spirit of Christ, to form a band of self-sacrificing warriors for the faith. That leader was Ignatius of Loyola, and the little band of scholarly enthusiasts who took vows with him were chiefly instrumental in saving the Catholic church from perils within and without.

Under the influence of Ignatius and his Order of Jesus, says Mr. Harvey, "a few short years changed the face of Europe and impressed indelibly the New World." As Macaulay, in his History of England, said: "Before the Order had existed a hundred years, it had filled the whole world with memorials of great things done and suffered for the faith. No religious community could produce a list of men so variously distinguished; none had extended its operations over so vast a space; yet in none had there ever been such perfect unity of feeling and action."

This is not to blink the fact that, in later years, after the great founder of the Jesuit order had passed to his reward, interference in politics, contrary to his teachings, caused the Order to be banished from various countries and generally to be looked upon with disfavor. All this is well covered in the various encyclopedias. But Mr. Harvey's biography is concerned only with the life of Ignatius and some of his immediate followers, notably St. Francis Xavier. To him and to them Robert Harvey's biography awards the honors they so richly deserve. H. M. W.

Not for Restless Readers

THE RESTLESS UNIVERSE. By Max Born. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

INSTEAD of taking the reader on a trip through and beyond our solar system, the author, who is Stokes lecturer in mathematics at Cambridge, attacks his subject by boring from without. In a manner not too difficult, he leads the reader through the mazes of the newer physics, to which he has made important contributions.

Ever seeking something stable, he splits matter into its tiniest components, only to find each more restless than the one before. Molecule, atom, electron, ion, deutron, neutron, positron, all are in a constant state of turmoil. Some bounce about like billiard balls, others loop like a stunting airplane, while others find expression by exploding. Nowhere, the author concludes, is there firm ground. Truly, Archimedes could not have found a place in the universe upon which to rest his lever.

To anyone acquainted with physics, this volume provides an excellent means of brushing up on the many recent developments in science. The uninitiated, however, is likely to be thrown off his guard by the simplicity of the opening chapters and find himself, when the author is discussing light quanta, still holding fast to the method of counting molecules by pretending they are peas spread on a table top.

Whether or not he understands everything the author has to say, the reader will enjoy the novel margin drawings whereby he may flip the pages and watch the electron whiz around in the hydrogen atom, or the gas molecules bounce up and down against a piston. C. R. H.

Facts About Films

FILM AND THEATRE. By Allardyce Nicoll. (Thomas Y. Crowell Co., New York.)

WHEN, last spring, the director of one of New York's largest motion picture theaters told a group of university students that buying pictures was, for him, like buying the new fall line of shoes, that he was concerned only with what the public in turn would take from him, and added that the screen was "a super-tabloid for young and old, moron and genius," he sat down in the front seat for the year. His lambasting of art in the cinema got more space than any of the pontifical utterances of Will Hays, and has entered now into a book on motion picture theory.

The reason he drew fire was that an increasingly large section of the public, apart from critics, has come to recognize the "adult appeal," the intelligence applied and evidenced in the new screen entertainment.

Finding a firm stand on ground he is sure of, Prof. Nicoll states in "Film and Theater" the facts of the case and the direction they point.

He describes the particular province of the screen, its characteristic fluidity, its freedom of movement, its power to select or eliminate all things pictorial, its unique abilities to reveal mind, or to venture into fantasy and impressionism. His evidence is in the record of films widely known. If he neglects the "theater" part of his book and has a habit of saying, "Clearly this is a device which could reach realization only in the cinema," he may be pardoned, at least by the many others of us who regard the talking picture as the most powerful approach to the senses of sight and hearing yet devised by man.

If there be discriminating persons who would like to have the thrill of knowing about their motion pictures, and who would be willing to trade a fan's worship of Gable and Garbo for an understanding of John Ford, Fritz Lang and Rene Clair, "Film and Theater" will provide a highly valuable guide.

In the Land of the Plumed Serpent

ANCIENT LIFE IN MEXICO AND CENTRAL AMERICA. By Edward L. Hewett. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

WHEN a man spends a lifetime studying the Southwestern United States, Mexico and Central America, including 25 years of exploring and excavating from Chihuahua to Quirigua and personal contact with the surviving tribes, it is apparent that he is so interested in his subject and so permeated by it that he is going to have a holding story to tell. If, in addition to having thought and felt Indian for all these years, he also has a pleasing style and avoids the technicalities of his profession, he is going to write a book that students of antiquities will hail, that general readers will appreciate and that browsers will follow to the last page.

As the author says in the beginning, his is not a mere archeological work, a catalogue of ruined towns and a study of linguistics and physical characteristics. What Hewett has done is to interpret the Indian race in terms of Indian culture instead of in terms of European civilization.

Most absorbing, perhaps, is the story of the feeble, straggling band of Aztecs that came from the North in 1325 A. D., and gained a foothold in the swamps near what is now Mexico City. Weakest of all the tribes, they dominated the country in another century only to fall beneath the Spaniards' steel in another 100 years. Dr. Hewett lays the fall of the nation to the Aztec priests' calamitous predictions, the new mode of warfare, the tacttics of allying Indian against Indian, and the indomitable courage of the Spanish invaders.

Hewett gives Cortez his dues for cruelty and then interrupts his narrative to make a remark undoubtedly intended for Mussolini: "Warfare in this year of our Lord 1936 is a display of cowardice and crime on a colossal scale. But it is thus in this age of progress that 'civilization' is brought to the 'backward' peoples. If this be civilization, give me the stone ax and the plumed serpent."

Dr. Hewett, who is president of the Schools of American Research of the Archeological Institute of America, professor of archeology at the University of Mexico and University of Southern California, has written a volume worthy of its place on the shelf beside his "Ancient Life in the American Southwest," which was received with high praise in 1930. He Seeks Simplicity

THE LAST LANDFALL. By Desmond Malone. (Doubleday Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

THIS autobiography tells the story of a man who is unsuccessful by the world's standards, but is the satisfied possessor of a quiet mind, a seeing eye, and an inappetent body. His career as a ship's wireless operator being ended by deafness at the age of 26, he can still say: "What has been has been, and I have had my hour." To most people that hour would have been far from enough for a lifetime, but he has a philosopher's aim. "All my life I have been struggling after simplicity—simplicity of thought, of statement, of life."

His early years in a monastery school prepared him for a priesthood he did not fill; his first ship produced some salty characters, but no close friends; his travels gave him glimpses of many lands, but little true knowledge of them; the World War came to him second hand, first making him captive in a German submarine and then in a German prison camp. Living a lonely life, he is never lonesome, for he is one of those who live within their own minds. As free of sensuality as Santayana's Oliver, the nearest he ever comes to fulfilling the sailor's reputation with the ladies is sitting in a park in Panama City observing the graceful walk of the senoritas and kissing Georgette under an umbrella in Brest.

Malone's writing is an interesting mixture of exquisite sensitivity, mundane factuality, and humorous discernment. There is pure poetry in such descriptions as this: "The whole sky shivered and blazed with star clusters that struck your heart cold with the remote and pitiless beauty of eternity."

The humorous twist given to most of his characterizations is probably more a reflection of himself than of the characters described. An easy-going personality is reflected in his informal style but, as is the case with many autobiographers, he has a definite consciousness of his reader which is rather disconcerting. M. E. M.

MURDER IN MESOPOTAMIA. By Agatha Christie. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

THE happy combination of unceasing supply and insatiable demand has made the creation of detective stories a mass production enterprise. One of the best in the business, both in contributing notably to the supply and stimulating the demand, is Agatha Christie, whose "Murder of Roger Ackroyd" and "Mystery of the Blue Train" set high marks in this branch of literature. Her newest story, "Murder in Mesopotamia," holds its own with these.

The scene is a site of archeological exploration near Baghdad; the mystery is a strange murder that occurs there, in an appropriate setting of foreboding and terror. Hercule Poirot, Miss Christie's master detective, providentially arrives on the scene and, after all present, for quite plausible reasons, have come under suspicion, the criminal is exposed. Considerable ingenuity goes into construction of the plot, and real story telling ability into the narration. Good for an enjoyable evening of suspense and relaxation. F. G.

ONE MAN CAN CHECK COLORADO RIVER FLOW

Senator Pittman Says He Is Amazed by Control at Boulder Dam.

By the Associated Press.

BOULDER CITY, Nev., Sept. 24.—One man can turn on or off the flow of the mighty Colorado River with ease. "It is amazing," said United States Senator Key Pittman, standing in the water master's room at Boulder Dam.

"Imagine a man in St. Louis stopping the flow of the Mississippi River there. That's just such a thing as these little handles here do."

The Senator fingered the controls as Ralph Lowry, construction engineer in charge of Boulder Dam, explained their mission.

"These valves control a flow of 60,000 cubic feet a second," said Lowry.

"That's the whole flow of the Colorado River!" exclaimed the Senator. "It's as much as the Mississippi. What a marvel of power this is in the hands of one man."

The twenty-story concrete powerhouse building in which they were standing is dwarfed by the highest dam in the world, which rises 727 feet above bedrock. The 12 84-inch needle valve outlets, gigantic intake towers and the great cylinder gates all are controlled from the water master's panel.

"I am amazed every time I visit Boulder Dam," the Senator said. "There is always something new, something startling to see."

Boulder Dam was dedicated by President Roosevelt a year ago. The first power was turned on by President Roosevelt, by remote control, Sept. 11. The first big generator, 115,000 horsepower, will start turning within a few weeks and power will flow into Los Angeles 300 miles away.

That will mean the start of paying back to the Government the cost of the $165,000,000 project. Ultimately, 1,835,000 horsepower will be developed, three times greater than any other power project in the world. In 50 years the Government will be repaid, with interest, on the basis of contracts already signed up for this power, it is expected.

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

American Theater Opens With "Romeo and Juliet"

Second Major Attempt to Put Shakespeare on the Screen in Road Showing Tonight — Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard in Title Roles.

FOLLOWING, by the space of about a year, another elaborate attempt to make the screen safe for Shakespeare, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's transcription of "Romeo and Juliet" opens a road show engagement at the American Theater at 8:30 o'clock tonight. Two performances will be given daily during the run.

With Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard as the immortal lovers, the supporting players are Edna May Oliver as the Nurse, John Barrymore as Mercutio, C. Aubrey Smith as Lord Capulet, Basil Rathbone as Tybalt, Andy Devine as Peter, Henry Kolker as Friar Laurence, Violet Kemble-Cooper as Lady Capulet, Ralph Forbes as Paris, Reginald Denny as Benovolio, Maurice Murphy as Balthasar, Katherine DeMille as Rosaline, Conway Tearle as the Prince of Verona, Virginia Hammond as Lady Montague, Robert Warwick as Lord Montague and Vernon Downing, Ian Wolfe, Anthony Kemble-Cooper, Anthony Marsh, Howard Wilson, Carlyle Blackwell and John Bryan in lesser roles.

Played without the intermission and overture originally appended, the film runs two hours. It encompasses the full action of the Shakespearean original, omitting only two minor scenes. Not a line of dialogue has been added, according to advance notices, and to guarantee that the poetic lines shall not suffer from faulty sound production, new sound equipment has been installed in all theaters, including the American, in which the film is to be road shown.

Produced by the late Irving Thalberg, husband of Norma Shearer, and directed by George Cukor, who won fame with "Little Women" and "David Copperfield," the film version of "Romeo and Juliet" is an effort to place on the screen a kind of Shakespeare that will meet the requirements of the scholars and at the same time interest the film public, thereby opening to Hollywood its greatest potential dramatic library.

Since "A Midsummer Night's Dream" last year did not have the resources of cast that "Romeo and Juliet" has, and since the only other film Shakespeare on the market, Elisabeth Bergner's "As You Like It," is considered more or less a photographed stage play, "Romeo and Juliet" is a true test of Shakespeare on the screen, and Hollywood is sure to be guided by its reception.

TO be certain that the film would be authentic Shakespeare, the studio engaged Prof. William Strunk Jr., of Cornell University as literary adviser, collected all available editions of the play used in the last three and a half centuries and took the original Cambridge edition as its guide.

Writing of the script was entrusted to Talbot Jennings, holder of an A. M. degree in his own right and one of the screen adaptors of "Mutiny On the Bounty" and the forthcoming "Good Earth." Jennings omitted certain speeches, transposed others to places designed to make the continuity smoother and introduced the Shepherd's Song from "Twelfth Night" to accompany one of Romeo's moods, but added nothing of his own authorship. The principal movie touches were in developing the spectacles, such as street scenes, the Capulet ball and Juliet's funeral procession and in picturing events, such as several in Mantua, which Shakespeare only described. Submitting the motion picture script and the original play to candid comparison, the studio has issued both in a motion picture edition of "Romeo and Juliet."

Some 12 acres of sets were constructed for the picture, some 1250 costumes made. Camera crews and research experts were sent to Verona, Italy, city in which Shakespeare set the tragedy, to take down architectural details, and paintings of the old masters were studied for costume designs. For 10 stage sets and 24 scene-shifts in the original play, the picture employs 260 scenes.

Prof. Strunk has pointed out that Shakespeare's manner of writing, in swiftly changing scenes, is closer akin to modern scenario form than to present-day stage drama, which tries to cut down the number of scenic changes. Scenery in Shakespeare's day existed largely in the audience's imagination, or was suggested in the dialogue, so required no expensive outlay or long intermissions.

As stage settings were improved, scenes of the play were eliminated or combined with others. No stage version in modern times has stayed strictly with Shakespeare's original, and some well-recognized ones have gone so far as to change the ending from a tragic to a happy one. The screen version keeps to tragedy, with the lovers both dying in the tomb.

Highly popular in the day in which it was written, "Romeo and Juliet" ranks as Shakespeare's most popular work with theater-goers of all nations. The story, which has been the inspiration of grand opera and symphonic composers as well as dramatists, was not original with Shakespeare, but was current over Europe before his time. Scholars generally agree that no Romeo and Juliet ever lived and loved in Verona, in spite of what tourists are told, and that Shakespeare went no further than Arthur Brookes' long narrative poem, "The Tragicall Historye of Romeus and Juliet" for his source material.

Mummers to Present "Squaring the Circle" Next Saturday Night

THE first performance of Valentin Katayev's Soviet farce, "Squaring the Circle," opening the Mummers' ninth season, will take place at the Wednesday Club auditorium, Taylor avenue and Westminster place, on Saturday evening of this week. A second performance is set for Friday, Oct. 9.

Katayev, leader among Soviet writers, drafted the play in 1928 as his contribution to the spirit of good-humored and healthy "self-criticism" in reference to Moscow's housing conditions. Presented with great success at the Moscow Art Theatre, the comedy remains a favorite throughout the Soviet Union. The play has been produced in London, and ran at the Lyceum Theatre in New York for three months. The story is that of the two mismated couples living in one small room in a Moscow tenement.

The Mummers' production, under the direction of Willard H. Holland, makes use of Russian music, dancing and singing. The cast is composed of Leland Brewer, Mary Hohenberger, Lucile Williamson, Bernard Galvin, Frank Novotny, Fred Birkicht and Louis Turner.

New Stage Setting For Symphony, to Improve Acoustics

A NEW stage setting for the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, designed by Leopold Stokowski with a view to eliminating acoustic difficulties, will be put into use when the orchestra opens its fifty-seventh season at the Municipal Auditorium Opera House on Oct. 30.

Frequent complaints have been made during the past two seasons that the orchestra has been in the Opera House that the sound failed to rebound from the canvas-covered set but passed through its walls and ceiling. Last spring the Symphony Society organized a committee to find a remedy.

Stokowski, an expert in acoustic research, was consulted when he appeared here with the Philadelphia Symphony last May and after making tests, expressed the opinion that the acoustic qualities of the Opera House itself were excellent but that a new stage set, following scientific principles, would be required.

His offer of his services in designing a proper set was accepted and following completion of his season's activities, he submitted sketches and specifications, which are being followed to the letter. Similar to backgrounds used by the Philadelphia, Boston and New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestras, the set will resemble a half-opened shell. Side and rear walls and ceiling will be built of white pine covered with plywood instead of canvas. The most drastic change will be in the elevation of the ceiling, made of four sections rising from a 20-foot elevation in the rear to a 34-foot frontage. The front ceiling elevation formerly was 24 feet.

The higher ceiling, together with the solid wood walls, is calculated to bring forth greater resonance and project the full tonal value. The set will bear no decorative pattern, as Stokowski's specifications call only for painting of solid neutral effect. Improvements in the lighting system call for the installation of border lights in front of the proscenium arch to illuminate soloists, conductor and front row members of the orchestra. The sections of the ceiling will have border illumination necessary for the full personnel. Cost of the set, in excess of $3000, is to be borne by the city from funds set aside for completion of the Auditorium. The set will be available to any musical organization using the Auditorium.

"Craig's Wife" Again Is Strong Dramatic Work

By Colvin McPherson

BACK in the Twenties, if you remember, George Kelly wrote a play, "Craig's Wife," about a hausfrau so devoted to her domicile that she drove her husband away and more or less wrecked the whole set-up, which she had thought foolproof. Mr. Kelly won a Pulitzer prize with his creation and that fact, I think, is sufficiently called to attention in three-foot letters on the Fox Theater marquee this week. "Craig's Wife" is still an extraordinarily dramatic work, even for those who saw Chrystal Herne do Mrs. Walter Craig on the stage and Irene Rich go through the motions on the silent screen. Rosalind Russell, in the present instance, seems to me to be more the type than either of her predecessors in the role. The best-looking and the haughtiest Craig chatelaine to date, she seems to mean it when she gives the servants the devil, shooshes John Boles (he's Craig) off her best bedspread, runs her fingers over the table tops for dust and insults a neighbor. By her fidelity to the role, Miss Russell, heretofore only a kind of plumed serpent in the pictures, steps into the class of star material and if she ever again is shoved into support of some of the Gable-Crawford or Crawford-Montgomery combinations, will be miscast. It is to be hoped that the distastefulness of Mrs. Craig herself will not estrange the public from Miss Russell nor type her in distasteful roles. She is too fine an actress to lose that way. In "Craig's Wife," she is surrounded by a first-rate cast. Boles, who likely never will get one of those little gold statues from the Academy for his art and science, has more spunk in the quarrels with his better half than he has usually in pictures. Alma Kruger, the grandmother of "These Three," also does some neat battling with Harriet Craig, and Thomas Mitchell, long of the stage, steals a reel for himself as Fergus Passmore. About Mr. Mitchell, more later. The minor players in "Craig's Wife" all seem to do better than ordinarily, so praise may be apportioned to the writing of the play, its screen adaptation and the direction of Dorothy Arzner. The screen play varies a little from the original but only in details of no great significance. In contrast to so many screen dramas in which the best plotting is to have the hero leave the room before the heroine can say what's on her mind, the Craigs square off and have a real hearty quarrel. In contrast to reconciliations that wait only on the last reel to take place, "Craig's Wife" drives on to its certain conclusion. It's an unusual picture.

The components of the Fox's second film, "Adventure in Manhattan," are the smart-aleck reporter who is good and knows it, the girl friend who will eat baked beans with him and love it, and the suave jewel-thief of two continents who was believed dead but has come back for something or other. In order, as Rudy Vallee would say, Joel McCrea, Jean Arthur and Reginald Owen. Music, please. All these persons have met before and have played at the same sports. "Adventure in Manhattan" varies, then, only in being accomplished with a little more finesse and on a little grander scale. Thomas Mitchell is in this one, too, and he steals more than Reginald Owen could hope to, with all his craft and artifice. Sitting at his city editor's desk, he steals the show.

The Gorgeous Hussy.

DESPITE several demerits, "The Gorgeous Hussy," at Loew's, is a picture of more than ordinary interest. Letting Robert Taylor go play while we talk this over, there is, in the first place, its recreation of a stalwart period of American history, the era of Old Hickory. Its story, about President Andrew Jackson's defense of the name of a Washington tavernkeeper's daughter, illumines the No. 1 episode of snobbery in official society. Now "The Gorgeous Hussy" is neither history nor fiction, but a mixture of both by Samuel Hopkins Adams. Joan Crawford puts on some voluminous skirts and plays Peggy O'Neale in a most ladylike manner. She would never be called more than just "gorgeous" for her behavior at Loew's. She is nice to the Jacksons, she falls in love with Melvyn Douglas, marries Robert Taylor, loses him at sea and finally accepts Franchot Tone. Meanwhile, Lionel Barrymore as Andrew Jackson has done rather well for himself and has become President. It is only a matter of time and tragedy in his own affairs until he takes up the cudgel for Joan. Barrymore's Andrew Jackson is a marble carving. So magnificent is his make-up that only in the fact that he dominates the picture would he be recognized as a Barrymore. Acting opportunities there are for Miss Crawford, too. As one who would argue at great length for her ability, I find it pleasant to see her doing something beside thickening her voice, downing sherry flips and tossing crockery over the place. The sherry mark is on "The Gorgeous Hussy," wherein she takes to the glass twice for no good reason, but at least Senator Randolph doesn't send her gardenias to remind her of his affection. In fact, "The Gorgeous Hussy" has a "Sweet Alice" quality to it that makes it quite charming. And since you're beginning to ask about Robert Taylor, he's only a small part of it, only a sailor-boy, or as the news reel commentators always say when they see sailor-boys, a future Admiral. He goes to sea and doesn't come back. And it would be telling to recount what happens to Joan finally, after Washington has talked its tongue loose about her and Old Hickory has kicked out his whole Cabinet over the affair. The film makes sense, it has many moments of fine acting and it is romantic and tender.

Stage Struck.

AWAKENING suddenly in the dark at the Ambassador, one sees Dick Powell whipping a musical show into shape, Jeanne Madden trying to crash it and Joan Blondell, the temperamental star, crashing on the inside. The show must go on. Dick and Joan hate each other, Dick and Jeanne (new, comes from Scranton, Pa.) love each other, Warren William promotes things. The Yacht Club Boys spend a good deal of time waving hands and pushing faces into the cameras as they spiel about the tax situation. Somewhere near the front of the picture there is Lulu McConnell, as Dick's agent, who has a nice scene to himself. This is the same Lulu, I seem to recall, who went up and down the country on the Orpheum circuit a few years ago with an uproariously funny bridge game act. She does not pass unnoticed this time. Miss Blondell gets a great many laughs, too, on her caricature of the cheap artiste. It was a knockout, I thought, when Gladys George did it in "Personal Appearance" here last spring. Jeanne Madden, the new ingenue, has a good singing voice but was maneuvered into some unfortunate camera angles.

"Thank You, Jeeves," which leap-frogs with "Stage Struck" this week, is designed to bring a new character to the screen, to start off Jeeves, the P. G. Wodehouse butler, on a screen career as long as Charlie Chan's. It probably succeeds in its intention. Arthur Treacher has been Jeeves for a long, long time without being called that.

The Case of the Velvet Claws.

PERRY MASON, that highly active synthesis of shyster and sleuth, is back again at the Missouri, protecting a double-crossing client from a murder charge and trying to figure things out. The victim is a broker who has owned a blackmailing gossip sheet. The story has more angles than "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" and finally is just too, too flippant.

"Walking on Air" tells of a wealthy young lady who wants to marry the wrong man, which her father won't let her do. So she hires Gene Raymond to masquerade as a fake nobleman and give her father the second of two evils, between which he will have to choose. Love follows. Mr. Raymond, under some romantic stimulus, has taken up singing and insists on warbling far into the night.

"Anthony Adverse," with its clipping of the better passages of the Hervey Allen novel, has been moved to the Orpheum. The St. Louis Theater, with the second run of "Girls' Dormitory," has a variety program. Larry Blake, who does impersonations of screen people and politicians, tops the entertainment.

Rosalind Russell, who plays "Craig's Wife," at the Fox Theater.

Hollywood Gets to Be Film City in Name Only

Well-Known Section of Los Angeles Steadily Losing Major Studios to Other Localities — Old Fox Plant Latest to Be Evacuated.

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 26.

ALREADY merely a name that stands for motion pictures, Hollywood is about to lose another of its movie factories.

The gradual evacuation of the old Fox film plant on Western avenue shortly gets under way, the units working there transferring their activities to the wider spaces of Twentieth Century-Fox's 200-acre "Movietone City" in West Los Angeles.

Hollywood, which is officially an unbounded section of Los Angeles despite its own postoffice, Chamber of Commerce and daily newspaper, is now the production seat of only four major studios, although its palm-shaded thoroughfares are dotted with lots where pictures—and some major pictures—are made.

Paramount, R-K-O, Columbia and United Artists are the chief film centers within the mythical boundaries of the non-existent town. A rental studio, General Service, houses Emanuel Cohen's company with Mae West where millionaire aviator Howard Hughes once made "Hell's Angels." D. W. Griffith's former studio, home of "Intolerance," "The Birth of a Nation" and other early films, is now the abode of the independent concern, Talisman.

Warner Brothers, quartered in Burbank, occasionally use their Hollywood plant, where the first talkies were made, for overflow production, and the old Vitagraph studio, in Eastern Hollywood, sometimes is opened for the Warner cameras. But Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Hal Roach and RKO-Pathe studios are in Culver City, Universal is in Universal City where Carl Laemmle first planted it, and deeper in the "Valley" is Republic, where Mack Sennett used to hurl pies.

The immense passing of Fox's "Western Avenue" plant stirs filmland's sentimental memories and recalls a 20-year pageant of the movies.

The first picture made there was "The Fall of a Nation," in 1915. Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," made it; then William Fox deserted his Edendale plant to take over the lot in Hollywood. Western Avenue was newly paved then, there were no sidewalks, and the studio rested amid orange and lemon groves.

"FIGHTING BLOOD," starring William Farnum, was the first film made there for Fox. Farnum, the star, was to become filmland's highest paid actor at $10,000 a week. He and Oscar Apfel, who directed, both are character players now.

Tom Mix was doing two-reel Westerns when Sol Wurtzel, producer, who took charge of the lot 19 years ago and has remained, came on the scene. Wurtzel put Mix into a feature, "Cupid's Roundup," and Mix was on his way to fame and fortune. The stages then were all outdoors, and Westerns were a bumper crop.

Came Theda Bara, who slithered her way through many perfumed reels before fans found out she was plain Theodosia Goodman and plain American. Miss Bara, the wife of Director Charles Brabin, now lives in retirement in her Beverly Hills home, content to let her "vampire" fame rest.

A long parade of faces passed before the cameras. There were Gladys Brockwell, dead now, Jewel Carmen, Shirley Mason, George O'Brien, Buck Jones, George Walsh, Madge Bellamy, Margaret Livingston, Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe——. You can count on few fingers the names that still mean anything at the box office. . . .

A wistful red-haired extra girl got her chance in "Seventh Heaven" on the lot, and Janet Gaynor became a name. A hungry extra boy, waiting outside the walls, was called in for a test—and Charles Farrell started on his career.

The growing pains of silent films were over now. A director named F. W. Murnau made a picture called "Sunrise," heralded as an artistic accomplishment, and other pantomimed gems unreeled.

And then in the last of productions appeared the "Movietone Follies." Talk! Droves of Broadway stage players, hastily signed, arrived in haste, appeared briefly, departed. Some of them remained for ultimate triumph: George Brent, Dorothy Jordan, Marguerite Churchill, a few others.

"In Old Arizona," the lot's first talkie, brought back Warner Baxter and opened the way to sound recording outdoors.

In a blaze of color, latest screen advance, the studio closes its final chapter. "Ramona" was one of the last films to be completed there.

Ambassador's First "Pit-Band" Program

Inaugurating its "pit band" policy next Friday, the Ambassador will have Morey Amsterdam, comedian, Mable Todd, singer, and Tony Romano, guitar player and rhythm singer, all of the radio, as its featured performers. Paul Ash will head the band of local musicians, playing song numbers from the "Hit Parade" on the air.

The entire show, which will accompany a picture presentation, will be staged in the orchestra pit, which is being reconstructed and redecorated for that purpose. The idea is a new one which has been tried out successfully in the East.

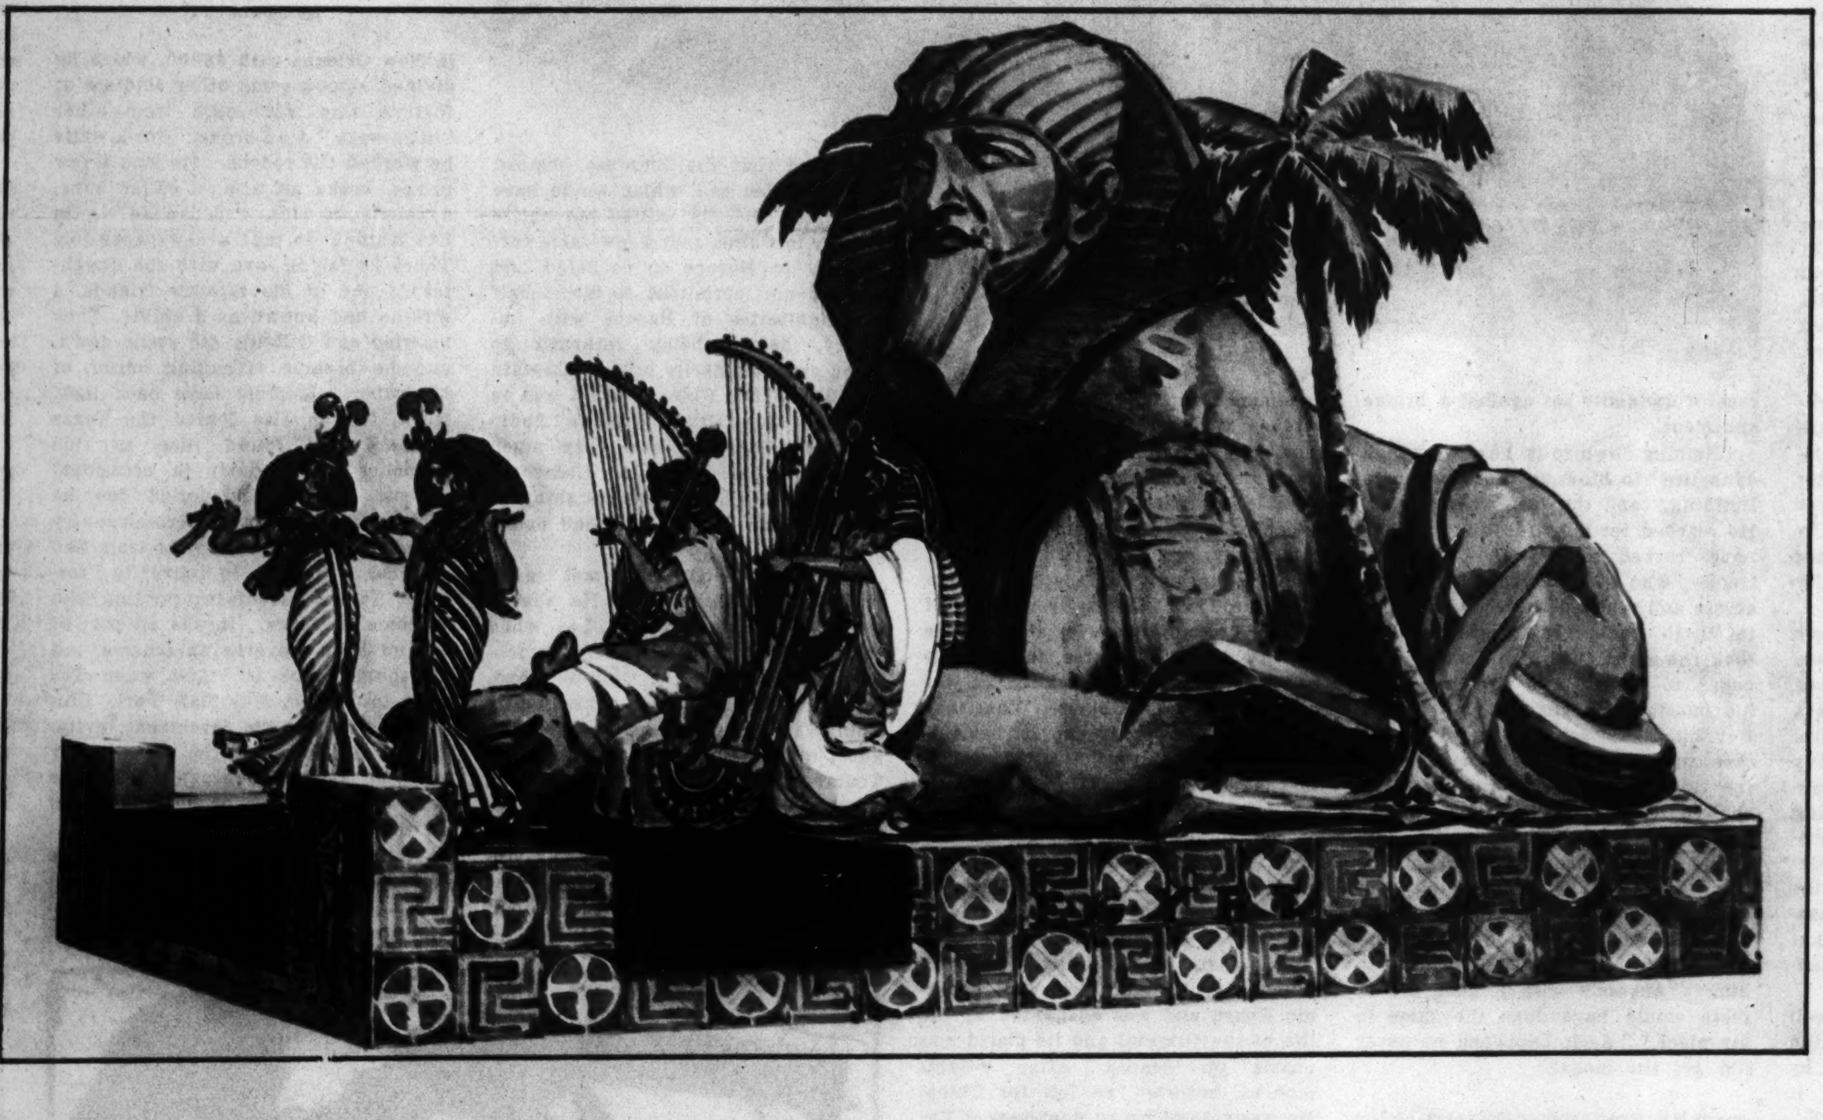
'MANY LANDS' to Visit St. Louis in Veiled Prophet's Parade

Twenty Floats Will Reveal the Customs and Costumes of Peoples Far and Near.



"THE VEILED PROPHET VISITS MANY LANDS"—or many lands are to "visit" the streets of St. Louis, either way you take it—in the "fifty-eighth annual" parade of the Veiled Prophet on Tuesday night, October 6.

On the following night he will crown his Queen before a "select" gathering of thousands in the big Convention Hall of the Municipal Auditorium. But the parade is his treat for the people, and for the children, who yearly line the streets in swarming throngs from his Den on Ranken avenue along the seven-mile loop of the parade route, which goes west as far as Vandeventer avenue, east as far as Broadway and then back to the Den.

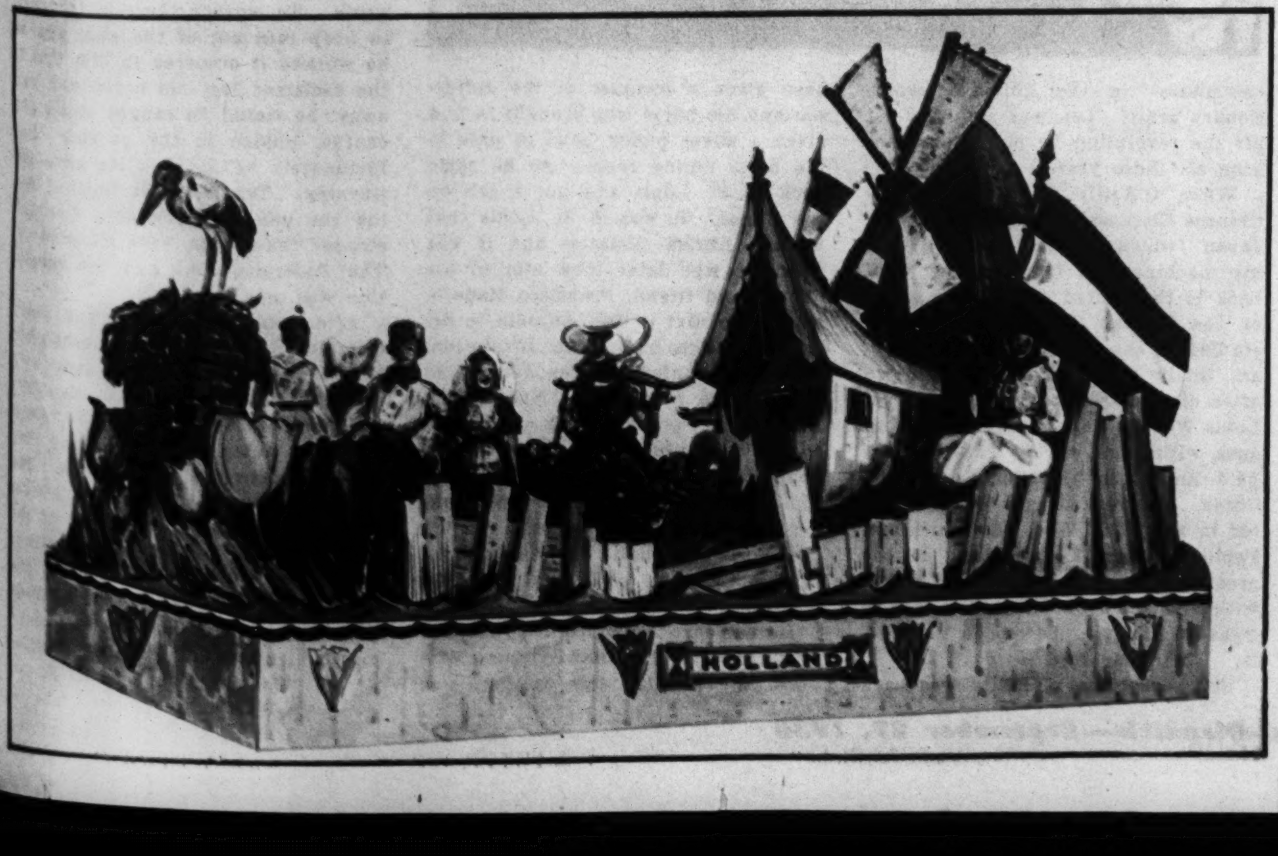
"Many lands" have been a recent problem to themselves and their neighbors, and it is reported that they have been no less a problem to His Mysterious Majesty. Insignia have had to be changed on a few of the floats with changing institutions in "many" lands.

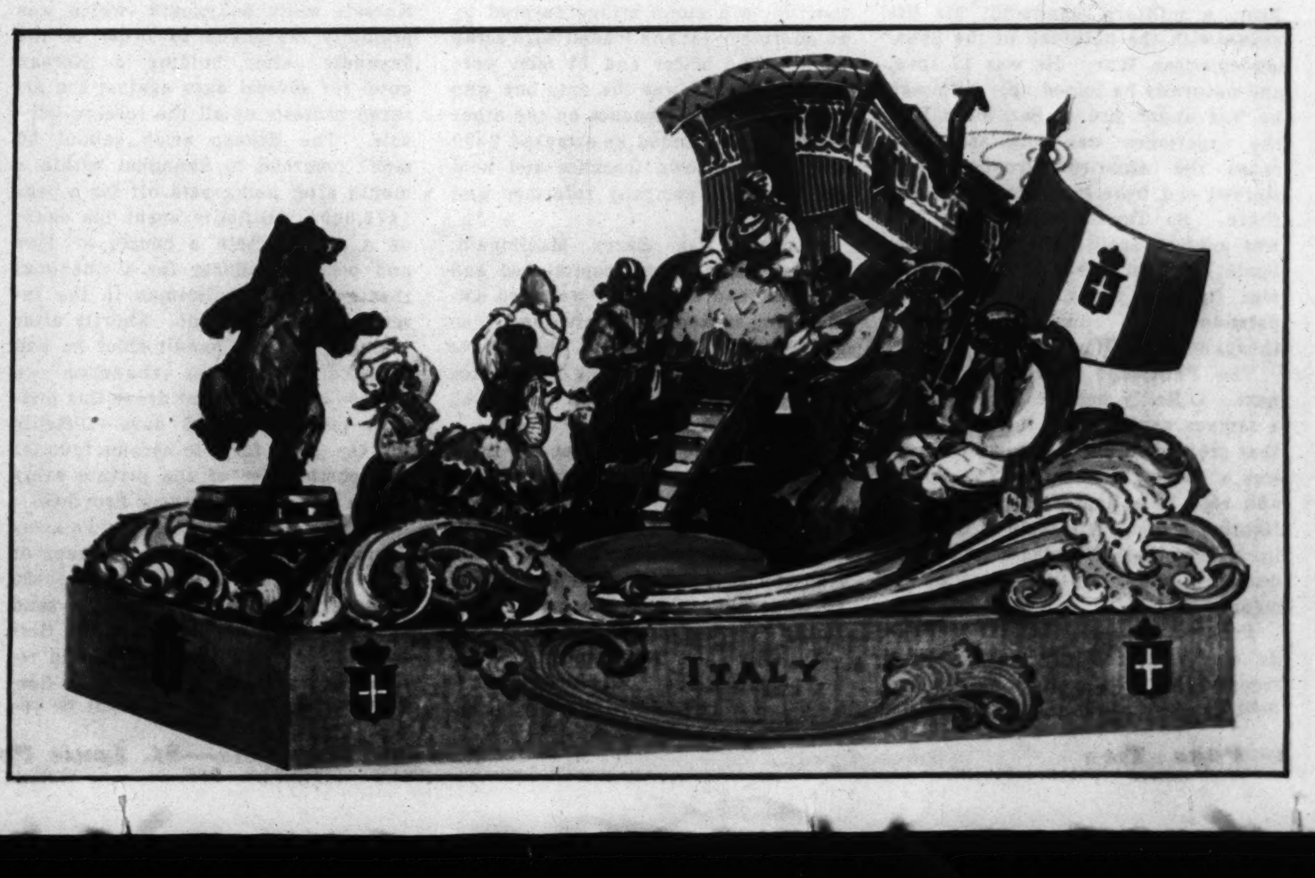
The parade will include 20 floats, as always, led by the Prophet, as always. One of them will represent the United States dressed in all its native legend and tradition—Uncle Sam, the Goddess of Liberty, the noble Red Man, the horn of plenty. Other countries, too, will be represented in their traditional glory, without too laborious a thought to recent history.

On this page are pictures of four of the floats, reproduced in colors from the original drawings of the Prophet's artists and historians. Above, India is pictured in a glimpse of native royalty in what is called the Perahera procession. Drummers and trumpeters surround the royal white elephant; attendants with flags and peacock feathers follow him.

In the center of the page is the great Sphinx of Egypt, towering over palm trees, looking over and beyond a pair of harpists and a pair of dancers with its eyes of stone.

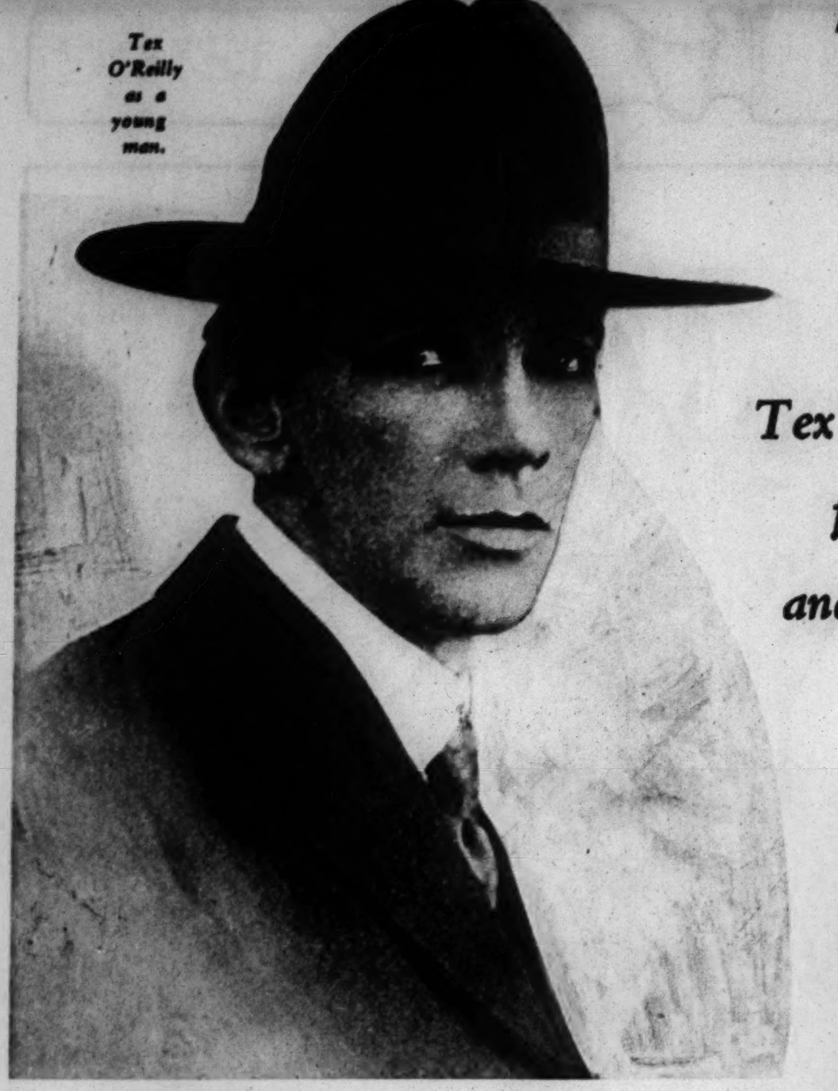
Below, at the left, are the tulips, the stork, the windmill, the curious hats and voluminous dresses, the baggy trousers and wooden shoes of Holland. And at the right, for storied Italy, is a merry camp of gypsies, with guitar and tambourines, girls and a fortune-teller and a dancing bear. For years the parade and ball were held on the same evening, and that was a jam. An innovation this year is removal of the ball from the Coliseum to the Auditorium.



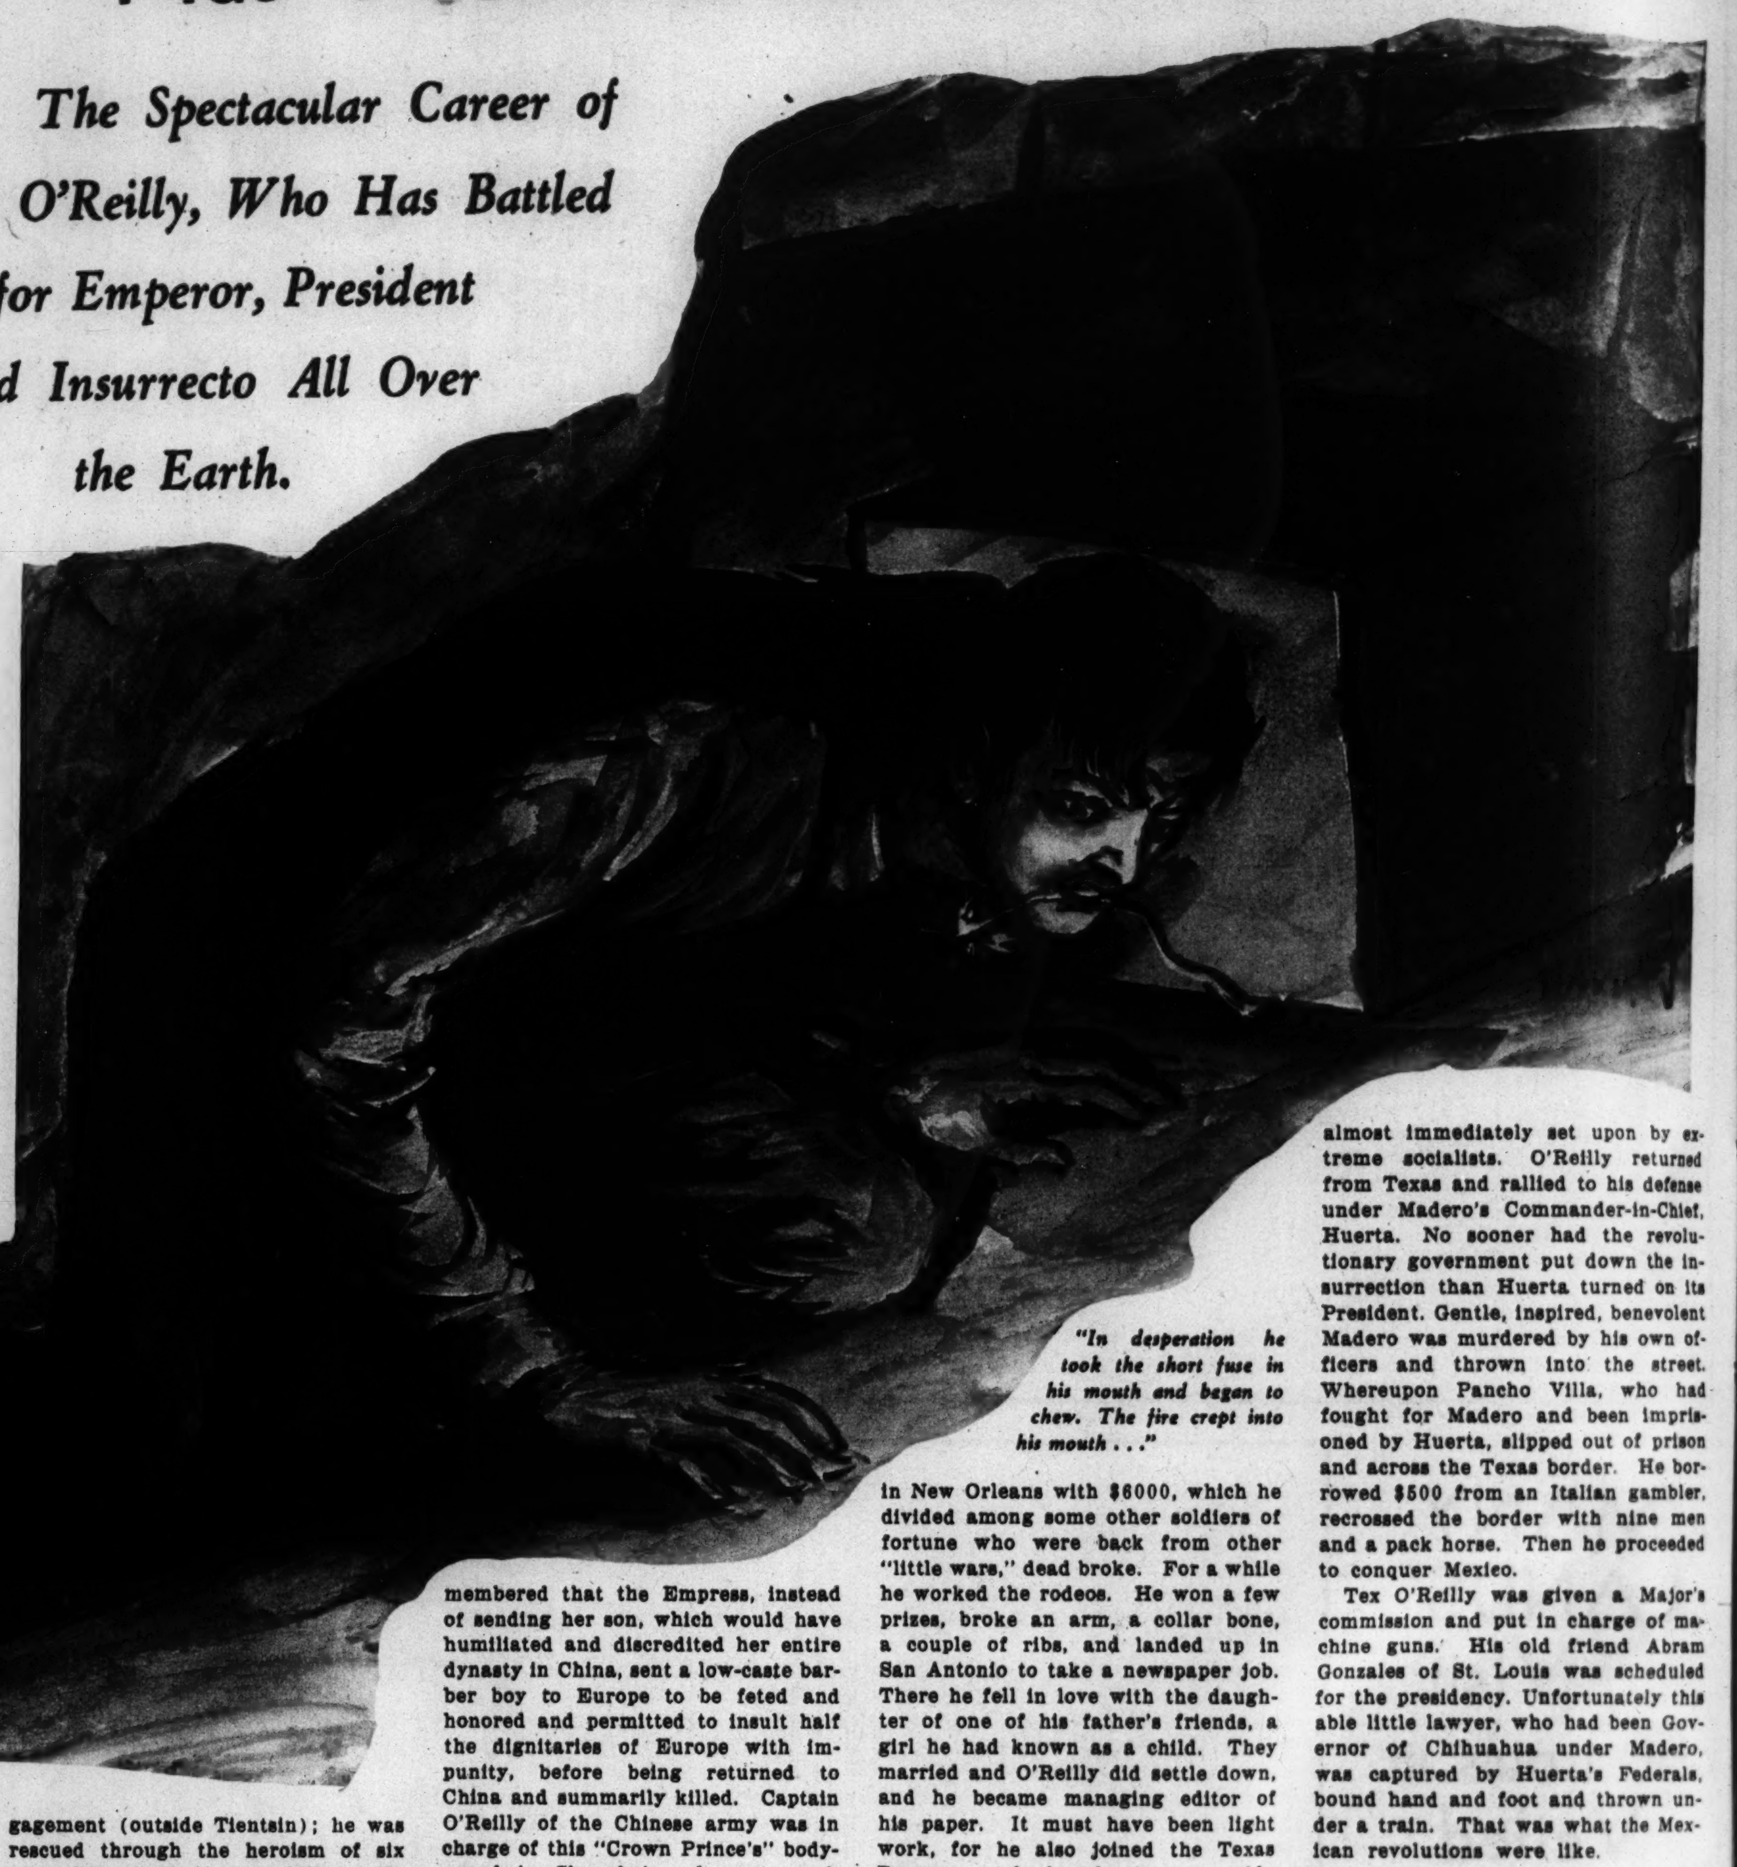


'BORN to RAISE HELL', He Now Has NOTHING to FIGHT FOR

The Spectacular Career of Tex O'Reilly, Who Has Battled for Emperor, President and Insurrecto All Over the Earth.



Tex O'Reilly as a young man.



"In desperation he took the short fuse in his mouth and began to chew. The fire crept into his mouth . . ."

By MAX PUTZEL
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

I MUST be enthusiastic about a cause before I can fight, and somehow of late I seem to have run completely out of causes. I have helped save a number of countries—and now, look at the damn things!" The speaker is Tex O'Reilly (born to raise hell), a soldier of fortune. Lowell Thomas, professionally a collector of soldiers of fortune, gives Tex his imprimatur as "fightingest adventurer I ever met." The lean, scarred Texan has lived joyously through 10 wars. The disappointment of his life, he says, is that he wasn't allowed to fight in the World War. They considered him too old. But this didn't prevent him from fighting the bloodiest war of his life several years after the Armistice had been signed. Tex has fought for Emperor, Empress, King, Dictator, President and Insurrecto. He has fought because he loved to fight and could always talk himself into the belief he was fighting for a cause. Not that he is stupid by any means. He's not. He can sum up the salient features of a political or social issue with remarkable keenness and economy. He has been intimate with many men distinctly in the thinking class, and not fighters. But like many more clever men he is motivated more largely by the way he feels about things than by the way he thinks. And usually he feels like a good fight.

Mrs. Edward S. O'Reilly, Tex's wife, has another theory about soldiers of fortune. The trouble with them as she sees it is that they never have a fortune and never get one and refuse to fight for money. Nevertheless Tex has made elaborate attempts to support her. He has been a managing editor, a magazine writer, the representative of big business and middle-sized business. He manages to get by. No one could doubt that he is a useful man and able, despite the fact that he is regarded as sentimental and bellicose.

Tex's story as dictated to Lowell Thomas was recently published for the first time (as a whole, that is) by Doubleday, Doran. Appropriately it is entitled "Born to Raise Hell," though Tex's birth—on a ranch in San Saba County in 1881—is probably one of the least interesting phases of his career. Skip it, then, and go on to something else, the hell raising. From a military standpoint his life began with the outbreak of the Spanish-American War. He was 17 then, and naturally he joined up. Although he was under fire at San Juan Hill, the experience was unpleasant because the American troops nearly starved and were inappropriately outfitted. So Tex O'Reilly's first war was against Spain. His last was for Spain, against Abd el Krim—who was fighting for a cause Tex had defended on numerous occasions throughout his life.

The Philippine Insurrection came next. O'Reilly became a member of a famous organization formed during that protracted guerilla squabble. He was a charter member of The Scouts and rose to a lieutenancy before the fighting ended. A sample of the style in which that scrimmage was conducted is shown by the following incident.

Pushing the rebel General Aguinaldo slowly northward, the American troops came to the town of Angeles, held by the insurrectos. To take it it was necessary to cross a long iron bridge across the Pampango River. Rebel fire had almost ceased and the engineers had repaired a gap in the bridge. Before sending troops across, though, the Americans had to reconnoiter. Five scouts were sent across at double time. As they ran O'Reilly noticed three Filipinos running along beneath the bridge. They disappeared almost immediately. O'Reilly stopped and looked down to the place where they had been glimpsed. He saw a case of dynamite set against a bridge abutment.

Climbing down to it, he saw enough dynamite "to blow up the Woolworth Building," and the fuse was burning. He reached for a knife, found he had none, turned to run and warn the troops who were about to start across and realized there was no time to climb back. In desperation he took the short fuse in his mouth and began to chew. The fire crept into his mouth. He changed his tactics. Put his head against the dynamite case and chewed some more. When the fire was in his mouth again, he chewed it up. To jerk out the fuse would have set off the charge. Only a tiny stub of fuse was left when the fire was out. The commanding General recommended him for the Medal of Honor for that, but O'Reilly himself didn't think he had it coming to him. "Anybody with a good set of teeth would have done the same in my place." As it happened he never did get the medal.

THE most memorable part of the campaign, however, was the number of friendships O'Reilly formed. One was with little Sam Dreben, a plucky immigrant boy whose officer led a company in close formation up to a stone bridge covered by an enormous cannon loaded with scrap iron. The officer and 11 men were killed. Dreben was the only one who crossed into the trenches on the other side. Single-handed he attacked 3000 men in their own trenches and held out until his company reformed and crossed over.

Another was Harry MacDonald, who got up from a hospital bed and led less than a score of wounded soldiers and inexperienced civilians in so energetic a defense that they drove several hundred attacking insurrectos out of the town of Vigan and saved the inhabitants.

When the insurrection ended Lieutenant O'Reilly took a month's leave in San Francisco. On the way over he was in at the start of a three-day miniature war between English, American and French sailors on shore leave at Nagasaki. On the way back the Boxer Uprising broke.

O'Reilly missed the more disgusting phases of that nasty little episode by being wounded during his first engagement (outside Tientsin); he was rescued through the heroism of six men, five of whom were killed. He was interned in the Philippines and later left the army and went back to Japan. Of the Boxer Uprising he has this to say:

"It is nothing for the white man to be proud of. Literally millions of dollars in gold and silver money were stolen outright, of course, and millions collected in indemnities, but that was not what hurt the Chinese. What they can never forget is the barbarian's blow to their culture. To this day it is the sore spot in China that the white men looted and destroyed their sacred temples and the images of their gods, and historical records and ancient works of art that can never be replaced. Modern China began with the loot of Peking."

In Japan Tex O'Reilly became a school teacher and a friend of Lafcadio Hearn and was enchanted by the life of the Oriental and its placid emphasis on beauty. After several months, however, he left for China. He was robbed by an unemployed English mechanic he befriended. He arrived in Shanghai broke. Almost immediately he ran into some old friends from the Philippines and they made him first sergeant of the Emperor of Korea's white bodyguard, which was promptly disbanded by order of the Japanese, after holding a Korean hotel for several days against the arrayed protests of all the foreign Consuls. The Korean army (about 60 men) returned to Shanghai within a month after being paid off for a year ($72,000). O'Reilly spent his share on a spree within a couple of days and became bouncer for a Shanghai theater, then a policeman in the International Settlement. Shortly after seeing a Chinese bandit chief he had arrested executed "by exhaustion"—a method of torture that drove this prisoner insane after 13 days—O'Reilly left the police force to become founder and commander of the private army of the Toatai of Kiang-su Province.

He was serving in the Toatai's army during the time of the occurrence of that hilarious episode when the Dowager Empress was ordered to send the Crown Prince of China to Germany to kow-tow to the Kaiser in reprisal for the assassination of a German officer in China. It will be remembered that the Empress, instead of sending her son, which would have humiliated and discredited her entire dynasty in China, sent a low-caste barber boy to Europe to be feted and honored and permitted to insult half the dignitaries of Europe with impunity, before being returned to China and summarily killed. Captain O'Reilly of the Chinese army was in charge of this "Crown Prince's" bodyguard in Shanghai and very much puzzled withal, until he discovered later that all China was laughing at the deception in which he had had a part.

In Shanghai O'Reilly met many fascinating personalities. He shared his quarters with Homer Lea when that brilliant and scholarly hunchback was plotting the Chinese Revolution. Dr. Sun Yat Sen, subsequently China's first President, was a frequent guest at the sumptuous diggings the Toatai of Kiang-su provided for his American Captain. So was Pierre Loti. Seven years later, when O'Reilly was managing editor of the San Antonio Light, a delegation of Chinese came to him. They were from Homer Lea and had come to offer O'Reilly a commission in the Chinese revolutionary army. Lea was about to set off the revolution he had been planning all those years.

When O'Reilly was fired by the Chinese Empress, at the instigation of Japan (which adopted and still uses his machine gun manual), he went back to the United States, took a job on the Chicago Tribune, sold books, studied at the University of Chicago, and finally decided not to settle down after all. Instead he went to the St. Louis World's Fair to renew acquaintance with some of the fighting men he'd known in the Philippines and China. He worked as a broncho buster in the Wild West show and met Pepino Garibaldi (grandson of the great liberator) and agreed to go off with him and look for a little war to fight in. They found one in Venezuela. Their side lost.

Six weeks later O'Reilly was back in New Orleans with $6000, which he divided among some other soldiers of fortune who were back from other "little wars," dead broke. For a while he worked the rodeos. He won a few prizes, broke an arm, a collar bone, a couple of ribs, and landed up in San Antonio to take a newspaper job. There he fell in love with the daughter of one of his father's friends, a girl he had known as a child. They married and O'Reilly did settle down, and he became managing editor of his paper. It must have been light work, for he also joined the Texas Rangers and found time to ride bronchos anonymously in occasional rodeos. During this period, too, he took time off to make a cross-country horseback record. He rode from San Antonio to Chicago to deliver to President Taft a parchment inviting him to come to Texas. It was all part of a land boom advertising scheme, but the public took it. And when Tex rode into West Side Ball Park, Chicago, to deliver his parchment invitation to the President, he was heartily cheered, and Taft recognized him as former commander of his bodyguard in the Philippines.

Afterwards O'Reilly engaged in the land boom he had heralded, and went broke. St. Louis had entertained him well on his cross-country trip. He had been given a banquet at the Jefferson and his horse was brought in and given a silver punch bowl of oats in the hotel dining room. So he came back to St. Louis and got a job on the Times. It was in St. Louis that he met Abram Gonzales and it was Gonzales who later took him to see another old friend, Francisco Madero, when they met in San Antonio to organize Madero's Mexican revolution. After this conference Tex decided to take in the revolution, Neither the Associated Press nor his old paper would believe him when he told them about it, but both agreed to accredit him and accept news dispatches should a revolution occur. He wasn't much use to them, though. He fought more than he wrote. He fought in three Mexican revolutions.

He helped put Madero in power and drive out the old Diaz tyranny. Madero, the idealist, the pacifist, was almost immediately set upon by extreme socialists. O'Reilly returned from Texas and rallied to his defense under Madero's Commander-in-Chief, Huerta. No sooner had the revolutionary government put down the insurrection than Huerta turned on its President. Gentle, inspired, benevolent Madero was murdered by his own officers and thrown into the street. Whereupon Pancho Villa, who had fought for Madero and been imprisoned by Huerta, slipped out of prison and across the Texas border. He borrowed $500 from an Italian gambler, recrossed the border with nine men and a pack horse. Then he proceeded to conquer Mexico.

Tex O'Reilly was given a Major's commission and put in charge of machine guns. His old friend Abram Gonzales of St. Louis was scheduled for the presidency. Unfortunately this able little lawyer, who had been Governor of Chihuahua under Madero, was captured by Huerta's Federals, bound hand and foot and thrown under a train. That was what the Mexican revolutions were like.

TEX O'REILLY fought through Villa's campaign, continually amazed at the military genius of the bandit. In one battle when he was unable to capture an entrenched position after 36 hours, Villa resorted to strategy which was probably never used previously or until the World War. He picked 150 men, had O'Reilly show them how to make dynamite grenades (tin cans stuffed with nails), ordered them to blacken their faces, and led them up the hill the Federals were holding. After a heavy and noisy grenade bombardment, the attackers charged with six-shooters and captured the position in about two minutes.

That was the beginning of the end. The final battle was exciting for Tex O'Reilly. It occurred outside Guadalupe in the mountains. It was misty and raining heavily as Villa's cavalry charged around a little hill. O'Reilly moved a machine gun into position near the Federal trenches. He had only one assistant, a half-breed mechanic. Just as the Federals began their counter-charge, the gun jammed. Tex had the assistant cover him with a poncho and ordered him to warn him when the charge came within 50 yards. He worked there in the dark to keep rain out of the gun, and as he worked it occurred to him that if the assistant lost his nerve and ran away, he would be caught under the charge, hidden in the poncho. But fortunately he didn't. He gave the warning. Tex had just finished fixing the gun. They opened fire and stopped the charge. Villa followed up. The Federals broke and the revolution was over.

Afterwards came the grand entry into Mexico City, just 14 months after Villa's crossing the Rio Grande with nine men and a single pack horse. Villa and General Zapata had 68,000 troops drawn up outside the capital and they were to enter in three columns. Tex O'Reilly, the only American officer in the outfit, was to head one of the columns. The city was silent; blinds were drawn. At mid-morning the O'Reilly column came to the Avenida Francisco Madero and was stopped. A lone policeman doing traffic duty at

NEW YORK.

EVEN if the social value of European titles for American heiresses has come to be discounted in certain quarters, the Snowden sisters seem to have clung to the theory that marriage to a nobleman is a necessary phase of the education of a young American lady. Not that their own excursions into the international marriage mart have been conspicuously fortunate. Marian divorced her prince when his creditors pounced on her as his sole remaining financial asset. He still loves her and is said to be waiting to catch her rebounding from her subsequent marriage to a childhood pal—which wasn't all it might have been either. Janet was a princess only five days; they say she married on a rebound; she says not.

Since neither sister has ever shown much interest in a private life, all this is common property. Gossip hangs eagerly on the Snowdens' press releases and wonders wearily, "What next?" Their own mother doesn't know much more about them than their last husbands do.

Mrs. Snowden-Davidson, who was only married twice, herself, has had little to say about her children's lives. They've been on their own too long.

For a long time she was married to James Hastings Snowden of Pittsburgh. Snowden was a banker in Oil City, Pennsylvania, who went into the oil business, then came to New York and founded Snowden, McSweeney and Company. He was very successful when he married. The three children—Marian, Janet and James—were educated expensively, the girls, of course, in Europe. James Snowden Jr. is still at Harvard. When Mr. and Mrs. Snowden broke up in 1922, he promptly settled $400,000 on his wife-to-be, Mrs. Beulah Sladden Meagher, the divorced wife of Ward Meagher, by whom she had two daughters of her own. During these marital muddles the Snowden children traveled around in Europe, commuted from school to New York or visited their parents in summer resorts. The second Mrs. Snowden's children, Jeanne and Mildred Meagher, don't belong in this story; Jeanne's considered quite a beauty. For a time all five children lived in the Snowden household at Southampton, Long Island.

Several years after divorcing her first husband, Mrs. Marian Adair Snowden (mother of Marian and Janet) married a retired naval officer, Walter Sherman Davidson, and they summered at Newport and traveled a good deal, seeing virtually nothing of the girls. When Snowden died, however, the three children of his first marriage held a conference, decided to go and live with their mother and promptly did so.

Now the Snowdens were members of the New York Yacht Club. They had a steam yacht and a big house and they stood high in Long Island's social life. The Davidsons, on the other hand, led a relatively unostentatious life at Newport. The girls were delighted to get away from Newport's chilly atmosphere for a European tour in 1931. They were to live with Mrs. Davidson and her husband at Cap Ferrat, France.

Meanwhile the Snowden will had been made public. The bulk of his property went to the second Mrs. Snowden. The whole estate netted nearly a million and a half. A niece was bequeathed $100,000. Mrs. Snowden, already recipient of a $400,000 trust fund, as stated before, received more than $100,000 in personal effects and more than $400,000 in cash. Over $800,000 went to the three children of his first marriage, so that each child was to get $276,029 on coming of age. Additionally, the $400,000 trust fund assigned to Mrs. Snowden reverts to them at her death. The sum of these statistics is that the two pretty sisters were both pretty well off in their own right.

IT WAS at Cap Ferrat that summer that Marian Snowden ran into Prince Girolamo di Rospigliosi, offspring of an Italian-American marriage which had brought about the disinheritance of his father. She had met the Prince the previous winter while she was "vacationing" in Palm Beach, had then admired his dancing and now proceeded to fall in love with him.

Now marrying a Rospigliosi is no trivial matter, as the Prince's mother could testify. His father, the Prince Giuseppe, had been the eldest brother, but not head of the family, since a younger brother had improved himself by marriage. Prince Giuseppe made the error of falling in love with the wife of Colonel Frederick Parkhurst, then an aide de camp and subsequently Governor of Maine. Mrs. Parkhurst had been a great beauty; she came of a distinguished American family well known in New Orleans and Washington. When she divorced her husband and married the Prince, however, it was a terrific blow to her new husband's family, which is ancient and Catholic. Hence Prince Giuseppe, despite violent efforts, was practically discarded by Italian society and by his people. The Rospigliosi remain wealthy and prominent to this day, but Prince Giuseppe's son was of the outcast branch. At the time of his meeting with Marian Snowden his debts were said to run into seven figures and it was an open secret that he had made a play for Miss Barbara Hutton (subsequently Princess Mdivani and now the Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow) while he was in America. In those days it was assumed that young men who aspired to the hand of Miss Hutton should possess more than six-century lineage.

On the same score, Mrs. Snowden-Davidson resented Prince Girolamo's interest in her daughter and did what she could to break it up. Marian was only 19. She was headstrong, uncurbed and somewhat beautiful. She had set her heart on the plump, rosy Italian; the Prince, then about 24, was equally enamored of her. So one day that autumn they jumped into Marian's car, drove from Cannes to Milan, from Milan to Nice, from Nice to Genoa. They arrived at 5:30 in the morning.

But Genoa is no Gretna Green and Mrs. Snowden-Davidson didn't plan to make the elopement any easier than necessary for her 19-year-old daughter. They tried Milan. But in Milan banns have to be posted 26 days before the marriage ceremony. It only took Mrs. Snowden-Davidson five days to locate them through the American Consul. She came post haste, gathered up her protesting daughter and hustled her back. Marian threatened to jump out of windows. One thing, however, the watchful mother neglected to do. She forgot to protest the banns. The result was that when Marian and her Prince met again, about a month later, they were fully qualified to be married. They were, at 11:30 one night in the private chapel of one of the Rospigliosi estates. Marian's mother was as furious as she might have been expected to be. She didn't know about the banns. She didn't know that her daughter was of an age at which she was permitted to marry whom she pleased.

So she appealed to church and state authorities, declaring that Marian and Prince Girolamo had failed to post the banns and had married without her consent. It turned out that Marian had given her age as 21, but that wasn't enough to make the marriage void. And the angry mother-in-law was quietly assured that the banns had been properly read out in church every day for 28 days. Had she been given to church-going she might have heard them recited.

Even this rebuff wasn't enough to quench Mrs. Davidson's ire, however. When she heard that the Prince was taking his Princess to the United States, she wired Washington and asked to have him refused entry. Her request was disregarded.

Prince and Princess Rospigliosi were welcomed to New York cordially. On February 11, 1932, they were married once more, this time by a New York Justice of the Peace—just to make doubly sure.

Well, the Rospigliosi marriage might have been taken as a lesson to all meddling parents. Marian and Jay, as she called her Prince, seemed to everyone a splendid couple. They lived comfortably in New York. They were devoted to each other. They were manifestly very much in love. Marian's younger sister Janet spent a great deal of time with them.

That's how it happened that when Prince Girolamo went to meet a friend who was arriving on the liner Rex one day in 1933, both Marian and Janet accompanied him. The friend was Prince di Siriggnano don Francesco Caravita, an old buddy of Jay's and a "noted sportsman." It was a gay arrival. After the incoming Prince had gone through the customs, they escorted him happily back to the Rospigliosi apartment for cocktails. Cocktails lasted well into the evening. And by the time they were through drinking the visitor's health, little Janet had decided she wanted to marry him. The Prince was amiably inclined and willing. Only those two cautious old reactionaries, Prince and Princess Rospigliosi, were averse to such a hasty marriage. They persuaded the hot-blooded youngsters to wait until the following day and decide soberly.

THEY agreed to wait that long, but the next morning, despite all arguments for waiting a little longer, Janet and her Prince were off to the Municipal Courts Building in a taxi. And the Rospigliosi decided perforce to go along. On the way Prince Caravita asked the girl again whether she was sure she wanted to marry him, said there was still time to back out. She just laughed.

For several days thereafter the Prince and Princess Caravita were believed to be stopping with friends in Danbury, Connecticut. Marian heard nothing from them. But on the following Monday morning, she was "flabbergasted" when the Prince called up and asked whether she had seen Janet anywhere. She hadn't. She was even more flabbergasted when Janet herself phoned at 9:30 that evening. She said she was at the hairdresser's. Her voice sounded brightly inconsequential. But when Princess Rospigliosi asked Princess Caravita how she was getting along with her trousseau (she had told Prince Caravita she was shopping for a trousseau) and when she told her about the Prince's frantic telephoning, Janet sounded as if she had never heard the name.

Finally, however, she confessed that she had no intention of continuing with the five-day-old marriage. She was going to try to have it annulled.

When the tabloids got hold of this story they immediately intimated that

How to TELL a FAKE From an OLD MASTER

Arthur Pillans Laurie, Noted Expert, Describes His Methods of Determining Scientifically the Authenticity of a Painting.

PROBABLY the most exalted group of scientific sleuths in the world—the British Medico-Legal Society — sat up and took notice at a recent meeting when it heard the secrets of a master-detective on the trail of fake "old masters."

Few outsiders could provoke more than a yawn from that distinguished gathering. Its members not merely know and practice, every day, the ultimate in scientific crime detection, but in considerable measure invented it. But this guest had something to tell them which would make the methods of Sherlock Holmes seem antiquated, ineffectual, even unimaginative by comparison.

In the place of the familiar pocket magnifier of the story-book detective he uses a Jena-made binocular microscope; for the "dark lantern" of nocturnal excursions from Baker street he substitutes an ultra-violet hand-lamp, or perhaps the X-ray; in his real-life detective story there is a place for the hypodermic needle, but not in the way that Conan Doyle's moody hero used it.

He is Arthur Pillans Laurie, famous chemist, educator and authority on the methods and materials of artists from the present day all the way back to the rock drawings of the cave man; editor of an encyclopedia on home education and author of many volumes on chemistry and art; principal for 28 years of Heriot-Watt College at Edinburgh, professor of chemistry to the Royal Academy since 1912 and star witness in a dozen "historic" cases involving the validity of old masters and many thousands of dollars.

His methods, as reported in the current issue of the Medico-Legal and Criminological Review, range from such simple and common-sense devices as photographing known and suspected "old masters" and turning the photographs upside down, to complex and minute studies of many pigments—in a particle one-twenty-fifth of an inch in diameter—that require the most delicate of laboratory instruments, the most precise of laboratory techniques. The glass funnel of ordinary filtration processes becomes a glass tube drawn out fine, his scales are sensitive to one-five-millionth of an ounce, and a platinum crucible a quarter-inch wide and a quarter-inch deep is used only for the "coarser" operations.

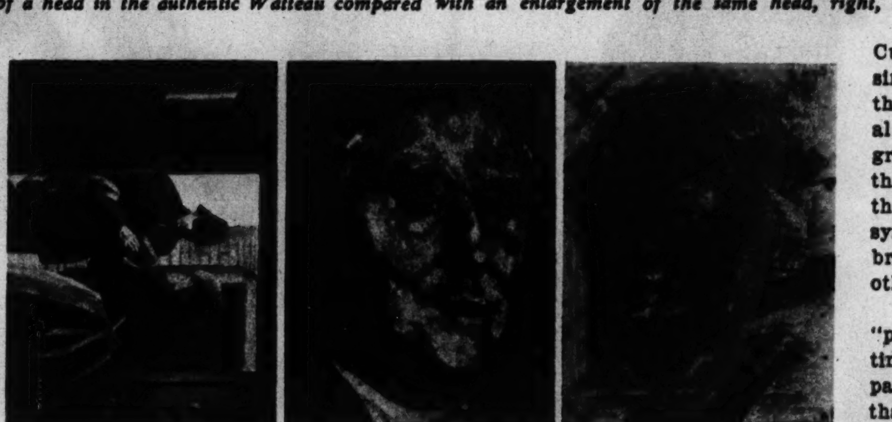
"You all know the difficulty in preparing a case which will stand cross-examination and will convince the jury and judge," he told the Medico-Legal Society, "and in the matter of pictures, it is very difficult.

"Usually in a picture case one expert goes into the witness-box and says a picture is a fine example of the work of Sir Joshua Reynolds, while another says it is a miserable daub and not like his work at all. You do not know which of them is lying; they are both said to be great experts and they are only giving opinions." And hence, the chemist explained, his aim was to produce evidence that, without recourse to mere opinion, would enable judge and jury to see for themselves which was right.

His first step in obtaining such evidence, relates Professor Laurie, is to go over the whole surface of the questioned picture with a microscope. If he finds paint covering cracks in the layer below, then he knows the upper layer was added after the original painting. So, also, he is able to spot fake signatures of the masters when they have been added to old paintings by modern sharpers.

Under a microscope with a magnification of 60 diameters, Professor Laurie is able to distinguish most modern paints from the coarsely ground pigments in earlier use, but for positive identification he resorts to "the beautiful methods of microchemical analysis."

If only a surface pigment need be identified, he obtains a sample, without visible damage to the picture, by scraping off a minute particle with a hypodermic needle—ground down and resharpened, for the ordinary hypodermic needle is too flexible. But perhaps he suspects that the various layers of paint were laid on centuries apart, and he must identify each in order, just as it lies on the canvas.



To show how X-ray photography can be used in detecting painted-over masterpieces, the picture of a postman was first painted on a canvas (see first picture on the left) after which the head of an old lady was painted on top of it. The X-ray shadowgraph shows the one beneath the other.

IT'S ALL very simple, to him. He grinds down another hypodermic needle; in fact, he has boxes of them already prepared so that he can send them to distant museums and his agents there can take samples for his laboratory. These needles are not sharpened to a point, but to a circular edge, like a miniature biscuit-cutter.

Pushed into the picture with a twisting motion, the needle cuts out an infinitesimal "biscuit" of the paints. With a fine wire he pokes the sample out of the barrel of the cutter and into a tiny scratch on a paraffin surface, melts a drop of paraffin to seal it in and is ready to shave off microscopic cross-sections for analysis—by modern techniques conducted on ordinary microscope slides with minute amounts of chemicals—of the paints layer by layer down to the canvas.

By such methods Professor Laurie was able to settle the terrific controversy over the "Rokeby" Venus of Velasquez. The painting had been purchased by public subscription for the British nation. Immediately after the purchase a newspaper "discovered" another "signature," and some experts proclaimed that it was only a studio figure study, dressed up by some eighteenth-century faker who had added a Cupid.

Professor Laurie got a chance to examine it, with pigment samples, when a militant suffragette slashed it with a knife. One point was that the Cupid holding the mirror had a blue ribbon, while a bit of drapery at the waist of Venus was green. His examination showed both were blue; the drapery looked green only because some cleaner had left an old brown varnish over it, and had cleaned the Cupid more thoroughly. Both blues were a mixture of the same pigments: smalt, which came into use about 1600, the year after Velasquez was born, and azurite, which went out in 1650, 10 years before he died.

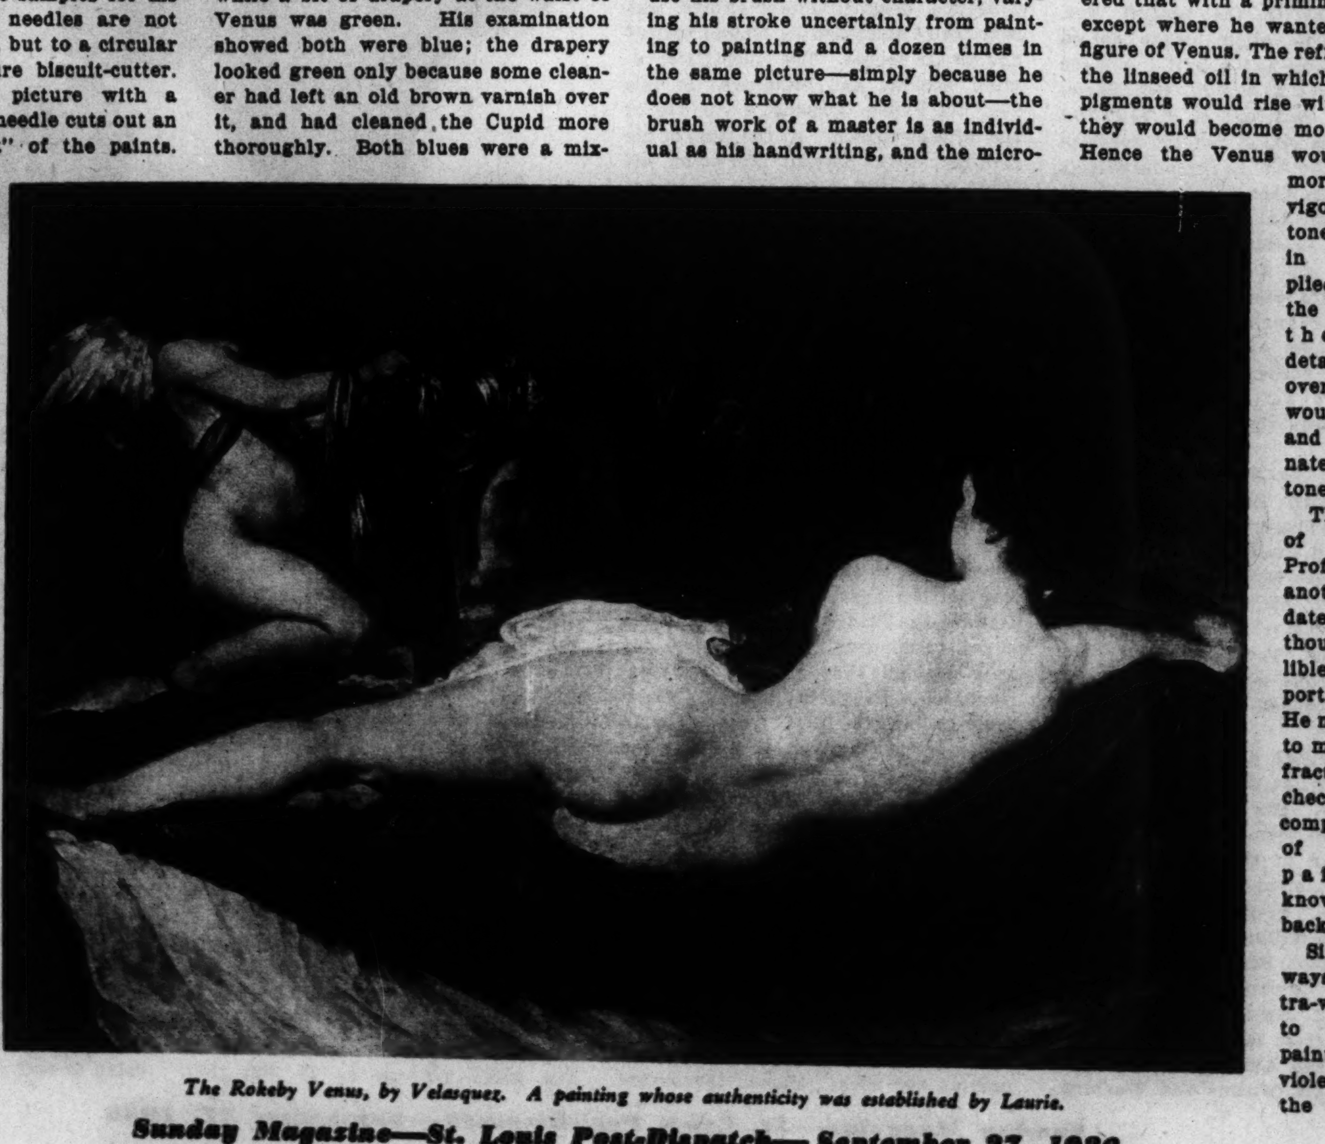
That dated the picture in his lifetime, and it showed that the Cupid had been painted at the same time as the Venus. It did not demonstrate that he was the painter. But, says Professor Laurie, while a mediocre painter may use his brush without character, varying his stroke uncertainly from painting to painting and a dozen times in the same picture—simply because he does not know what he is about—the brush work of a master is as individual as his handwriting, and the microscope reveals it unmistakably.

A comparison of photographs taken under the microscope showed that the brush work was the same on the Cupid as on the Venus. He took a magnified photograph of Cupid's ribbon, and then he took a similar detail in a known Velasquez—the portrait of Philip IV in the National Gallery — cut up the two photographs, and showed by doing it that they could be pasted together so that the brush marks on the one formed a symmetrical continuation, without a break, of the brush marks on the other.

"We have, therefore," he points out, "proved that it was painted in the time of Velasquez, and that it was painted all at one time. And also that the man who handled the brush and painted the ribbon over the mirror was the one who handled the brush and painted the portrait of Philip.

"It is a demonstration that the picture came from the studio of Velasquez as we see it today, and it shows how we can build up evidence from examination of a picture without any question of connoisseurship at all."

HE MADE some curious findings about the artist's technique in the case of the Rokeby Venus. One was that Velasquez had painted it on a priming of white lead, and covered that with a priming of red ochre except where he wanted to place the figure of Venus. The refractive index of the linseed oil in which he mixed his pigments would rise with age, so that they would become more translucent. Hence the Venus would stand out more and more vigorously as the tone went up in pigments applied directly over the white, while the surrounding details, painted over the ochre, would be more and more subordinated as their tone went down.



The Rokeby Venus, by Velasquez. A painting whose authenticity was established by Laurie.

This tendency of the oil gave Professor Laurie another key to the date of paintings, though not infallible without supporting evidence. He never fails now to measure the refractive index and check it against a comparative study of the oils in paintings of known date going back for centuries.

Similarly, he always uses his ultra-violet lantern to discover repainting. In ultra-violet photographs the repainting of an old picture usually, he says, comes out black. But, like the refractive index, that is not infallible: "The final reliable test is examination under the microscope."

Professor Laurie showed the Medico-Legal Society a painting of a head, and then an X-ray photograph disclosing the shadow of another painting beneath. He said an artist could trace out the whole outline of the original, a postman delivering a letter.

The most sensational mystery cleared up by that method was the discovery, in the Edinburgh National Gallery, of the lost portrait by Franz Hals of a public-house crony, Verdoinck.

HALS was known to have painted Verdoinck holding a jaw bone, in reference to a jocular threat to slay any barrel-room opponent "with the jaw bone of an ass." In the National Gallery was a painting by Franz Hals of a man holding a wine-glass. X-rays showed that beneath the glass was the jaw bone, painted over by some bewildered restorer who could not quite figure it out.

Professor Laurie is fascinated by the persistence of characteristic brush work in the masters. He has written a whole volume about the brush work of Rembrandt. Even the pocket "glass" of Sherlock would be enough to show means of identification not discernible by the unaided eye, but obvious, he says, with a magnification of two diameters. Thus a "very skillful" Watteau copy was shown up at once by a comparison of the brush work in magnified photographs of a face in the copy and the corresponding face in the original. And Professor Laurie fitted together magnified photographs of detail in Rembrandt's "Good Samaritan," painted in 1633; his "Woman Taken in Adultery," 1644, and his "Titus," 1657, so that they appear as though from a single painting: "Rembrandt's brush work from 1633 to the time he was old had never changed."

He keeps magnified photographs of comparative details on his mantel piece in rows, and "gradually," he says, "they tell one things. It is the scientific method of isolation and comparison.

"It is rather like literature; great men have their peculiar expressions, great artists have their characteristic brush work, whereas the second-rate man has not." On such evidence he contends that a portrait in the National Gallery, signed and still accredited as a Rembrandt, was really done by Flinck, who tried in the master's studio to imitate his brush work, but later gave it up and went with the crowd.

But simple common-sense sometimes led to disclosures as striking as the most involved technical methods. So, Professor Laurie demonstrates, near-perfect fakes may "fall to pieces" when one turns them upside down, for "when you look at a painted face the right way up, you unconsciously put any mistakes right." And so, likewise, a too-high insurance claim was promptly dropped when Professor Laurie, making an examination of a painting which had been defaced by a too-broad scratch right down the middle, noticed parallel grooves along the scratch, and found that they precisely fitted the milled edge of a shilling.

of the Watteau painting.

d picture usually, he says, comes lack. But, like the refractive in- hat is not infallible: "The final le test is examination under the scope."

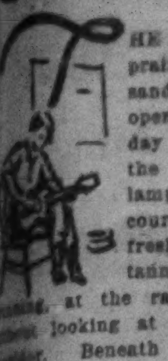
SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

CARL SANDBURG
DAVID LASSER

A REAL AMERICAN MINSTREL



THE barber shop in a prairie town, a thousand prairie towns, is open only on Saturday night. Under the yellow kerosene lamps, the barber, court plaster over the fresh cuts on his own tanned chin, pauses, grinning, at the razor strop, aims [illegible] looking at the immemorial [illegible]. Beneath his coarse white [illegible] a lank (and suffering) frame in overalls is stretched out on the [illegible]. A dozen others wait around the plain pine walls. One of them tells stories—the same old stories, nobody knows how old, that will be forgotten and new again in another 20 years. A farm boy hauls out a harmonica, a red-headed tenor leads off the crowd, and in the shadows outside a coon dog lifts its muzzle to the prairie stars, piercingly forlorn. The chorus breaks off, guffaws, and the stories go on again.

Into one Saturday night in a hundred, an old-timer, well-remembered for long wandering, returns with banjo or guitar. He sings and plays the ballads of prairie and railroad and rampart street, ribald, tragic, American, and for a while the stream of stories is stopped, the harmonica stays in the farm boy's pocket, the hound is still beneath the stars.

The man with the guitar is Carl Sandburg.

No other man comes to mind in whom meet such extremes as in this song-singer and poet, hobo and scholar, "Iron Cat" and "Granite Mountain," seasoned with honey and tabasco, made of silk and sole leather, full of sentiment and steel.

It crops out in the first moment of conversation. There's a deal of strength about him, even at a glance—the grave and forthright, or sometimes sly and reticent and smiling gray eyes, black brows, the firm jaw and the shoulders with their clean and easy look, even at 58. Except for his bow tie and the careful though not-too-successful part in his iron-gray hair, it's the look of a "highly superior workman." But with it there's a curious grace and courtliness.

He begins to talk, in a rich, warm, easy voice that doubles the note of strength. He talks American. American, he says, is the proper language of Americans. Even before they reach Ellis Island, he says, prospective Americans have learned a word or two of the language, such as "job" and "boss"—"and also," as this reporter set it down after an hour's chat with Sandburg 12 years ago, "'blank' and 'blank.'" But, just as one is ready to put him down as an utter he-man, a more than 100-per-center, that arresting note of courtliness rings out again, or he says something so musical and well-rounded and rememberable—and probably sentimental—that the truth will no longer down; he is, beyond possibility of disguise, a poet.

Witter Bynner put those contradictions into a poem describing him as

Gray and sinewy and soft

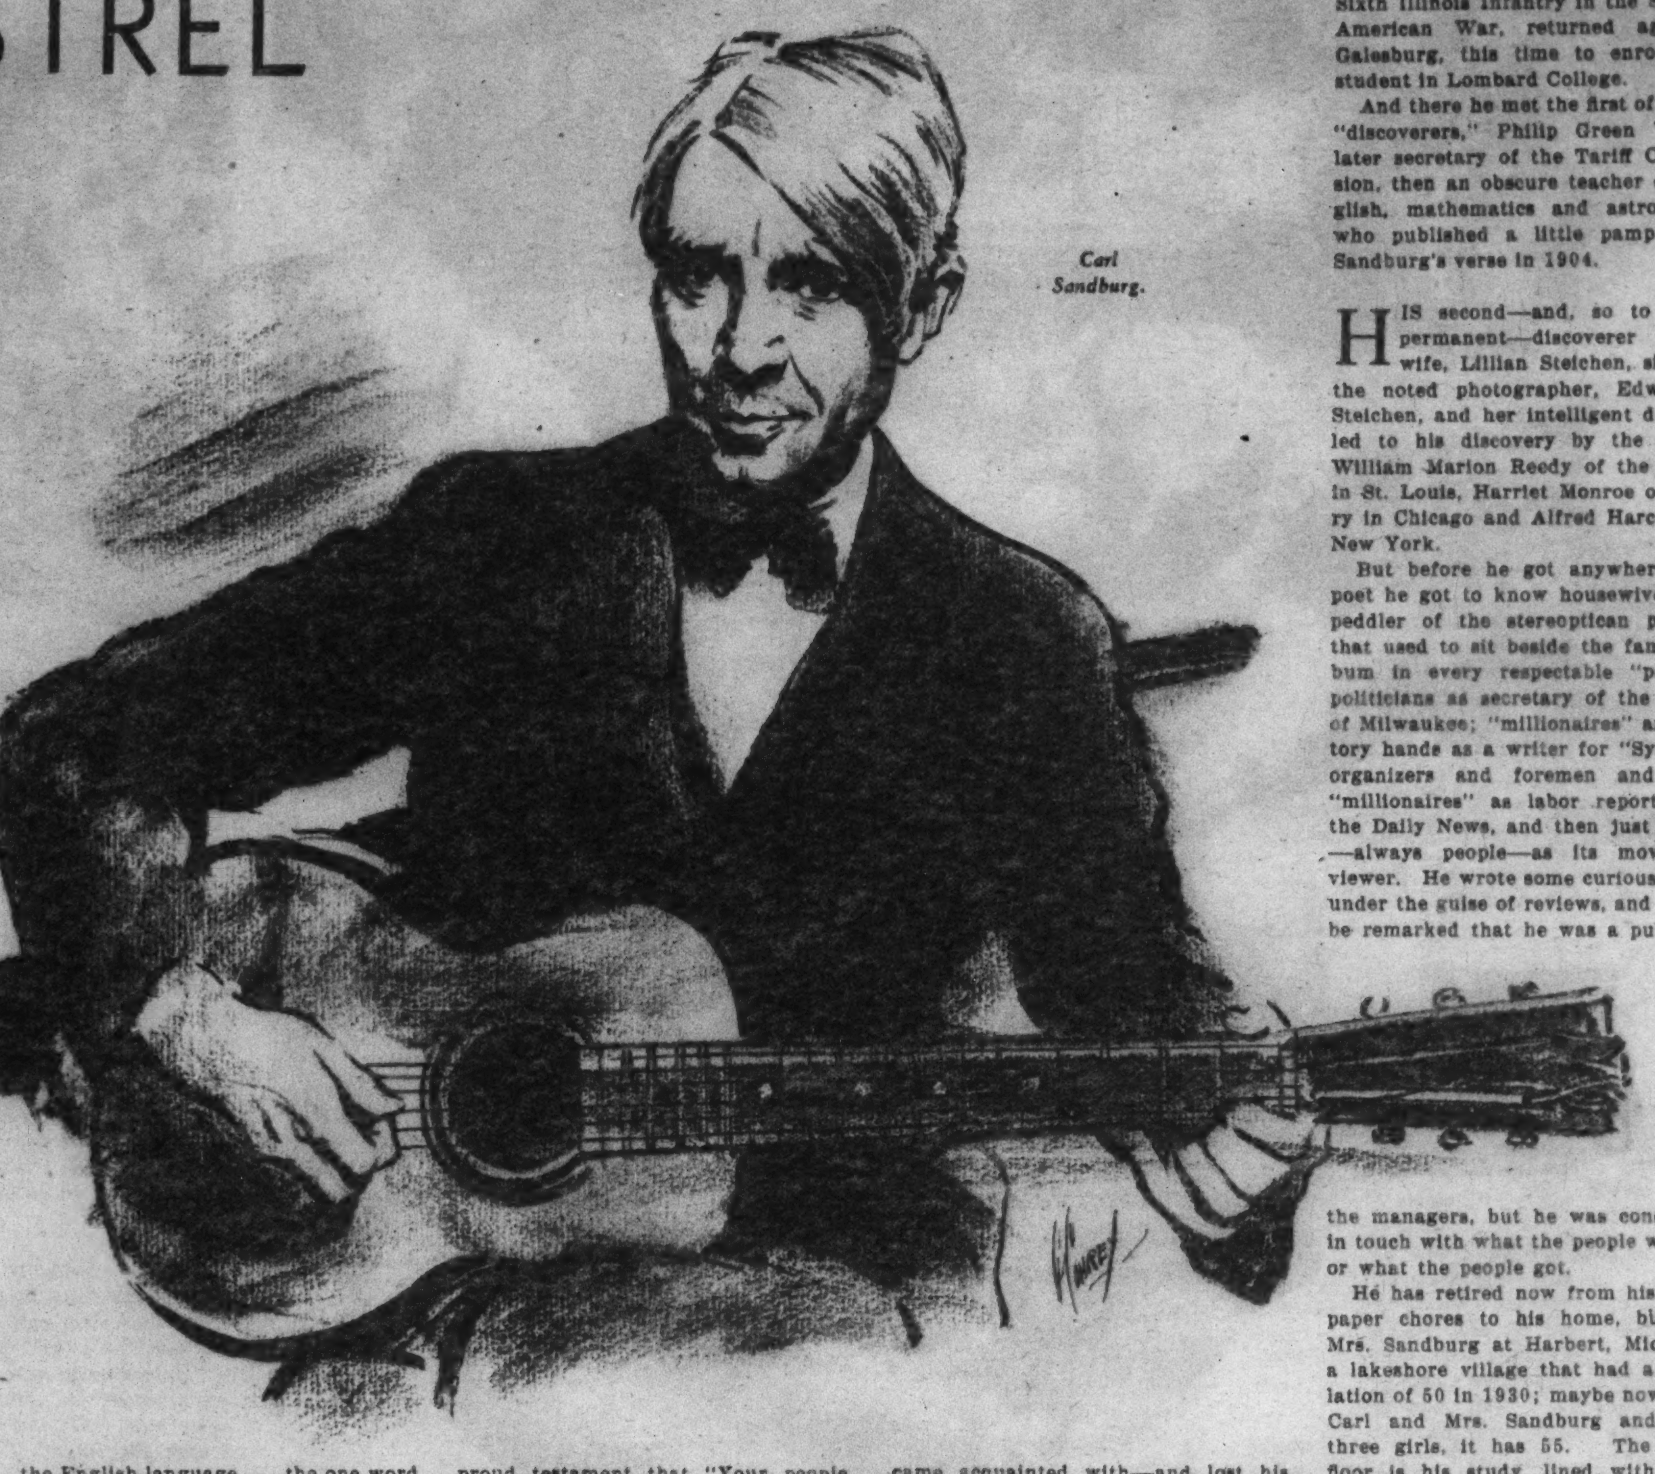
purring, prowling, aloof but at home, tender, tigered and a hunter—

Mysterious and more than that,
Sandburg comes, the iron cat.

And Lew Sarett put him in another poem as "The Granite Mountain"—

. . . . lone it lies
Under wide blue Arctic skies.

Harry Hansen, his old Chicago comrade on the Daily News, wrote two fine full-length portraits, but perhaps showed more in a couple of lines incidental to other subjects: ". . . Carl Sandburg, peering out from under his black-visored cap like a traffic policeman, wearing his coat about his shoulders like a cape and stalking forward like another Ibsen in the streets of Christiana—Carl, come in for a bite to eat and a cup of coffee and to listen rather than talk" . . . "Carl Sandburg, 'just quiet and vast and fine, a wonder to sit beside and yet never saying anything.'"



Carl Sandburg.

Of all the half-glimpses caught in the books of other men, perhaps the most revealing is a sentence from a study by an associate professor of English, intended as a stricture, not without validity, and yet hardly to be read without a chuckle:

"The imaginative world which we enter through the door of Sandburg's poetry is scarcely more poetic than the actual world—I mean that it is scarcely more select or exclusive, scarcely less scrappy and jumbled."

Sandburg's recent book is called "The People, Yes," and critics say it sets up a milestone in his growth. He always writes about the people, never about himself. But through what he writes one may see the author. And some of his lines might be of interest to the professor:

"The best book is the world."

". . . The most detestable word in the English language . . . the one word just a little worse than any other you can think of, is 'Exclusive.'"

Certainly there's nothing exclusive about the book. It takes in Johnny Appleseed and Paul Bunyan, Thoreau and (in the next line) Walter Winchell, the Tower of Babel and the Brookings Institution, Faraday's diary and the Newspaper Guild, Johann Sebastian Bach and Mae West.

If the people is a myth, he asks, "What myth would you put in place of the people?" He asks, "When have the people been half as rotten as what the panderers to the people dangle before crowds?" And against the cold, proud testament that "Your people, sir, is a great beast," he marshals another testament as proud:

"All men are born free and equal."

Sandburg is as much of the people as his book, or as the Lincoln about whom he has already turned out two volumes of bed-rock erudition and bed-rock simplicity. He was born in Galesburg, Illinois, January 6, 1878, son of a railroad blacksmith from Asposoken, Northern Sweden, and the beginnings of his monumental "Lincoln" were dedicated to his parents as laborers on the prairie. At 13 he was driving a milk wagon. He became a porter in a barber shop and there became acquainted with—and lost his prairie small boy's reverence for—Congressmen; a Galesburg Congressman died and Carl shined the shoes of the 30 or 40 who came from Washington for the funeral.

He worked a while in the brickyard and then, still a kid, was "riding the rods"—or, luxuriously, ducking behind the water tank when the limited made a stop, riding "the blinds"—going West as the adventurous youngsters of his day went West, before the days of hitch-hiking and trans-continental highways lined with billboards and wagging thumbs. He shocked and pitched and scooped wheat in a Kansas harvest, washed dishes in Kansas City, Omaha, Denver; had a real job as a carpenter's helper back in Kansas; blacked stoves for meals, returned to Galesburg and the milk wagon. He went to Puerto Rico with the Sixth Illinois Infantry in the Spanish-American War, returned again to Galesburg, this time to enroll as a student in Lombard College.

And there he met the first of his five "discoverers," Philip Green Wright, later secretary of the Tariff Commission, then an obscure teacher of "English, mathematics and astronomy," who published a little pamphlet of Sandburg's verse in 1904.

HIS second—and, so to speak, permanent—discoverer is his wife, Lillian Steichen, sister of the noted photographer, Edward J. Steichen, and her intelligent devotion led to his discovery by the others, William Marion Reedy of the Mirror in St. Louis, Harriet Monroe of Poetry in Chicago and Alfred Harcourt in New York.

But before he got anywhere as a poet he got to know housewives as a peddler of the stereoptican pictures that used to sit beside the family album in every respectable "parlor"; politicians as secretary of the Mayor of Milwaukee; "millionaires" and factory hands as a writer for "System"; organizers and foremen and more "millionaires" as labor reporter for the Daily News, and then just people—always people—as its movie reviewer. He wrote some curious pieces under the guise of reviews, and it may be remarked that he was a puzzle to the managers, but he was constantly in touch with what the people wanted, or what the people got.

He has retired now from his newspaper chores to his home, built by Mrs. Sandburg at Harbert, Michigan, a lakeshore village that had a population of 50 in 1930; maybe now, with Carl and Mrs. Sandburg and their three girls, it has 55. The upper floor is his study, lined with filing cases of material on Lincoln. More items on the Emancipator—the irreplacable items—fill a concrete fireproof vault in the cellar. Already, say his publishers, Harcourt, Brace and Company, he has 800,000 words in final draft for the remaining Lincoln volumes—and meantime he turns out an epic of street and field and strike meeting like "The People, Yes."

Meanwhile, also, he is not too busy to go to and fro in the land talking about American verse for Americans, reading inimitably from his own books at a thousand and one university and

The GENERALISSIMO of the UNEMPLOYED

NEW YORK.

IN THE days of Coolidge prosperity, David Lasser, a thin, quiet, dark young man of scholarly appearance, spent most of his leisure hours dreaming over the possibility of communicating with inhabitants of the moon by propelling rockets at the earth's mystic satellite.

Today in a period of mass unemployment and widespread impoverishment, he is the militant leader and organizer of hunger marches and a thorn in the side of politicians and legislative bodies that like to sit easily in their swivel chairs and play at "make believe everything is going to be all right." A former member of the Interplanetary Society, Lasser dismisses his former cosmic fascination by saying: "I have decided that it is necessary to remake the earth before delving into life on the moon."

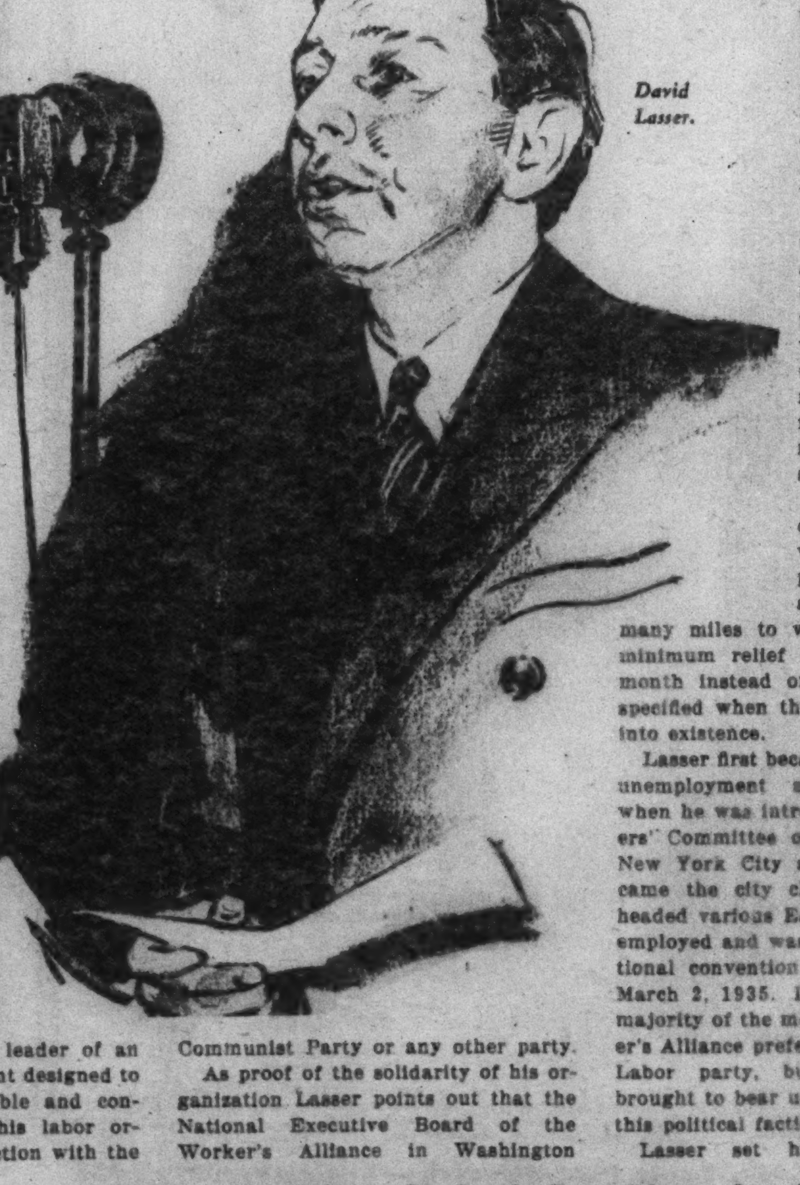
Born in Baltimore 30-some years ago, gassed in the World War, Lasser now heads the Worker's Alliance of America, a non-political organization numbering 800,000 unemployed and WPA workers. It is part of the duties of the WAA to kick up a commotion whenever one is needed to help keep the unemployed from losing their dole.

Lasser, a zealot by nature, toils 16 hours out of 24 for $20 a week to improve the living conditions of the unemployed and the relief workers. Recently he received a $450 bonus for his services to Uncle Sam in the World War and gave $100 of the sum to the national office of the Worker's Alliance in Washington, D. C. The remainder he gave to his wife and young son.

The Worker's Alliance of America is indorsed by the American Federation of Labor and Lasser stoutly maintains it supports no political party although he is a Socialist and ran for Congress on that party's ticket in the 1932 election. He expects to run for Congress again in the next election.

Averring that only a donkey refuses to change its mind, Lasser is not hidebound by tradition or eternal allegiance to any political group. He voted for Hoover in 1928 because, being a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he had faith in a fellow engineer.

This faith was badly shaken, however, and in 1932 Lasser swung to the Socialist cause of Norman Thomas and will probably remain among his supporters indefinitely. But he is not inclined to enter lengthy political controversies. He likes to impress interviewers with the fact that he is the leader of an important labor movement designed to help all people in trouble and constantly reiterates that his labor organization has no connection with the Communist Party or any other party.



David Lasser.

As proof of the solidarity of his organization Lasser points out that the National Executive Board of the Worker's Alliance in Washington has charge of 500 locals in 42 states. The structure was started March 2, 1935, and shows a lusty growth in a year and a half. Its constituents, of course, are unemployed and relief workers.

The main object of the Worker's Alliance is to demand better standards of relief and higher wages. It also takes up the grievances of relief workers and fights for a worker's reclassification when such is deserved.

Lasser also becomes indignant when he hears of project workers who are obliged to travel many miles to work and wants the minimum relief wages to be $45 a month instead of the $19 that was specified when the WPA was brought into existence.

Lasser first became interested in the unemployment and relief problem when he was introduced to the Workers' Committee on Unemployment in New York City and in 1933 he became the city chairman. He has headed various Eastern groups of unemployed and was top man at the national convention of the unemployed March 2, 1935. It is known that the majority of the members of the Worker's Alliance prefer to back a Farmer-Labor party, but no pressure is brought to bear upon them to support this political faction.

Lasser set his first important hunger march in motion in Oregon in 1934 when the State Legislature decided to take a vacation and let the unemployed shift for themselves. This maneuver was not very successful, but it convinced Lasser that similar maneuvers on a higher numerical scale would eventually command attention.

Profiting by his first experience, Lasser went to San Antonio, Texas, and put the unemployed in motion, getting decidedly better results and more food than usual for the destitute.

LASSER has been staging intermittent hunger marches on the United States Capitol since 1931, but he sprang into world-wide prominence last April when members of the Worker's Alliance invaded Trenton, New Jersey, occupied the State House and jeered the Legislature. The interlopers were finally ejected by the police, but the news that relief recipients in the State of New Jersey were suddenly cut off from all means of sustenance created widespread concern.

Now before a State Legislature decides to drop an ax on relief, it first has to weigh the possible disturbance and the adverse public sentiment that David Lasser and his Worker's Alliance are apt to create.

Whether or not the Worker's Alliance can be considered a political factor is conjectural at present, but the organization as it stands is well spread out and has representation in the rural communities as well as the cities. The local groups of the Worker's Alliance meet in churches, settlement houses and other edifices of a semi-public nature.

Advance information on conditions in different states is sent to the alliance from all parts of the country and the intimation that anyone of the 48 states is planning to cut relief appropriations or do something else inimical to those on relief is met with immediate opposition.

The office of the Worker's Alliance in New York City is located in a ramshackle bulding at Number 221 East Twenty-third street. The vice-president of the Worker's Alliance and the man who will succeed David Lasser if he should win a political office on the Socialist ticket is W. K. Patrick of Oregon, who is not allied to any political party and merely wants to be known as an independent voter. Herbert Benjamin, a former head of the unemployed councils, is a Communist and a member of the board of strategy of the Worker's Alliance. There is no known Republican voter in the personnel of the Worker's Alliance, but undoubtedly Lasser could produce one if pressed for such information.

The Worker's Alliance is supported by voluntary contributions. The unemployed on its roster contribute 10 cents a week and the WPA workers give 15 cents which enables the various offices to function and keep their printing presses going.

The cash deposits of the Worker's Alliance are in what is known as the Amalgamated Bank Account and additional moneys are garnered from the running of social affairs. More funds in the treasury of the Worker's Alliance at a future date would mean that the leaders of the movement can hope for a salary of $30 a week instead of the regulation $20 which is now the rule.

Lasser is a man of quiet demeanor, which is not, however, without a hint of forcefulness. He has a broad, intelligent forehead and kindly brown eyes.

PROBABLY the most learned group of scientific sleuths in the world—the British Medico-Legal Society—sat up and took notice at a recent meeting when it heard the secrets of a master-detective on the trail of fake "old masters."

Few outsiders could provoke more than a yawn from that distinguished gathering. Its members not merely know and practice, every day, the ultimate in scientific crime detection, but in considerable measure invented it. But this guest had something to tell them which would make the methods of Sherlock Holmes seem antiquated, ineffectual, even unimaginative by comparison.

In the place of the familiar pocket magnifier of the story-book detective he uses a Jena-made binocular microscope; for the "dark lantern" of nocturnal excursions from Baker street he substitutes an ultra-violet hand lamp or perhaps the X-ray. In [illegible] real-life detective story there is a place for the hypodermic needle, but not in the way that [illegible] [illegible] have used it.

He is Arthur Pillans Laurie, [illegible] chemist, educator and [illegible] on the methods and [illegible] of [illegible] from the [illegible] [illegible] editor of an [illegible] [illegible] education and author of many volumes on chemistry and art, president for 28 years of Heriot-Watt College at Edinburgh, professor of chemistry to the Royal Academy since 1912 and star witness in a dozen "historic" cases involving the validity of old masters and many thousands of dollars.

His methods, as reported in the current issue of the Medico-Legal and Criminological Review, range from such simple and common-sense devices as photographing known and suspected "old masters" and turning the photographs upside down, to complex and minute studies of many pigments—in a particle one-twenty-fifth of an inch in diameter—that require the most delicate of laboratory instruments, the most precise of laboratory techniques. The glass funnel of ordinary filtration processes becomes a glass tube drawn out fine, his scales are sensitive to one-five-millionth of an ounce, and a platinum crucible a quarter-inch wide and a quarter-inch deep is used only for the "coarser" operations.

"You all know the difficulty in preparing a case which will stand cross-examination and will convince the jury and judge," he told the Medico-Legal Society, "and in the matter of pictures, it is very difficult.

"Usually in a picture case one expert goes into the witness-box and says a picture is a fine example of the work of Sir Joshua Reynolds, while another says it is a miserable daub and not like his work at all. You do not know which of them is lying; they are both said to be great experts and they are only giving opinions." And hence, the chemist explained, his aim was to produce evidence that, without reference to mere opinion, would enable [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the whole surface of the questioned picture with a microscope. If he finds paint covering cracks in the layer below, then he knows the upper layer was added after the original painting. So, also he is able to spot fake signatures of the masters when they have been added to old paintings by modern sharpers.

Under a microscope with a magnification of 60 diameters, Professor Laurie is able to distinguish from modern paints [illegible] the [illegible] ground pigments in earlier [illegible] positive identification he [illegible] to "the beautiful methods of micro-chemical analysis."

A REAL AMERICAN MINSTREL

THE barber shop in a prairie town, a thousand prairie towns, is open only on Saturday night. He sings and plays the ballads of prairie and railroad and Rampart street, ribald, tragic, American, and for a while the stream of stories is stopped, the harmonica stays in the farm boy's pocket, the hound is still beneath the stars.

The man with the guitar is Carl Sandburg.

No other man comes to mind in whom meet such extremes as in this pot-slinger and poet, hobo and scholar, "Iron Cat" and "Granite Mountain," seasoned with honey and tabasco, made of silk and sole leather, full of sentiment and steel.

It crops out in the first moment of conversation. There's a deal of strength about him, even at a glance —the grave and forthright, or sometimes sly and reticent and smiling gray eyes, black brows, the firm jaw and the shoulders with their clean and easy look, even at 58. Except for his bow tie and the careful though not-too-successful part in his iron-gray hair, it's the look of a "highly superior workman." But with it there's a curious grace and courtliness.

He begins to talk, in a rich, warm, easy voice that doubles the note of strength. He talks American. American, he says, is the proper language of Americans. Even before they reach Ellis Island, he says, prospective Americans have learned a word or two of the language, such as "job" and "boss"—"and also," as this reporter set it down after an hour's chat with Sandburg 12 years ago, " 'blank' and 'blank.' " But, just as one is ready to put him down as an utter he-man, a more than 100-per-center, that arresting note of courtliness rings out again, or he says something so musical and well-rounded and rememberable—and probably sentimental—that the truth will no longer down; he is, beyond possibility of disguise, a poet.

Witter Bynner put those contradictions into a poem describing him as

Gray and sinewy and soft

purring, prowling, aloof but at home, tender, tigered and a hunter—

Mysterious and more than that,
Sandburg comes, the iron cat.

And Lew Sarett put him in another poem as "The Granite Mountain"—

. . . . lone it lies
Under wide blue Arctic skies.

Harry Hansen, his old Chicago comrade on the Daily News, wrote two fine full-length portraits, but perhaps showed more in a couple of lines incidental to other subjects: ". . . Carl Sandburg, peering out from under his black-visored cap like a traffic policeman, wearing his coat about his shoulders like a cape and stalking forward like another Ibsen in the streets of Christiana—Carl, come in for a bite to eat and a cup of coffee and to listen rather than talk" . . . "Carl Sandburg, 'just quiet and vast and fine, a wonder to sit beside and yet never saying anything.' "

Of all the half-glimpses caught in the books of other men, perhaps the most revealing is a sentence from a study by an associate professor of English, intended as a stricture, not without validity, and yet hardly to be read without a chuckle:

Sandburg's recent book is called "The People, Yes," and critics say it sets up a milestone in his growth. He always writes about the people, never about himself. But through what he writes one may see the author. And some of his lines might be of interest to the professor:

"The best book is the world."

". . . The most detestable word in the English language . . . the one word just a little worse than any other you can think of, is 'Exclusive.' "

Certainly there's nothing exclusive about the book. It takes in Johnny Appleseed and Paul Bunyan, Thoreau and (in the next line) Walter Winchell, the Tower of Babel and the Brookings Institution, Faraday's diary and the Newspaper Guild, Johann Sebastian Bach and Mae West.

If the people is a myth, he asks, "What myth would you put in place of the people?" He asks, "When have the people been half as rotten as what the panderers to the people dangle before crowds?" And against the cold, proud testament that "Your people, sir, is a great beast," he marshals another testament as proud:

"All men are born free and equal."

Sandburg is as much of the people as his book, or as the Lincoln about whom he has already turned out two volumes of bed-rock erudition and bed-rock simplicity. He was born in Galesburg, Illinois, January 6, 1878, son of a railroad blacksmith from Asposoken, Northern Sweden, and the beginnings of his monumental "Lincoln" were dedicated to his parents as laborers on the prairie. HIS second—and, so to speak, permanent—discoverer is his wife, Lillian Steichen, sister of the noted photographer, Edward J. The remainder he gave to his wife and young son.

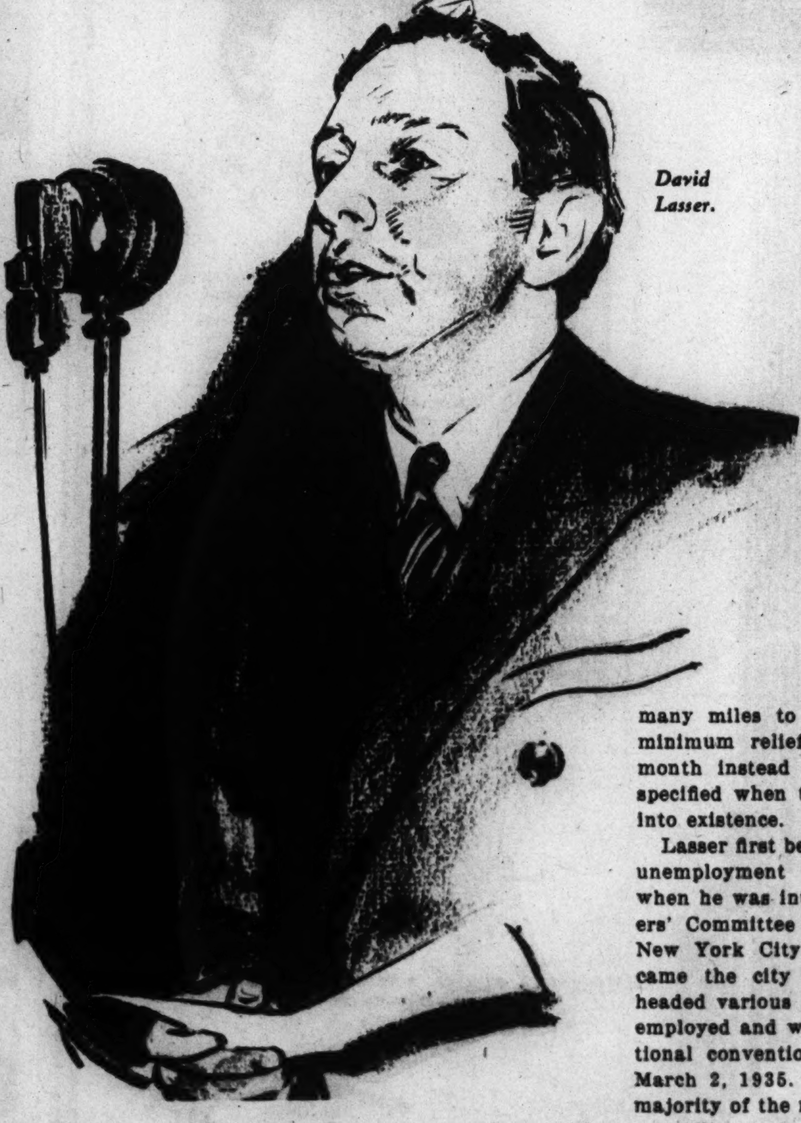
The Worker's Alliance of America is indorsed by the American Federation of Labor and Lasser stoutly maintains it supports no political party although he is a Socialist and ran for Congress on that party's ticket in the 1932 election. He expects to run for Congress again in the next election.

Averring that only a donkey refuses to change its mind, Lasser is not hidebound by tradition or eternal allegiance to any political group. He voted for Hoover in 1928 because, being a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he had faith in a fellow engineer.

This faith was badly shaken, however, and in 1932 Lasser swung to the Socialist cause of Norman Thomas and will probably remain among his supporters indefinitely. But he is not inclined to enter lengthy political controversies. He likes to impress interviewers with the fact that he is the leader of an important labor movement designed to help all people in trouble and constantly reiterates that his labor organization has no connection with the Communist Party or any other party.

As proof of the solidarity of his organization Lasser points out that the National Executive Board of the Worker's Alliance in Washington has charge of 500 locals in 42 states. The structure was started March 2, 1935, and shows a lusty growth in a year and a half. Its constituents, of course, are unemployed and relief workers.



David Lasser.

The main object of the Worker's Alliance is to demand better standards of relief and higher wages. It also takes up the grievances of relief workers and fights for a worker's reclassification when such is deserved.

Lasser also becomes indignant when he hears of project workers who are obliged to travel many miles to work and wants the minimum relief wages to be $45 a month instead of the $19 that was specified when the WPA was brought into existence.

Lasser first became interested in the unemployment and relief problem when he was introduced to the Workers' Committee on Unemployment in New York City and in 1933 he became the city chairman. He has headed various Eastern groups of unemployed and was top man at the national convention of the unemployed March 2, 1935. It is known that the majority of the members of the Worker's Alliance prefer to back a Farmer-Labor party, but no pressure is brought to bear upon them to support this political faction.

Lasser set his first important hunger march in motion in Oregon in 1934 when the State Legislature decided to take a vacation and let the unemployed shift for themselves. This maneuver was not very successful, but it convinced Lasser that similar maneuvers on a higher numerical scale would eventually command attention.

Profiting by his first experience, Lasser went to San Antonio, Texas, and put the unemployed in motion, getting decidedly better results and more food than usual for the destitute.

LASSER has been staging intermittent hunger marches on the United States Capitol since 1931, but he sprang into world-wide prominence last April when members of the Worker's Alliance invaded Trenton, New Jersey, occupied the State House and jeered the Legislature. The interlopers were finally ejected by the police, but the news that relief recipients in the State of New Jersey were suddenly cut off from all means of sustenance created widespread concern.

Now before a State Legislature decides to drop an ax on relief, it first has to weigh the possible disturbance and the adverse public sentiment that David Lasser and his Worker's Alliance are apt to create.

Whether or not the Worker's Alliance can be considered a political factor is conjectural at present, but the organization as it stands is well spread out and has representation in the rural communities as well as the cities. The local groups of the Worker's Alliance meet in churches, settlement houses and other edifices of a semi-public nature.

Advance information on conditions in different states is sent to the alliance from all parts of the country and the intimation that anyone of the 48 states is planning to cut relief appropriations or do something else inimical to those on relief is met with immediate opposition.

The office of the Worker's Alliance in New York City is located in a ramshackle bulding at Number 221 East Twenty-third street. The vice-president of the Worker's Alliance and the man who will succeed David Lasser if he should win a political office on the Socialist ticket is W. K. Patrick of Oregon, who is not allied to any political party and merely wants to be known as an independent voter. Herbert Benjamin, a former head of the unemployed councils, is a Communist and a member of the board of strategy of the Worker's Alliance. There is no known Republican voter in the personnel of the Worker's Alliance, but undoubtedly Lasser could produce one if pressed for such information.

The Worker's Alliance is supported by voluntary contributions. The unemployed on its roster contribute 10 cents a week and the WPA workers give 15 cents which enables the various offices to function and keep their printing presses going.

The cash deposits of the Worker's Alliance are in what is known as the Amalgamated Bank Account and additional moneys are garnered from the running of social affairs. More funds in the treasury of the Worker's Alliance at a future date would mean that the leaders of the movement can hope for a salary of $30 a week instead of the regulation $20 which is now the rule.

Lasser is a man of quiet demeanor, which is not, however, without a hint of forcefulness. He has a broad, intelligent forehead and kindly brown eyes.

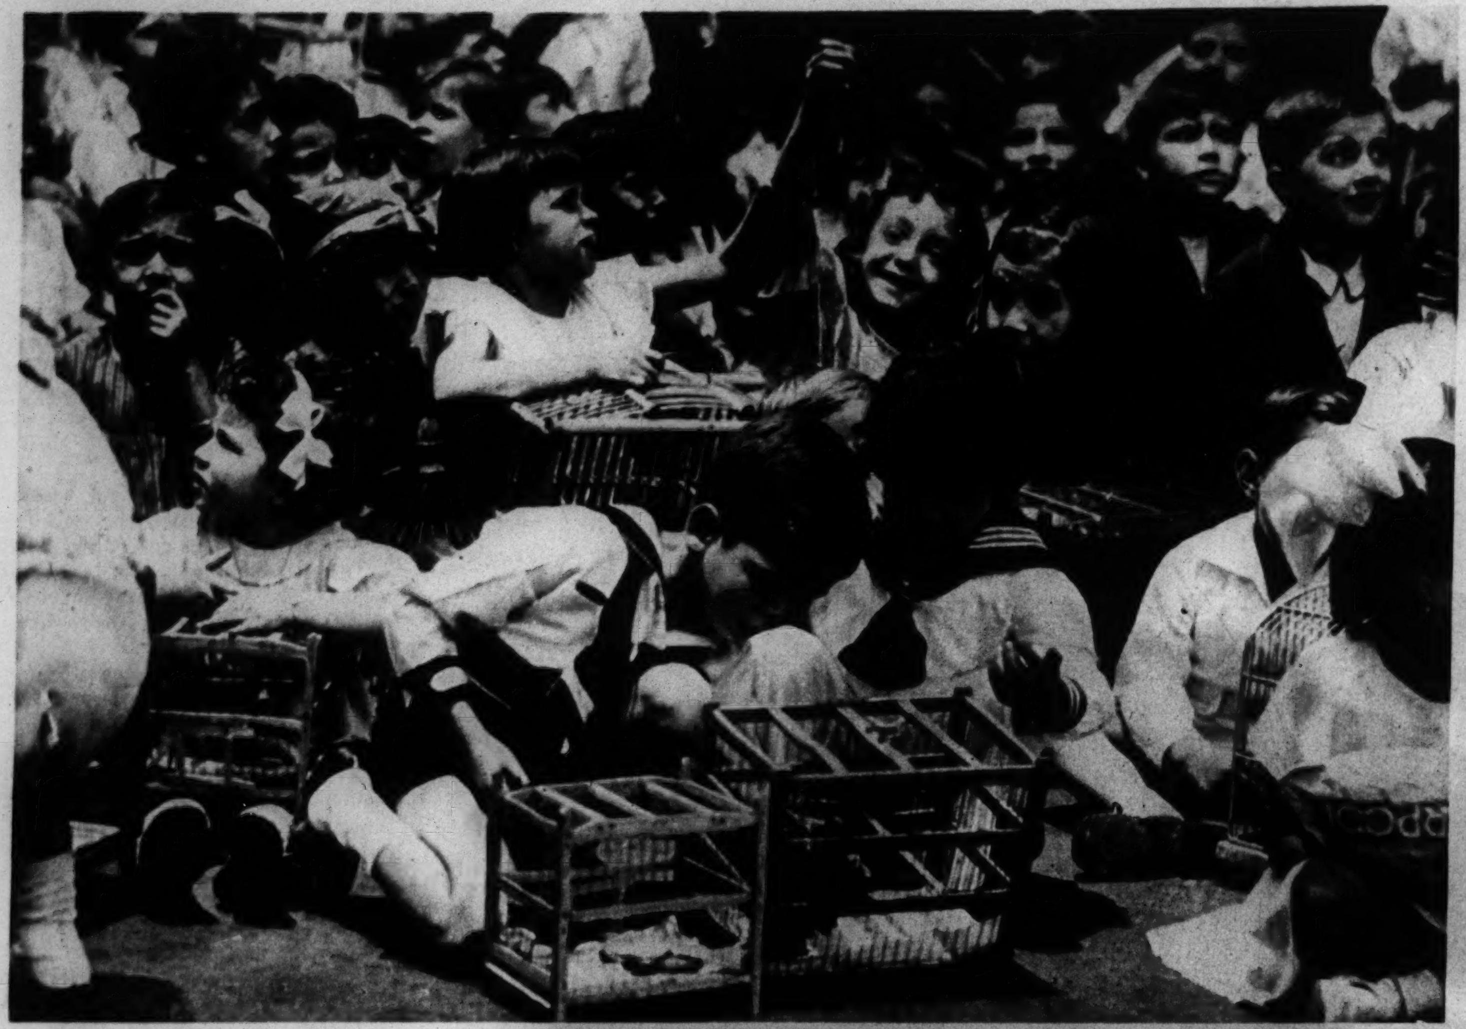
Why MEXICO CITY'S CHILDREN FREED THEIR PET BIRDS

The City Needed Them to Make War on Pestiferous Insects and the Owners Made the Sacrifice but Not Without Tears.



Children in the Alameda taking farewell looks at their pets.

MEXICO, D. F.

WHY people's best impulses frequently make them the greatest nuisance nobody knows. Certainly it wouldn't do to teach children not to be good and gentle and unselfish. On the other hand too much pious insistence on virtue sometimes turns hopeful youngsters into grown-up prigs even their own children aren't capable of re-educating. The touching little story that follows illustrates the point.

Nobody could conceivably make Alfonso Cuesta Gallardo out to be a villain. It is his good and kindly impulse that is the bad man of this piece. Alfonso wasn't thinking of anything except sweet nature and birds and flowers when this impulse took a hand. He was thinking of the fine trees in the Alameda Park, of the soft winds and burgeoning blooms, of riotous colors and restful shade. He was worrying about the insects, which have been doing so much damage there lately. If there were only more birds in the park, he was thinking, the damage might be repaired. The birds could rid Alameda Park of the noxious insects and fill the air with their songs.

Alfonso is as gentle and humane a man as one could want. Kindness to animals and birds and trees runs strong in him. Naturally when he yields to an impulse it is a good one. Hence, worrying about the insects and wishing for birds gave birth to one of the sweetest impulses in the world. He would go to the children of Mexico City and ask them to donate canaries to the park. Then the birds might be free and happy—and besides that kill off the insects and fill the air with sibilant twitterings and chirrupings and belling rolls and quavers.

Now birds are to Mexican children about the same thing dogs and cats are to most children north of here. Almost every household has a cage; most houses have several hanging in the gardens and every Mexican street resounds with bird songs. Canaries are the favorites. There are also pet nightingales, bluebirds, robins and so on.

When Alfonso Cuesta Gallardo's impulse had ripened, he took it to the school teachers. Being a Commissioner, he was listened to. His pretty thought found ready answers from the kindergarten teachers. How sweet of him, they thought, and how fine it will be for the children. . . .

The teachers told their pupils in the kindergartens and the pupils went home and told their parents. Everybody thought at the time that freeing the children's canaries in the park would be a good thing. Even the children, swayed no doubt by the obvious wisdom and kindliness of their elders, thought it would be sweet to do. Besides, how fine it would be to see their caged pets suddenly take wing and fill the air with golden wings and shrill, happy chirpings.

THEY caught the spirit of the thing impulsively, after the first reluctance. The idea was like the Pied Piper's flutings. The children found it irresistible. Naturally it never occurred to them that if their elders wanted to fill the park with canaries, they might just release their own canaries. That would have been too cynical and selfish a thing for any properly conducted Mexican child to think. They were actually eager to show how generous they could be to their elders and to their canaries.

So on the appointed day for the emancipation all little Mexico City children put on their finest pinafores and sailor suits and went to school carrying bird cages, simple little wicker cages such as one sees in every Mexican market place. More than 500 youngsters marched to the center of the park that morning, accompanied by their smiling teachers and filled with pious thoughts, beaming like young saints.

In the center of the park they all sat down under the trees—majestic palm and eucalyptus and graceful ash. The air was fragrant and the sun shone and the bewildered canaries chirped and twittered. Then the teachers gave a prearranged signal. Five hundred chubby hands unlatched the cages and threw open the doors. Most of the birds took off in a cloud and circled happily in the sun. A few, reluctant or frightened by the children's ringing laughter or unwilling to try their wings for the first time, fluttered out and hopped on their owners' shoulders. Finally these caught the spirit of the thing and flew away, too. Hundreds of birds soared into the branches and began to sing. The place vibrated with childish laughter and canary trills. All very gay it was. The teachers chirped a happy accompaniment, carried away by the simple scene. It all lasted several minutes.

THEN suddenly an unexpected thing happened. The birds were gone. The singing had died away. The children sat confronted by empty cages and the prospect of going to school and then returning to birdless houses that night. Perhaps they were hurt and disillusioned, too, because they had felt so certain that their pets really wouldn't fly away. The disloyalty of the canaries and the sight of the empty cages were too much for them. In a moment, the place was full of heart-broken sobbing children. The wailing was contagious. Those who were ashamed to wail, or had had no canaries to free, added to the clamor by jeering shrieks. Alameda Park became a bedlam.

Many of the children had brought bird seed and bread crumbs with them, hoping to entice their pets back for a final parting. But the noise was too much for the canaries. With few exceptions they had left for good.

The teachers had to do something. They gathered their charges into little groups, explained to them again that the canaries loved their freedom just as much as little girls and little boys do. Setting the birds free merely gave them a chance to return to the open sky and the bright sun to which they were accustomed. Think of how happy they were, how glad to get away. . . . And so with pattings and pretty little lectures and bright examples of smiles, the youngsters finally quieted down. The teachers followed up their victories, and little by little persuaded and herded the still vaguely disconsolate youngsters back to school.

ROUSE YOUR UNDER SKI

See BLACKHEADS Clear
PORES look Finer

TWO common faults! Blackheads and coarse pores spoil the prettiest skin!

They come when tiny glands underneath function faultily—clog the pores with over-thick oils. First blackheads form. It's not long before pores are looking larger.

But you can bring that faulty underskin back to healthy action—rouse it with the faithful use of Pond's deep-skin treatment:

Every night, pat on Pond's Cold Cream. Its specially processed oils go deep, release deep-lodged dirt and make-up. Wipe off. At once, your skin looks clearer! Pat in more cream—briskly. The circulation stirs. Glands waken. Tissues are invigorated.

Every morning (and before make-up) repeat . . . Your skin is smooth for powder. Your whole face fresher, clearer. Soon blackheads are discouraged. Pores are actually smaller!

The Beautiful SNOWDEN SISTERS and Their Impulsive ROMANCES

Snowden had been jilted by American boy friend and had herself at the Italian merely in spite. This Janverishly denied.

"It's not true!" she said, shrill emphatic. "It simply isn't I did not marry for spite! correct that. There was no man. It was simply that I a mistake. I found—I —that I didn't love the That is all."

Mrs. Davidson was summering Poland, Maine. When the newspapers reached her at Poland Springs Hotel she was frankly annoyed.

"I'm way up here in the woods," she snapped. "I don't know anything about it. Why don't you talk to the Prince and Princess Rospigliosi? They ought to have something to say. From what I understand, they sponsored the marriage. I had nothing to do with it. Nobody consulted me. Here I am out in the woods. And I didn't even hear about it until it was all over."

Well, Janet's talk of an annulment was pure bluff. She couldn't get an annulment and she didn't have time for a divorce. Apparently, though, the attention that was given her story and the fact that she obviously photographs well (both sisters, it may have been gathered, are easy to look at) induced her to toy with the idea of a movie contract. She decided to go out to Hollywood and see what could be done. Meanwhile Prince di Siriggnano don Francesco Caravita who, it turns out, is a famous racing car driver in his own country (and that may explain a good deal about his dare-devil marriage), whipped out for Italy on the next boat and refused to talk to anybody about what had happened to him.

So Janet went out West to go into the movies. It would have been a pity, everybody said, to waste so much fine publicity. But in Hollywood, where she engaged a manager to get her called to the attention of the casting directors, she met something more interesting to her then screen fame and publicity. She fell in love with William Sherman Gill, a publicity man, went down to Ensenada, Mexico, for a divorce, and came back to get married all over again. So far that marriage still stands. It was in June, 1934.

Meanwhile things weren't going well with the Rospigliosi, whose marriage had stood as a model of accidental bliss coming out of a hair-brained elopement between an American and a European nobleman. By this time the marriage was acceptable even to Mrs. Davidson, who had been its most bitter opponent. Marian had taken umbrage when the papers gossiped about her in 1933. She had come home to New York several weeks before her husband. In order to prove to the world that she still loved him, she chartered a plane the day he was expected to arrive in New York (cost, $120) took off at 4 in the morning and circled his boat several times as it steamed into New York harbor. Afterwards she returned to the city, changed, and was on hand to meet her husband at the pier. "I guess that proves she loves me," the Prince told ship reporters.

But love wasn't enough. According to Italian law a wife assumes her husband's nationality (whether she wants to or not) and is responsible for his debts. By this time Prince Girolamo's debts were catching up with him and he was facing suits from every quarter. And of course Marian was named co-defendant in the suits. One judgment for $72,000 was particularly unpleasant to the Princess. A Supreme Court decision decreed that the firm which held the Prince's note might attach 10 per cent of the Princess' income until the principal and interest had been collected. Prince Rospigliosi had taken a job as a wine salesman in New York; Marian went disconsolately to visit her mother in Bermuda.

DURING this interlude she spent a good deal of time in the company of Louis F. Reed Jr., a wealthy and attractive young man at that time married to Marie Hoffman, who was heiress to her father, a rich merchant. The Reeds had been married for about five years, hadn't spent a great deal of time together and were ready for a split. Marian and young Reed had been intimate friends since their early childhood. This situation came to a climax a year ago.

Reed had been divorced by his wife the previous summer; gossip says he got a settlement of $3000 a month out of the suit—which sounds a little high, but may be the truth, at that. His wife was extremely well off.

Then Reed and Prince and Princess Rospigliosi got together and talked over their prospects. The Prince was still very much in love with his wife and constitutionally opposed to divorce. But he had to give her his permission to seek one. So Marian and Louis Reed went off to Reno together in an airplane, Marian explaining to anyone who wanted to know that she and her husband had been incompatible and that their nationalities were an insurmountable barrier to happiness. "It's too bad it had to happen this way, but we're both young and a divorce won't wreck our lives."

That was in September, 1935. But a few days after taking off for Reno Reed and Princess Rospigliosi were back in New York having supper with Prince Rospigliosi at the Stork Club. Somebody got a snapshot of it. All the gossips were agog. Then suddenly, at the end of the year, Marian hopped another plane, went off to Mexico alone, and returned a few days later with a divorce. Prince Rospigliosi said he didn't see how a gentleman could contest a wife's action to get rid of him. He did nothing about it. And last May Marian Snowden and Louis F. Reed were married in a Jersey City law office. They went to Bermuda together.

Everyone in New York knew one good reason why that marriage couldn't last. Marie Hoffman, Reed's former wife, hadn't seen any need to be particularly discreet about it. So no one was surprised when Marian was back within two months saying, "I made a terrible mistake when I married Louis Reed. I should have known better."

Reed had asked her to wait until December to get a divorce. "Out of decency to him," she says, she will wait. Prince Girolamo di Rospigliosi (who also knows something about decency) is waiting too. But New York gossip doesn't give him a very good chance. It has already picked out another future husband for Marian Snowden, one who doesn't have a title.

'BORN to RAISE HELL', HE NOW HAS NOTHING to FIGHT FOR

corner blocked the enormous ession. "You can't pass ," he said gruffly in broken nish. Then began an amazing loquy.

"Do you speak English?" asked Major O'Reilly.

"And why in the divil shouldn't

"What is your name?"

"My name is McGuire."

"Well, McGuire, I admire your of duty, but you are holding up a whole war here, stopping 60,000 men. The plot of this piece is to capture this city. You will have to stand aside."

"Sure, and I can't help it if you're 60,000 men. You can't pass here. Them's me orders."

And so on until O'Reilly explodes: "You must stand aside!"

"Oh, I must; must I? And what is your name?"

"My name is O'Reilly."

Whereupon the little policeman begins to roar with laughter at the idea of a man named O'Reilly leading a column of "sandal-foot Indians."

"And why the divil didn't you say so at first? Pass on, O'Reilly."

It was years later that Tex O'Reilly and Tim McGuire met again. Tim had served in the World War. O'Reilly had been a Major in Washington. They were fighting the Riff in Primo de Rivera's Foreign Legion. Tim was top sergeant of Tex's company. The Foreign Legion was protecting the rear in a mass retreat during which the Mohammedans killed 30,000 Spanish troops. "Through it all Tim McGuire fought like a wild cat and came through it all with hardly a scratch. He was always on hand, impudent, grinning, dirty and unshaved, a rag hanging down the back of his neck to protect it from the sun. . . ."

Three companies had been reduced to 187 men and O'Reilly was senior officer. The Legion was being mercilessly harried by a troop of fanatical Berbers who carried a sacred flag into which were woven what they took to be hairs from the beard of the Prophet Mohammed. They thought this made them irresistible—and it seemed to. Every time they charged with that black banner, they broke the Spanish line. In the middle of such an onslaught O'Reilly was ordered to retreat and repeatedly refused, knowing that any change of position would wipe out his dwindling companies. "We will not come out without our dead," he wired in excuse, and the message became a by-word in the Legion.

After that battle the force, cut down to 150 men, dug in a hundred yards from the Moorish trenches. A priest set up the fatal flag near the lines, as a prelude to the morrow's slaughter.

RATHER than face that, Tex decided to capture the flag. He and Tim McGuire headed a flying wedge of Legionnaires ordered not to stop for their own wounded: "None of us comes back without that flag." In the midst of the melee Tex was separated from his men and wounded. Suddenly he heard an Irish voice shouting above the cries of the Berbers.

"Gangway! Tex! Tex! Quick! I've got the whiskers of God!"

Tim was fatally wounded. They brought him back to die as their lone machine gun protected them from the counter-charge of the demoralized Berbers. Of the 21 men who had gone in, only six survived, but they had saved the survivors of those three companies. Tim was comforted with a quart of cognac. He died drunk and happy, singing an Irish song. And Tex O'Reilly was decorated with the Cruz de Valor, made a Lieutenant-Colonel and a Knight of the Order of Isabel la Catolica.

That was his last war and he refused an invitation to join the recent trouble in Honduras. He is 55 years old and he has run out of causes.

other gathering places, mostly of young people; and being kept up until all hours singing the old ballads in someone's home or a tradition-mellowed back room. He knows something like a dozen versions of the music and even more of the words of "Frankie and Johnnie," but he leaves out the earthy passages before ladies or the overly young. By some means hardly to be perceived, not at all to be described, he lifts them out of mere ribaldry into a sort of dignity fitting the title of "American classics." The reporter cannot explain, but cannot forget, the magic with which, one night under the famous "Black Madonna" at Dr. Gustave Lippmann's, Sandburg transfigured sordid, sardonic old "Sam Hall" into blinding tragedy.

All these things have gone into the new book—

The people, yes—sold and sold again
for losses and regrets,
for gains, for slow advances,
for a dignity of deepening roots.

All their history, he says, may be told in three words, "Born, troubled, died"; all their wisdom in one, "Maybe." And yet "the mob is the beginning of something"—

Perhaps the mournful beginning
Of a march out of darkness
Into a lesser darkness.

And the people is one of those mountain slopes holding a volcano of retribution,
Slow in all things, slow in its gathered wrath, slow in its onward heave,
Slow in its asking: "Where are we now? What time is it?"

MAKE-UP JUST WON'T GO ON SMOOTHLY WHEN SKIN IS ALL FLAKY—POND'S
Vanishing

SMOOTH INSTANTLY—
ROUGHNESSES MELTED AWAY

SOMETIMES the softest powder, the smoothest rouge, just won't go on and look right.

It's your skin that's at fault!

Surface skin is always drying out. Little dead cells on top of your skin keep flaking off—causing the tiny harsh pieces that ruin make-up.

But you can melt them away—

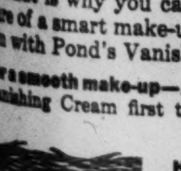
A distinguished dermatologist tells why: "When a keratolytic cream (Vanishing Cream) touches the skin, an instant softening takes place. Dried-out cells on surface skin melt away. The young underlying cells come into view. The skin quickly acquires youthful smoothness."

That is why you can always be sure of a smart make-up if you begin with Pond's Vanishing Cream.

For a smooth make-up—Apply Pond's Vanishing Cream first to melt away roughnesses—even tiny ones you can hardly see. Then powder goes on with a "beauty-salon" finish!

Overnight for lasting softness—Every night, after your regular cleansing, spread Pond's Vanishing Cream on face, hands, elbows . . . all night long it brings your skin extra softness to make you lovelier!



How outer skin flakes off

At top, see the dead cells that flake loose, "catch" your make-up. Melt them off!

DIRECTIONS: Mount on light cardboard. Cut out on outside lines. Be sure to cut out the two small mast-holes also. Fold on dotted lines and paste (stars indicate paste). The two sides of the hull are to be pasted together from the tip of the dragon head back to the point indicated by the dotted orange line. Likewise with the stern. Next paste in the section which holds the mast in position (see diagram). For the mast use a common soda straw. Cut the straw 7½ inches long. Make a split from the bottom end up half an inch and spread as in diagram. All further cuts on mast are clearly shown. Now set the mast in place and add the sail. Tie a piece of string to the mast just above the sail and down to the point shown in diagram. For oars use flat toothpicks or whittle small splinters of wood. The white crosses on the hull indicate where oars go. Allow the oars to pierce through hull about one-quarter inch. Set in the pennon and she's all set!

SEEING THINGS IN A BIG WAY

THE CHARACTERS

O. HUM—A very unfortunate opossum.
MR. ZING—A harmless bug.
JITTERY JOHN—A timid little harvest mouse.

My, but the world looks strange to O. Hum—so terribly strange that the poor opossum can hardly believe his eyes. And it would be a very good thing for him if he didn't believe them, because they are magnifying everything that he looks at many, many times. Of course, O. Hum doesn't know this. Neither does he know that the odd little woman who made him stop breaking down the homes of some well-meaning little ants the other day was a witch. She took him to her cave, deep in the woods, and fed him a magic stew that is making O. Hum see everything greatly magnified. And he will remain under this spell until he does a good deed. Poor O. Hum, he thinks he is having a bad dream. We see him running for dear life from a little bug, that appears as a horrible monster to him, as

THE PLAY BEGINS

O. HUM—Help! Help! P-p-please don't h-h-hurt m-me, m-m-mister m-m-monster.

MR. ZING—(Surprised.) Hurt you? You must be crazy. Why, you're so much bigger than I am that you would kill me if you stepped on me.

O. HUM—Oh, I-I-I w-w-wouldn't step on y-you if I-I-I could. S-s-so p-please don't y-you step on m-m-me. I-I-I'm going away from h-here. (Poor O. Hum is terribly scared. The grass and flowers look like strange, gigantic trees to him and little pebbles appear to be huge boulders. Yet, to the bewilderment of the frightened opossum, he can run over them as easily as he ever could. He runs and runs until he is exhausted. Then he stops under a tree to rest. After a while he hears what to him should be a familiar voice.)

JITTERY JOHN—What's the matter, O. Hum? Why were you running so hard? (O. Hum looks to see who is talking to him and has an awful fright. Never before has he seen such a monster of a mouse. He's too tired to run, so he drops on his knees to beg this new giant not to hurt him.)

O. HUM—P-p-please go away.

JITTERY JOHN—(Very surprised.) Why, O. Hum, what's the matter with you? I'm not going to do you any harm. W-why, I couldn't if I tried.

O. HUM—O-o-oh, d-don't try, mister giant mouse.

JITTERY JOHN—(Bewildered, to himself.) The poor fellow doesn't know me. I wonder if it's safe to be near him.

Fort Wayne, Indiana; Oct. 6, 1909.

Square-jawed charmer, cool blonde, and smart, clothes and mind. To Los Angeles when 7 years old; to Hollywood as little (5 feet 2; 112 pounds) ranch girl with Tom Mix, Buck Jones; bathing beauty, threw pies and took them with Mack Sennett; to stardom in "Me, Gangster." Learned fast and still learns; still a beauty, still bathes, but no pies. Screamed, ranted surpassingly in "Twentieth Century" (1934), and so stuck in (screen) tantrums until recent hit with William Powell, once her husband. Called him "cruel" officially (Reno, 1933), but they still polish up parts together, rubs noses (really!) at meeting.

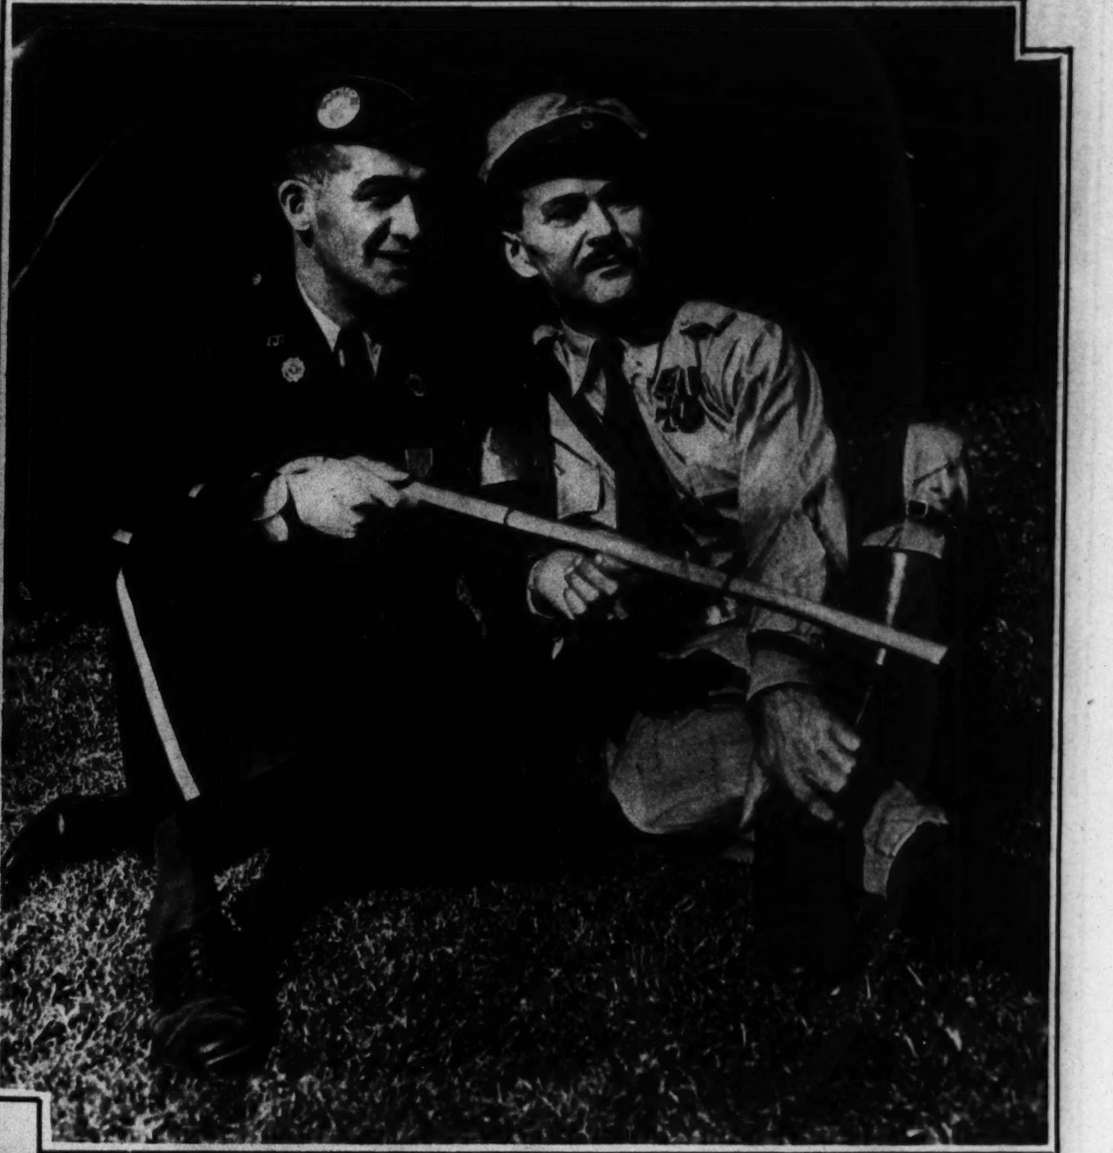
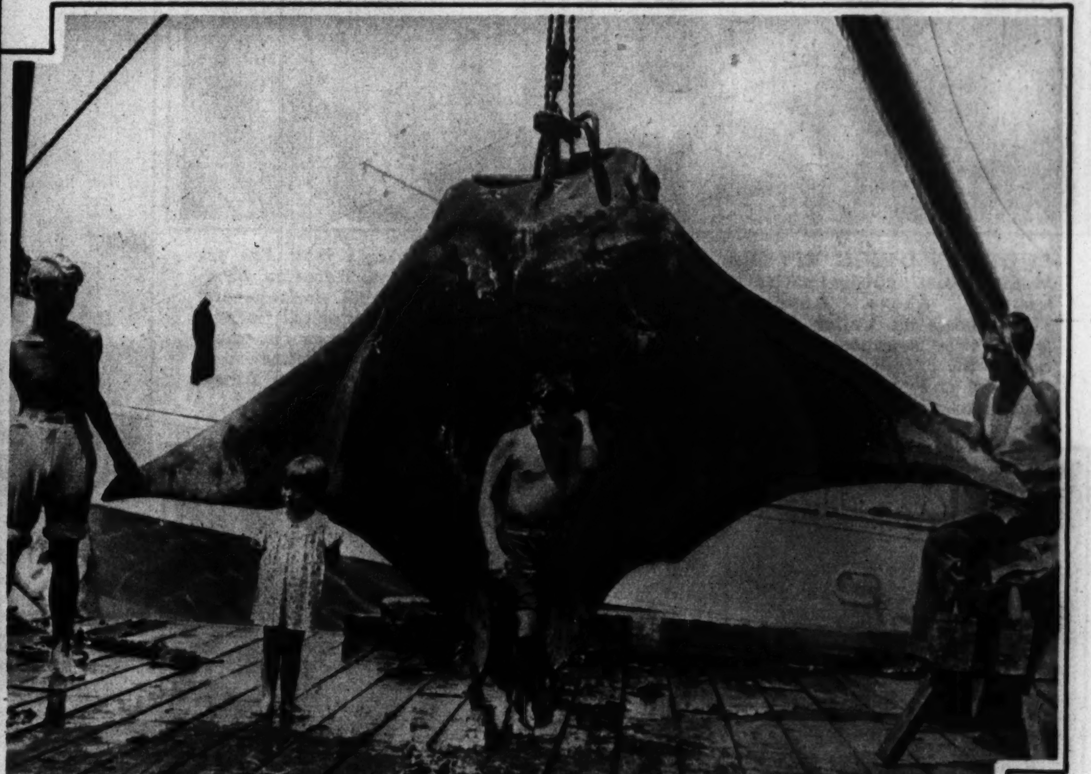
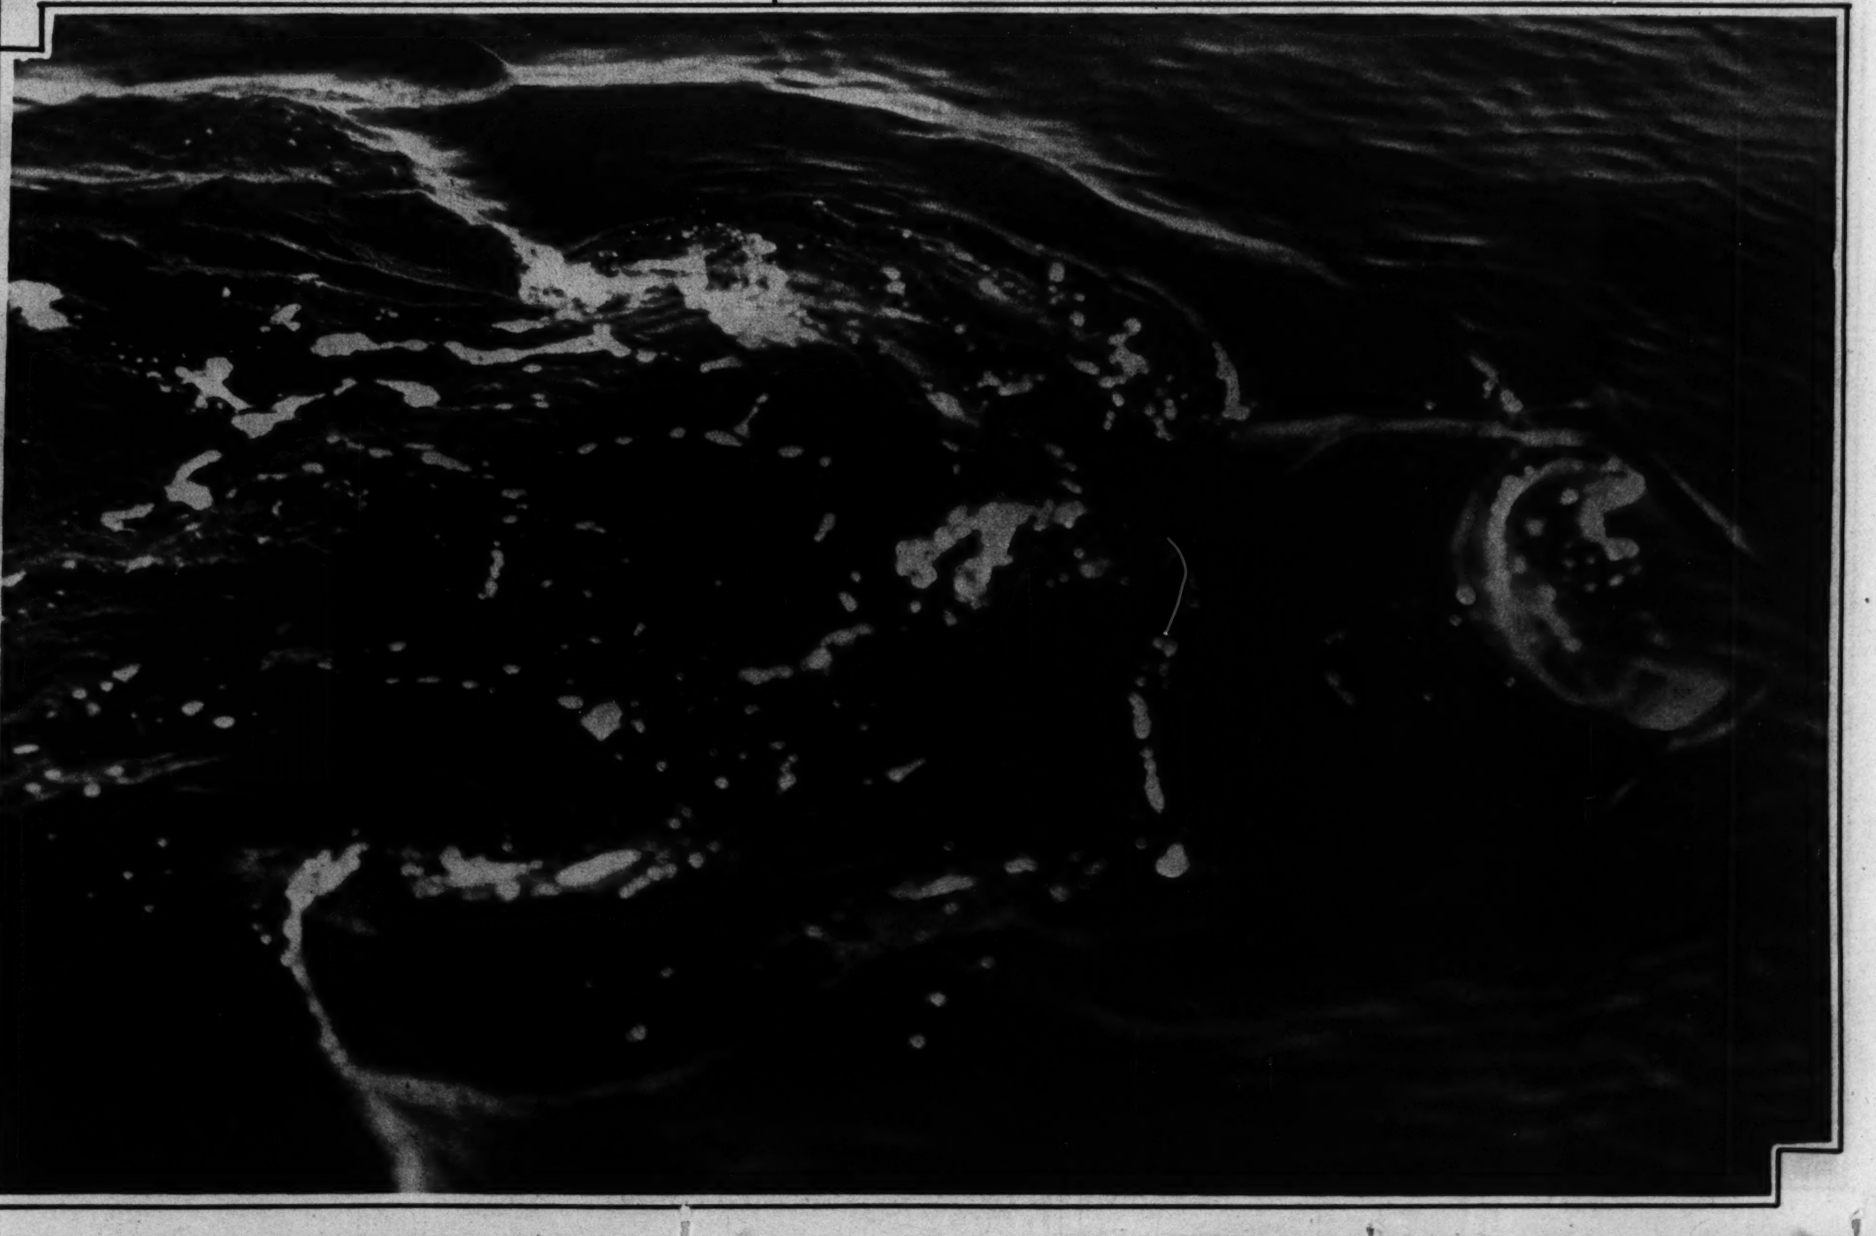
PLAIN MAN FROM KANSAS — Gov. and Mrs. Alf Landon took time off for the State Fair at Topeka. Accompanied by their two children, they rode merry-go-rounds, mixed with the crowd and ate peanuts.—Help yourself, Mrs. L.

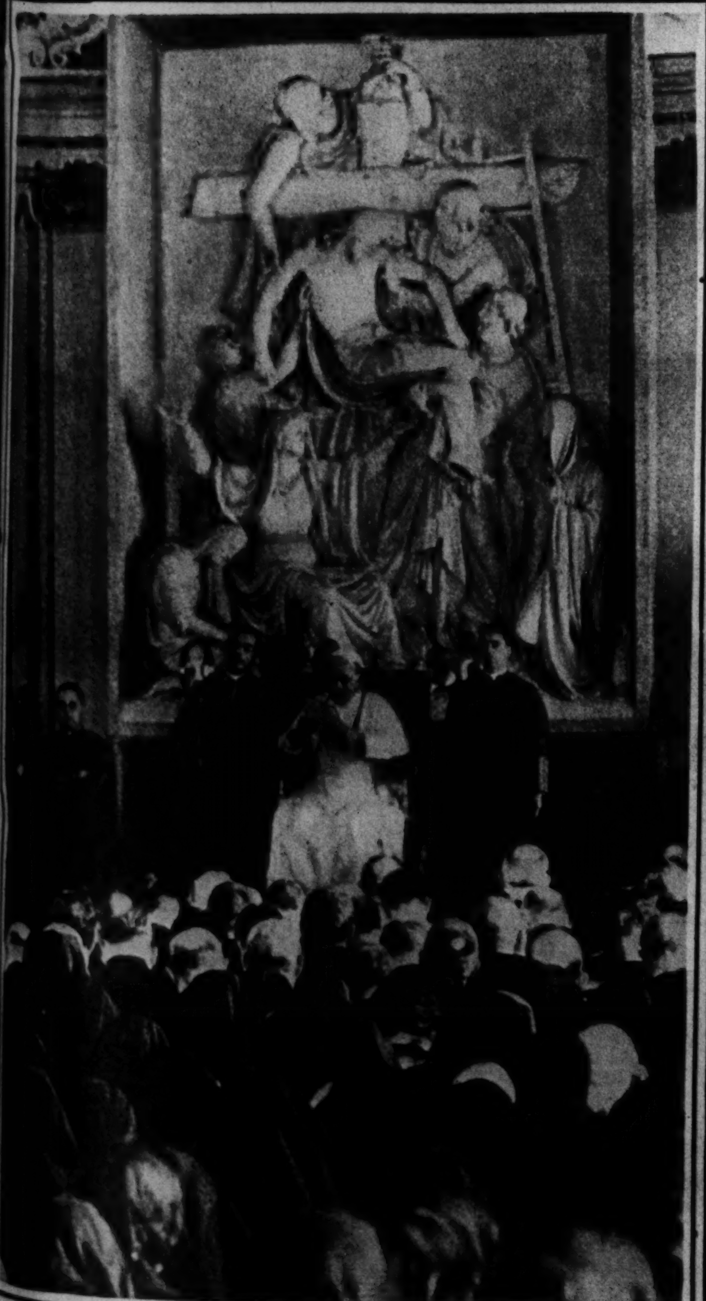


FRIENDLY ENEMIES—Buddies at the American Legion convention in Cleveland were Paul Cater (left) and Joseph Cabania (wearing German decorations) who met once before in an engagement along the Escaut River, Belgium, where both were wounded. Now they are Cleveland business men.

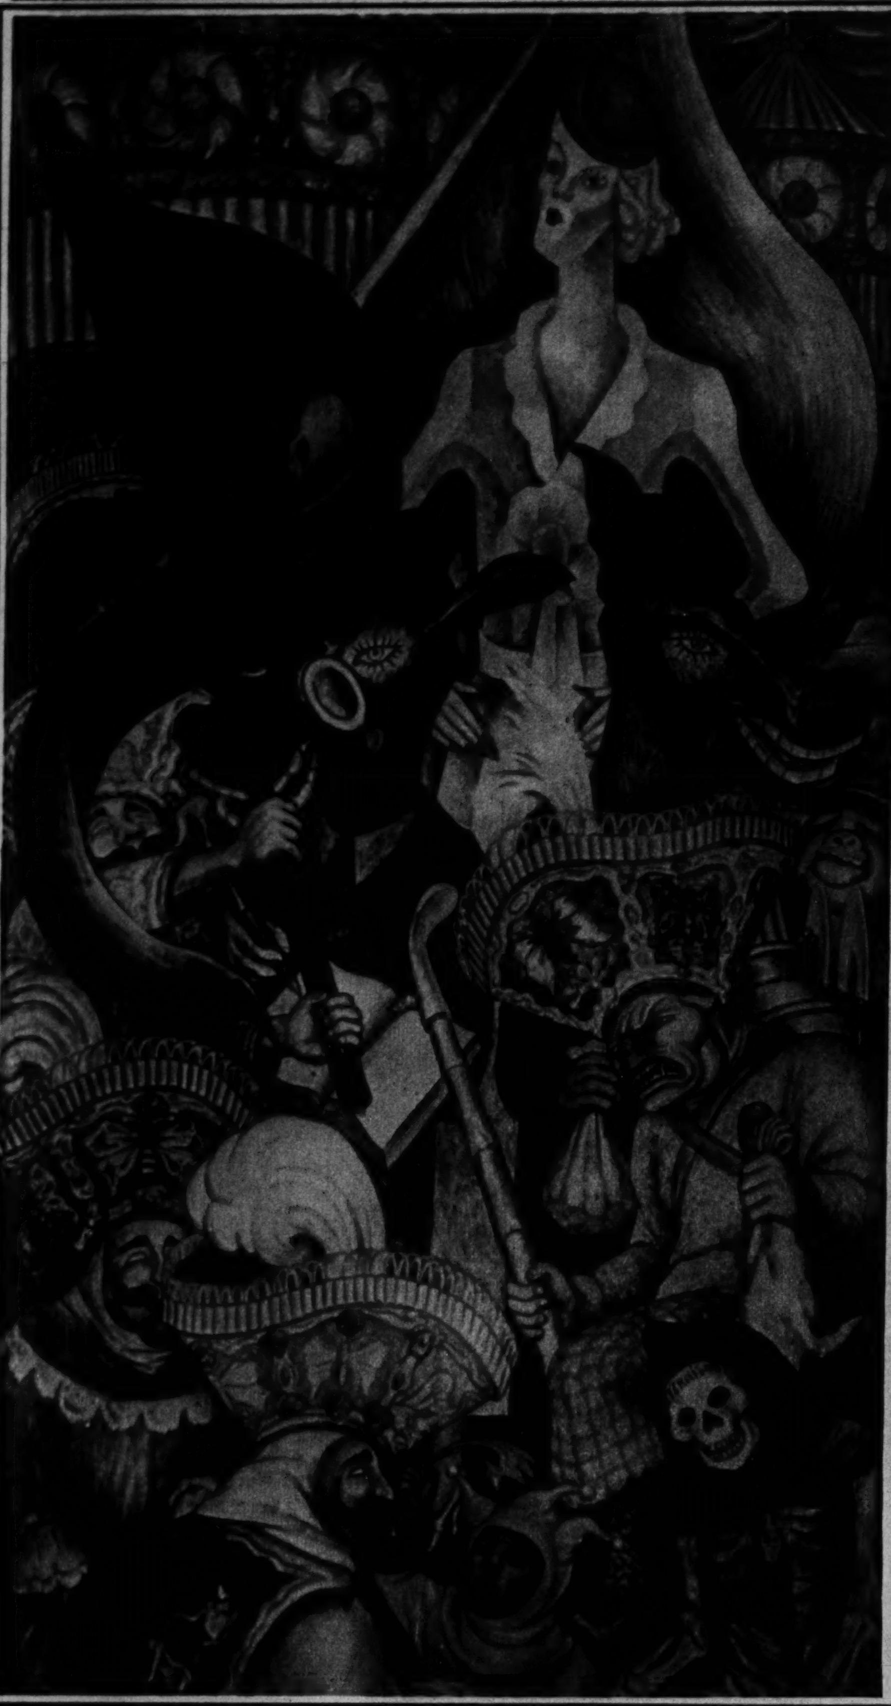


MARINE AND MONSTROUS—Two photographs of the giant ray, one of the uglier denizens of the deep: Below, as the harpooner sees it just before he strikes; above, as the admiring audience sees it after several hours of tough fighting along the Mississippi Gulf coast. The one below weighed a ton and a half; that above weighed less than a ton. —Anthony V. Ragusin photos.

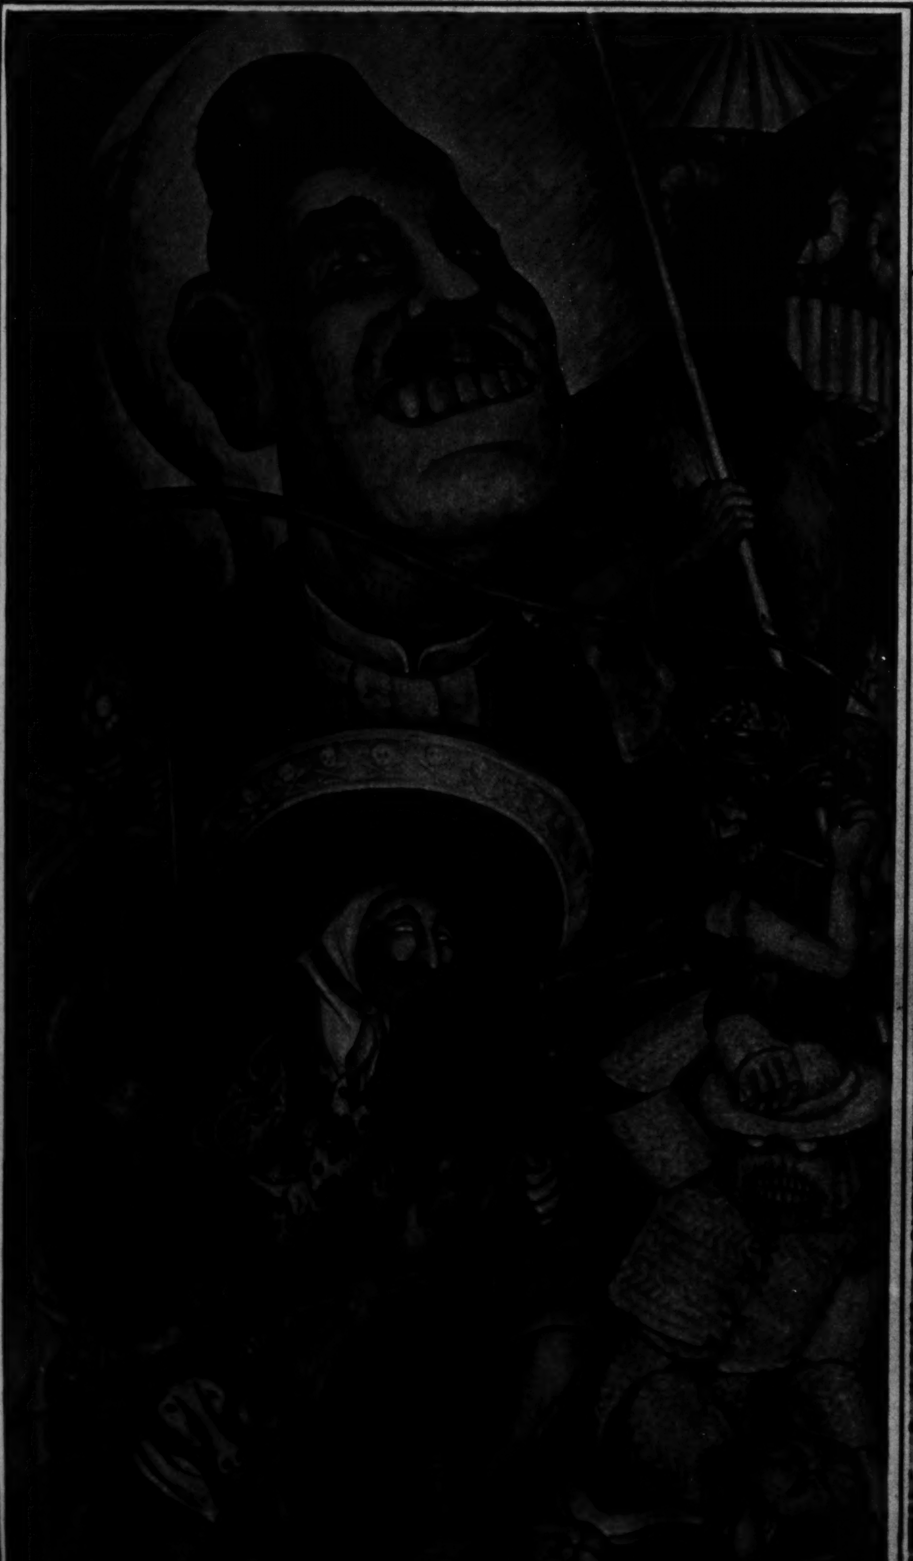


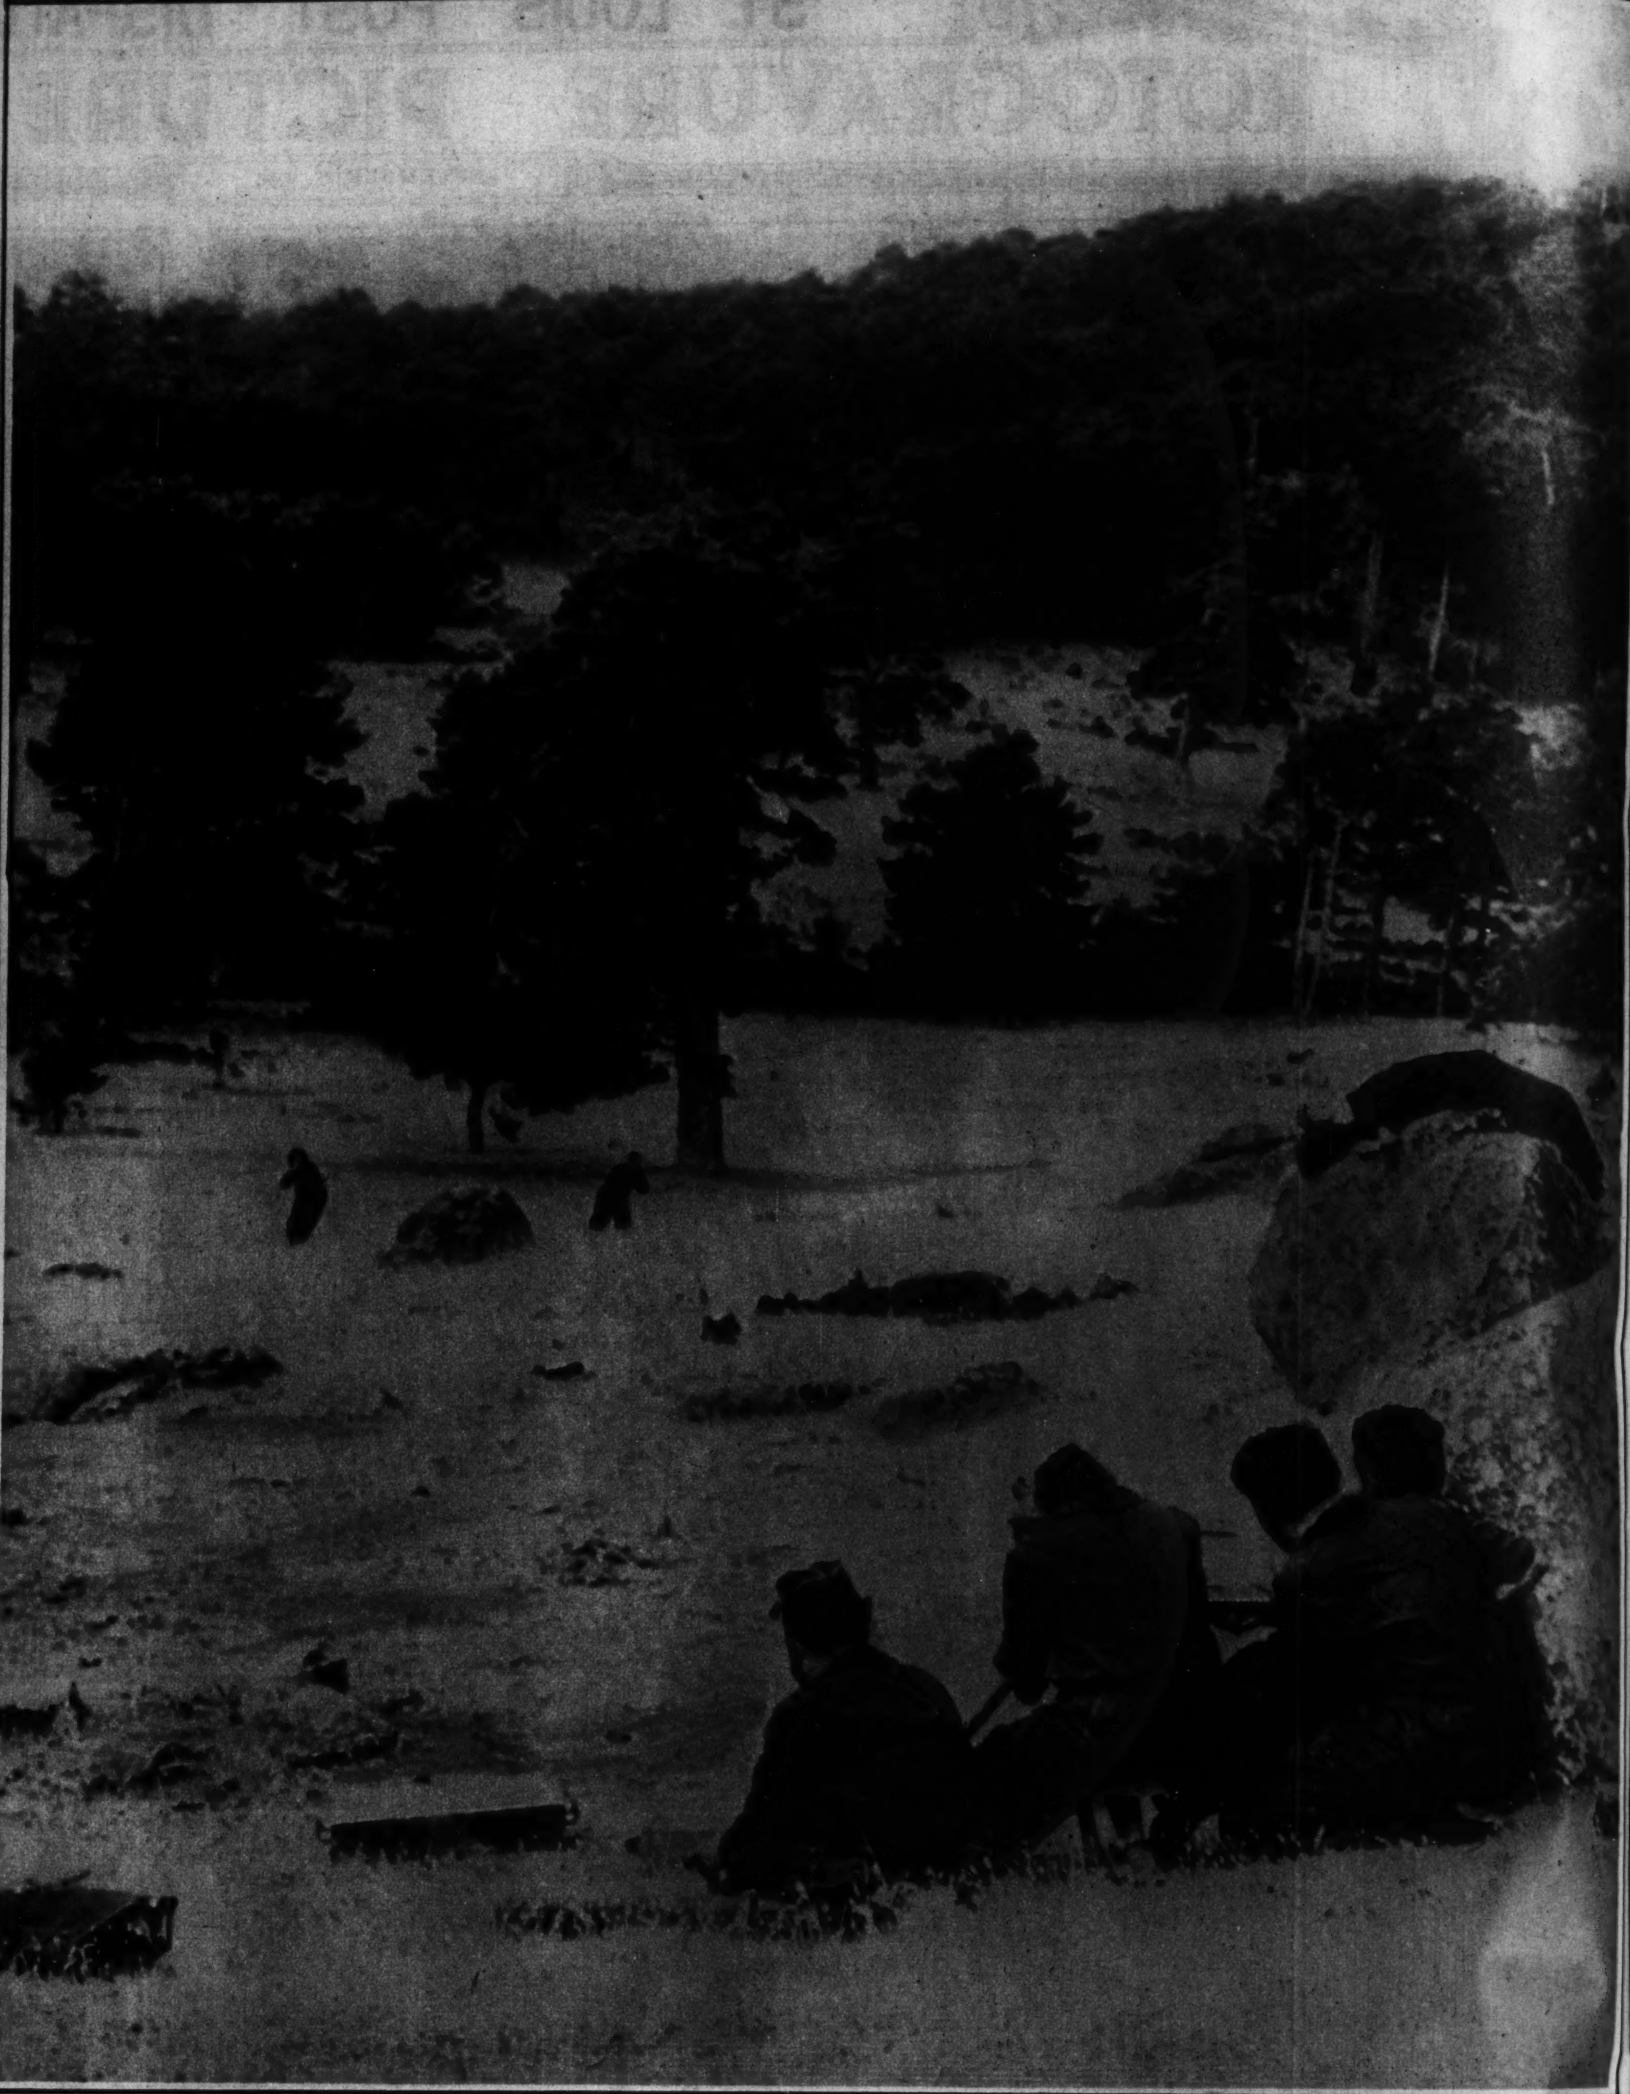


HIS HOLINESS; REFUGEES—The Pope addresses 500 Spanish fugitives, warning them and the world to resist "hate, subversion and destruction," his interpretation of Communist programs.



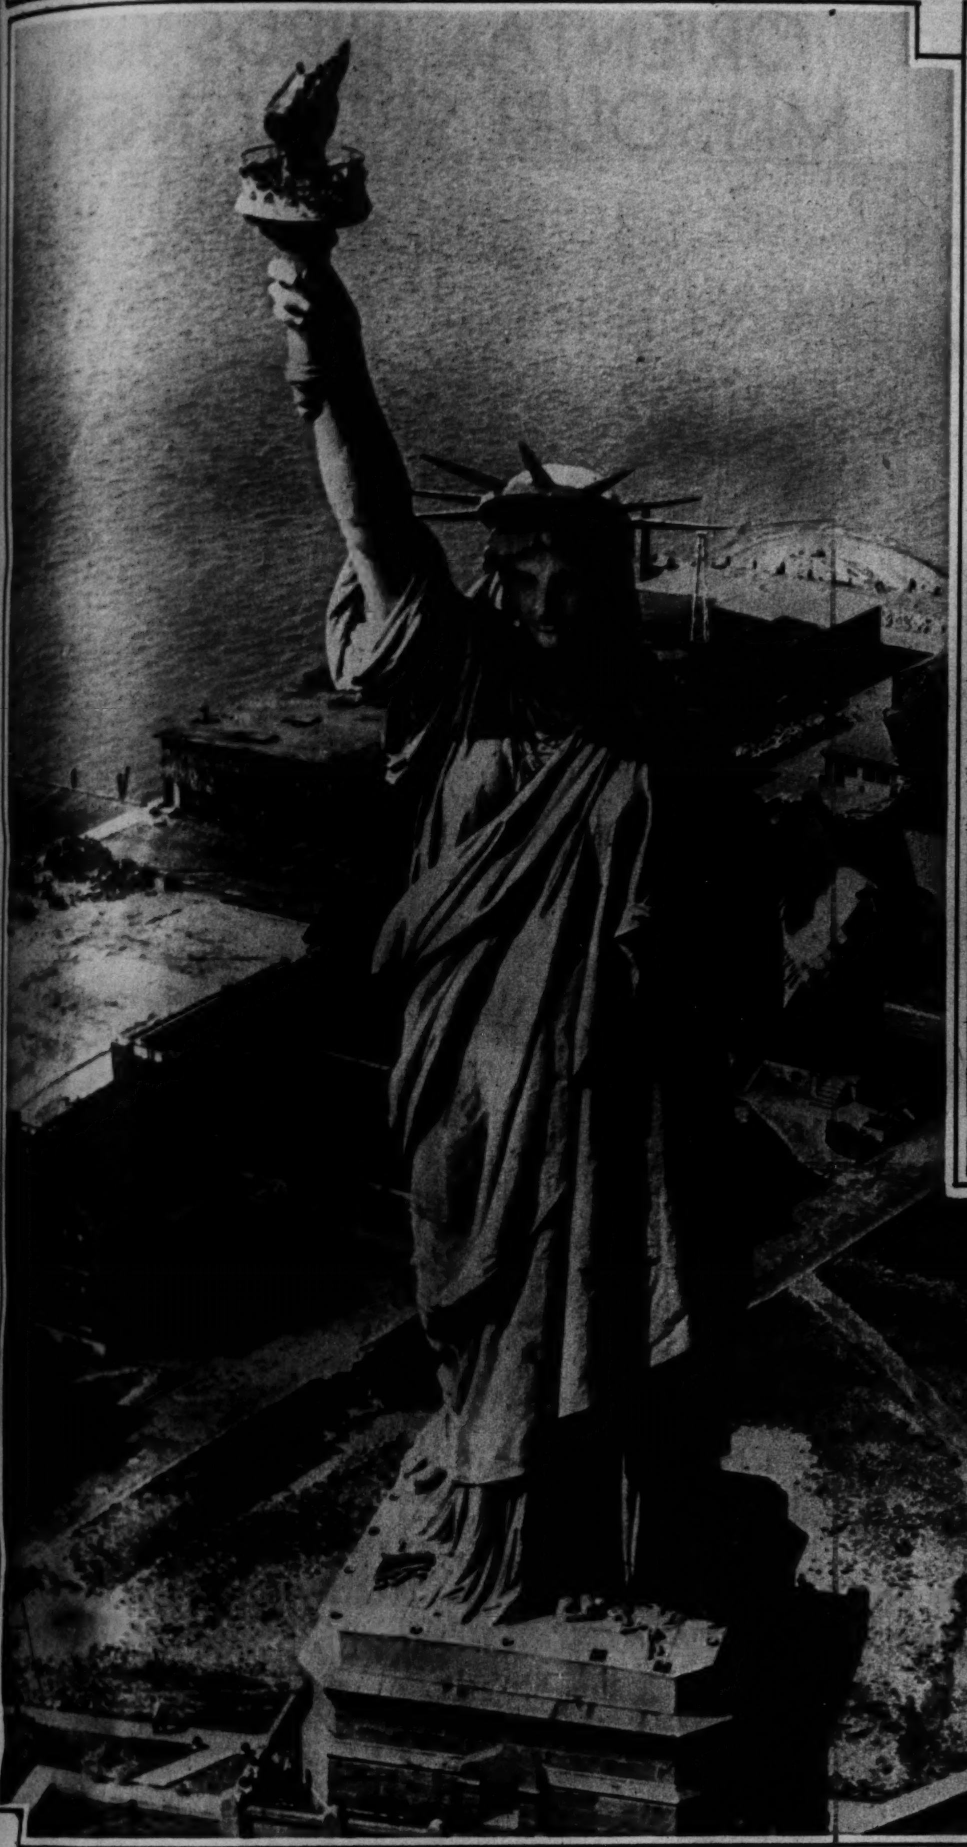
ANOTHER DIEGO RIVERA BOMBSHELL—Two more panels from the set Mexico's distinguished satirical painter has produced for the Hotel Reforma, Mexico City. Above: An American school teacher, two intellectual donkeys and Plutarcho Elias Calles (with snarl and golf clubs) march in allegorical parade. Below is a "composite dictator" with Mussolini's chin, Hitler's brows and mustache and President Roosevelt's smile. The paintings have aroused bitter controversy and the hotel considers removing them as an undue strain on the American tourist's sense of humor.





ACTION ON THE GUADARRAMA FRONT — The woods near San Rafael were alive with Spanish rebels as the photographer came up behind this Loyalist machine gun, defending the mountains above Madrid. Suddenly the gun jammed and hidden assailants tried to rush its crew. Firing was resumed unexpectedly and the two rebels caught by the camera were dropped by the machine gun an instant later.

PROSPERITY PANORAMA—The picturesque landscape shown here means boom times to Alberta (Canada) farmers, who will profit by drouth prices and excellent crops. They hope to net $14,000,000 above last year's harvest.



THE LADY FROM BALTIMORE AGAIN—When King Edward VIII visited Kemal Attaturk aboard the Turkish dictator's yacht off Moda, His Majesty was accompanied by Mrs. Ernest Simpson, shown beside Kemal.

She needs MUM

Do you know anybody who deserves this tag?

MEN avoid her. Girls refuse to bother with her.

"A careless, untidy person who is unpleasant to be with"—that's the way they think of the girl who carries the ugly odor of underarm perspiration on her person.

Too bad. For she misses so many good times — just because she doesn't know that the underarms need special daily care. Soap and water alone are not enough.

The modern girl knows the quick, easy way to give this care. Mum!

Half a minute is all you need to use Mum. Use it any time, before or after dressing. For Mum is harmless to clothing.

It's soothing to the skin, too. You can use it right after shaving the underarms. And remember that Mum prevents every trace of perspiration odor without affecting perspiration itself.

Don't label yourself as "the girl who needs Mum." Use it regularly and be safe! Bristol-Myers, Inc., 630 Fifth Ave., New York.

USE MUM ON SANITARY NAPKINS, TOO and you'll never have a moment's worry about this source of unpleasantness.

NOW I ASK YOU— WHY CAN'T I LAND A JOB LIKE THIS!
READ HOW A BAD CASE OF PIMPLES QUEERED ADA'S CHANCES — -UNTIL-IT JUST BURNS ME UP — WHY MOTHER, I KNOW I'M EVERY BIT AS GOOD AS LOTS OF THESE GIRLS THAT GET JOBS RIGHT OFF OH, THERE'S THE PHONE —
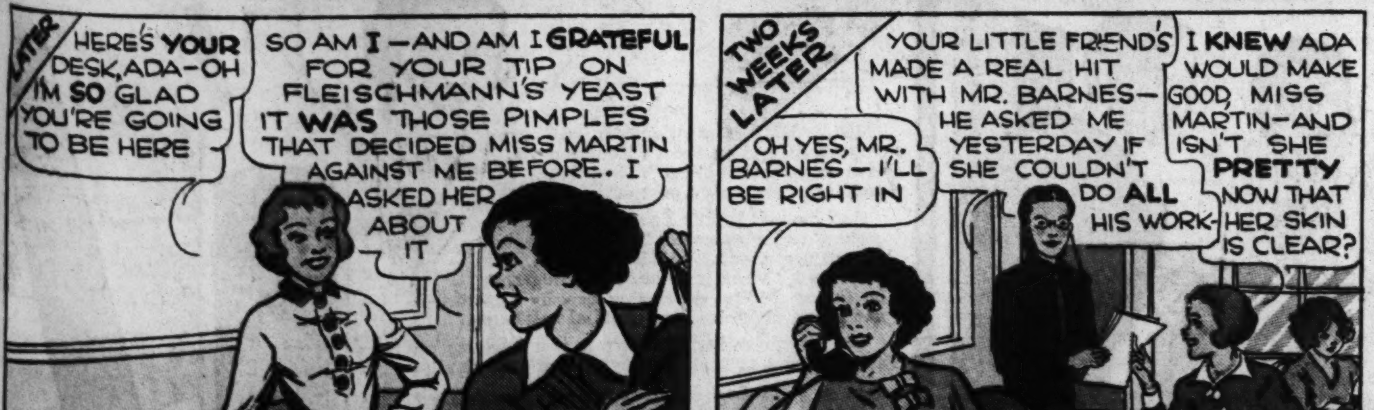
RIN-N-N-G RIN-
WANT ADS
HELLO-ADA? THIS IS GRACE. HAVE YOU FOUND A JOB YET — BECAUSE THERE'S ONE DOWN HERE I'M SURE YOU COULD FILL — I SPOKE TO MISS MARTIN AND SHE SAID TO COME IN AND TALK TO HER TOMORROW —
OH — GRACE — THAT WOULD BE GRAND — THANKS AWFULLY FOR THINKING OF ME
THE NEXT DAY
I'M TERRIBLY SORRY YOU DIDN'T GET IT, ADA — DID MISS MARTIN SAY WHY SHE DIDN'T THINK YOU'D DO?
NO - I JUST FELT I MADE A BAD IMPRESSION - GRACE, I WONDER - DO YOU THINK THESE PIMPLES COULD BE THE REASON?
WELL — THEY DO SHOW UP PRETTY BADLY. ADA, I KNOW WHAT TO DO — THEY SAY FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST IS WONDERFUL FOR GETTING RID OF PIMPLES. WHY DON'T YOU TRY IT?
OH GRACE — DO YOU THINK IT WOULD HELP ME? I'LL GET SOME ON MY WAY HOME



LATER
HERE'S YOUR DESK, ADA—OH I'M SO GLAD YOU'RE GOING TO BE HERE
SO AM I — AND AM I GRATEFUL FOR YOUR TIP ON FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST IT WAS THOSE PIMPLES THAT DECIDED MISS MARTIN AGAINST ME BEFORE. I ASKED HER ABOUT IT
TWO WEEKS LATER
OH YES, MR. BARNES — I'LL BE RIGHT IN YOUR LITTLE FRIEND'S MADE A REAL HIT WITH MR. BARNES— HE ASKED ME YESTERDAY IF SHE COULDN'T DO ALL HIS WORK
I KNEW ADA WOULD MAKE GOOD, MISS MARTIN—AND ISN'T SHE PRETTY NOW THAT HER SKIN IS CLEAR?

DON'T LET ADOLESCENT PIMPLES KEEP YOU OUT OF A JOB

A PIMPLY SKIN can easily spoil that good impression you hoped to make. Yet—pimples often occur after the start of adolescence—from about 13 to 25, or even longer. At this time, important glands develop and final growth takes place. The entire system is disturbed. The skin gets extra sensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin. Pimples break out.

Fleischmann's fresh Yeast helps to correct a pimply skin. It clears these skin irritants out of the blood. Then, the pimples vanish!

Eat 3 cakes a day—a cake about ½ hour before each meal. Eat it plain, or in a little water—until your skin is entirely clear again. Start today!

OLD SCOTTIE
JUMPIN' COD FISH! I SURE FIXED IT UP FOR THAT YOUNG 'UN!
SHIVER ME TIMBERS, JOHNNY. 'PEARS AS IF YE'D BEEN THROUGH A SQUALL. WHAT'S AILIN' YE?
AW, MA SAID I COULDN'T GO OUT FISHING WITH YOU, SATURDAY. SHE'S AFRAID SOMETHING MIGHT HAPPEN
JUMPIN' COD FISH SHE ORTER KNOW THAT NO YOUNG 'UN'S FIXIN' TO GET IN TROUBLE ON MY CRAFT, LAD
SHE THINKS JUST BECAUSE I'VE HAD A LOT OF COLDS, I MIGHT CATCH ANOTHER ONE
COLDS! WHY IN TARNATION DIDN'T YE SAY SO? LETS US HAVE A TALK WITH YOUR MA. MEBBE YOU AND ME COULD DO A LITTLE FISHIN' AFTER ALL GEE SCOTTIE! DO YOU THINK SO?
WE'RE SO WORRIED ABOUT JOHNNY. HE KEEPS CATCHING COLD AFTER COLD. MAYBE HE ISN'T GETTING THE VITAMINS HE NEEDS. I'D PUT HIM ON COD LIVER OIL BUT HE SAYS HE SIMPLY WON'T TAKE IT THEN, JUMPIN' COD FISH, WHY DON'T YOU GIVE THE LAD SCOTT'S EMULSION?
SCOTT'S EMULSION? IS THAT COD LIVER OIL?
IT'S MADE WITH SELECTED COD LIVER OIL. AND SCOTT'S EMULSION IS FIXED UP TO TASTE GOOD. SO IT'S A BUILDER-UPPER THAT EVEN PICKY, RUN-DOWN FOLKS—YOUNG 'UNS AND GROWN-UPS, TOO—DON'T MIND TAKING THAT SOUNDS GREAT, SCOTTY I'LL BET SCOTT'S EMULSION IS JUST WHAT JOHNNY NEEDS
YOU TRY IT—THERE'S A HEAP OF PEOPLE HERE WHO SWEAR IT'S GREAT, TOO, TO HELP BUILD FOLKS UP AGAINST COLDS
AND IT'S EMULSIFIED SO AS TO MAKE IT MORE THAN FOUR TIMES EASIER TO DIGEST THAN STRAIGHT COD LIVER OIL
I'LL GET A BOTTLE TODAY, SCOTTIE, AND I HOPE WE'LL SOON HAVE JOHNNY SO HE CAN GO OUT FISHING WITH YOU
ONE MONTH LATER
HE'S LIKE A NEW BOY. LOOK AT THOSE RED CHEEKS. SEE HOW MUCH HEFTIER HE IS. WE'RE NOT WORRIED ABOUT COLDS NOW
YEP—IT WAS CERTAINLY LUCKY FOR US THAT WE FOUND OUT ABOUT SCOTT'S EMULSION
I DEPEND ON SCOTT'S EMULSION TO HELP MY FAMILY FIGHT OFF COLDS
SCOTT'S EMULSION

THOUSANDS of men, women, and children depend on Scott's Emulsion as an extra source of the Vitamins A and D that help ward off colds.

And because Scott's Emulsion is more digestible and so pleasant tasting that it is easy to take regularly, it is surer than plain cod liver oil when it comes to putting flesh on skinny bodies, developing healthy appetites and aiding in maintaining physical well-being.

See for yourself what a help it is in building up strength and resistance for you and your family.

IF WE DON'T GET ALONG, NEITHER ONE OF US WILL GET TO PLAY AGAINST THE VARSITY, BUD
LISTEN, NED— I DON'T LIKE YOU— AND YOU CAN PUT THAT IN CAPITAL LETTERS!
AND TO ME YOU'RE— —! BUT THAT HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH IT—WE'VE BEEN WARNED ABOUT CARRYING OUR DISLIKES ON TO THE FOOTBALL FIELD!
PIPE DOWN— HERE COMES THE TRAINER, JAKE
OKAY, BUT IF I SAY ANYTHING NICE ABOUT YOU, IT DOESN'T COUNT!

INITIATED? I DON'T GET IT—
I MEAN YOU DON'T WEAR THAT HAT BECAUSE YOU WANT TO, DO YOU?
IF I WERE AS BRIGHT AS YOU ARE I'D GET A JOB LIGHTING AN AUDITORIUM!
ONCE AN ASTRONOMER TURNED HIS TELESCOPE ON ME AND ANNOUNCED A NEW STAR!
THINK WE'LL HAVE A CHANCE AGAINST THE VARSITY?
WE'LL BEAT THE PANTS OFF THEM!
YOU AREN'T FORGETTING ABOUT RED LIGHT AND THAT BIG FULLBACK, BLUDGEON?
KNOW WHAT I'LL DO TO THOSE DOPES?
B. W. DEPEW
I'LL GIVE 'EM THE OL' SHOULDER RIGHT WHERE THEY CAN'T TAKE IT!
WHAT'S THE IDEA OF KNOCKING ME DOWN?
MAYBE YOU'D LIKE TO MAKE SOMETHING OF IT!
I WOULD—AND HERE'S MY HAND ON IT!
If this "friendship" keeps growing Young Ned and Bud won't even play on the same team. Ned's got the best of it this time, but he can't be lucky forever!

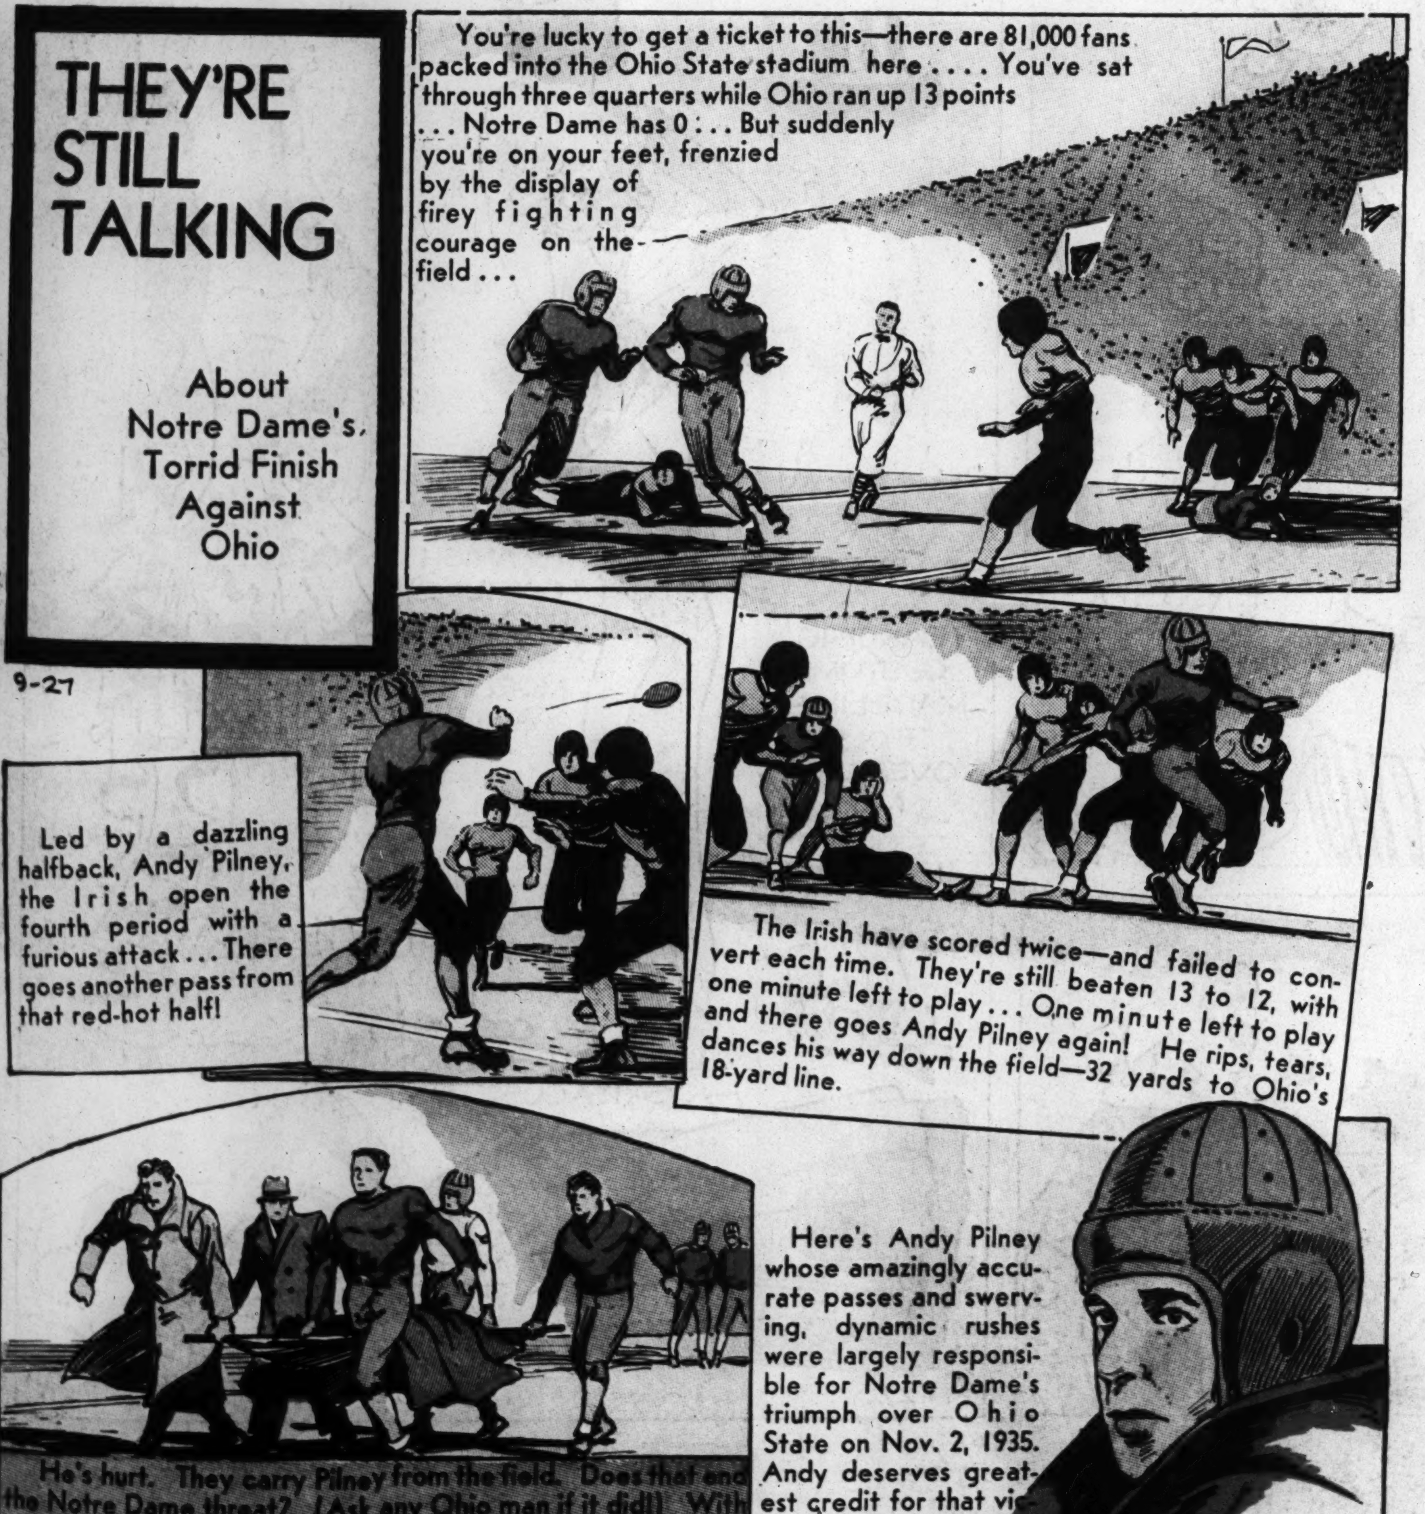
THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About Notre Dame's Torrid Finish Against Ohio



You're lucky to get a ticket to this—there are 81,000 fans packed into the Ohio State stadium here . . . . You've sat through three quarters while Ohio ran up 13 points . . . Notre Dame has 0 . . . But suddenly you're on your feet, frenzied by the display of firey fighting courage on the field . . .

Led by a dazzling halfback, Andy Pilney, the Irish open the fourth period with a furious attack . . . There goes another pass from that red-hot half!

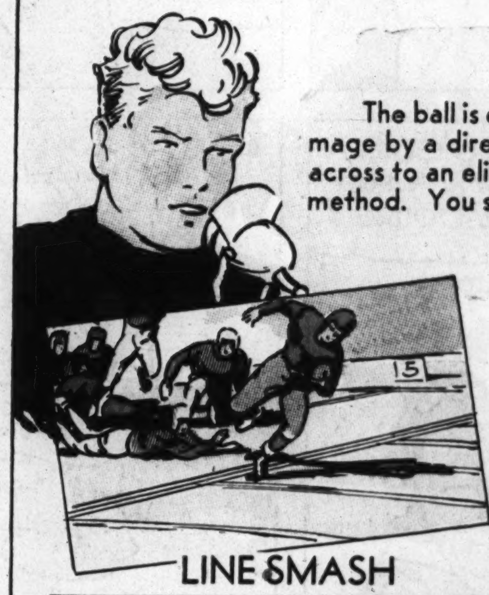
The Irish have scored twice—and failed to convert each time. They're still beaten 13 to 12, with one minute left to play . . . One minute left to play and there goes Andy Pilney again! He rips, tears, dances his way down the field—32 yards to Ohio's 18-yard line.

He's hurt. They carry Pilney from the field. Does that end the Notre Dame threat? (Ask any Ohio man if it did!) With Andy lying motionless on a stretcher, Shakespeare takes the ball, drops back, passes and lays that ball in Millner's arms—30 yards away and across the Ohio goal!

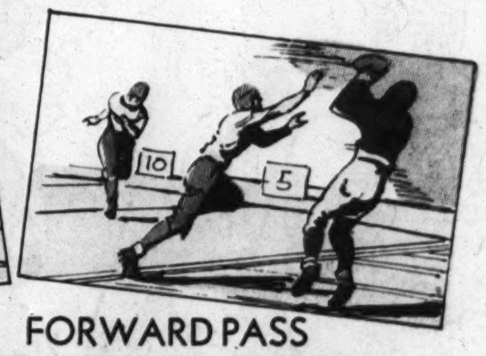
Here's Andy Pilney whose amazingly accurate passes and swerving, dynamic rushes were largely responsible for Notre Dame's triumph over Ohio State on Nov. 2, 1935. Andy deserves greatest credit for that victory, one of the greatest in the history of Notre Dame.

Football . . . . . . By NED BRANT

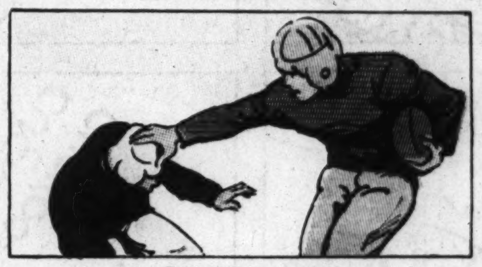
The ball is either carried across the line of scrimmage by a direct smash or sweeping run, or thrown across to an eligible receiver by the forward pass method. You see both maneuvers illustrated here.



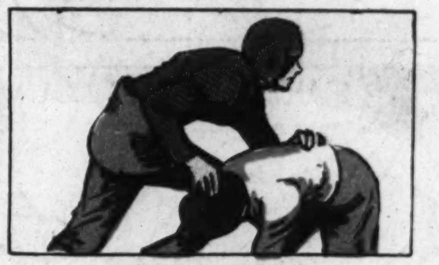
LINE SMASH



FORWARD PASS



STIFFARM



DEFENSIVE

The only player on the offensive team permitted to use his hands is the ball carrier, whose use of them is confined to the stiff-arm. All members of the defensive team can use their hands or arms to dispose of offensive men in getting at the ball carrier.

DISCOVERED! HOW TO MAKE A "NO-SCRUB" SOAP REALLY SAFE

New $1,000,000 Soap Discovery Soaks Out Dirt In 15 Minutes . . . Gets White Clothes 4 to 5 Shades Whiter

THIS new soap comes as a boon to thousands of housewives who feared to use fast-washing "no-scrub" soaps before.

For here, at last, is a safe soap that works without scrubbing or boiling. A soap that leaves your hands soft, white, and smooth . . . yet a soap that gets your white clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter without one bit of back-breaking drudgery!

Perfected by the makers of gentle Ivory soap, OXYDOL works on an utterly new principle. It is the result of a patented process which makes soap much faster-acting, yet keeps it safe . . . a formula that makes it 2 to 3 times whiter washing than less modern soaps, by actual test.

You soak clothes only 15 minutes to the tubful, and white clothes wash snowy white. Even the "tough" spots come clean with a gentle rub between the fingers. And you get through with your wash far sooner, because OXYDOL cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine.

You owe it to yourself to try this new safe "no-scrub" soap. You'll be astonished when you discover how fast it works, and yet how safe it is. Even sheer cotton prints, washed 100 consecutive times in OXYDOL suds, showed no perceptible sign of fading.

OXYDOL is economical, too. Tests show that it will go ⅓ to ½ again as far as even the most modern soap flakes on the market.

No wonder women everywhere are quitting old-type soaps for this remarkable new invention. Get OXYDOL from your dealer tomorrow.

Grateful Housewife Writes How Oxydol Saves Her Hands

"I actually don't know what I'd do without OXYDOL now. Because it's the first soap I've ever found that will get my clothes white and still is mild enough for my hands. My hands were in terrible shape from the other soap I'd been using, so I bought a package of OXYDOL and tried it. It's a fact that in less than 3 days my hands were smooth and soft. And you should see how white and lovely the clothes are. It's all due to OXYDOL, and I could not refrain from writing you and telling how grateful I am. I wish I could tell every woman what a remarkable soap it is."
